THEN[2] spake Elisha unto the woman, [a]whose son he had restored to life, saying, Arise, and go thou and thine household, and [b]sojourn wheresoever thou canst sojourn: for [c]the LORD hath [d]called for a famine; and it shall also come upon the land [e]seven years.

2 And the woman arose, and did after the saying of the man of God: and she went [f]with her household, and sojourned in [g]the land of the Philistines seven years.

3 And it came to pass, at the seven years' end, that the woman returned out of the land of the Philistines: and she[h] went forth to cry unto the king for her house, and for her land.

4 And the king talked with [i]Gehazi, the servant of the man of God, saying, Tell[k] me, I pray thee, [l]all the great things that Elisha hath done.

5 And it came to pass, as he was telling the king how [m]he had restored a dead body to life, that, [n]behold, the woman, whose son he had restored to life, cried to the king for her house, and for her land. And Gehazi said, My[o] lord, O king, this is the woman, and this is her son, whom Elisha restored to life.

6 And when the king asked the woman, she told him.[3] So the king appointed unto her a certain officer,[4] saying, [p]Restore all that was her's, and all the fruits of the field, since the day that she left the land, even until now.

7 ¶ And Elisha came to [q]Damascus; and [r]Ben-hadad the king of Syria was sick: and it was told him, saying, [s]The man of God [t]is come hither.

8 And the king said unto Hazael, Take[u] a present in thine hand, and go meet the man of God, and [v]enquire of the LORD by him, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

1 'The people being vehemently eager for food, thrust down this nobleman whilst he attempted to restrain them from rushing out to plunder the Syrian camp, so as to regulate the market, which was held at the gate, and supplied from the camp. Thus he was trodden to death, and the truth & justice of God were clearly seen.'—Scott.

CHAP. VIII.

A.M.3113. B.C.891.

2 We incline to the opinion which has been adopted by many commentators, that Elisha said this before the circumstances recorded in the two last chapters; and that now the woman's return after the restoration of plenty, affords occasion to mention the prediction which seven years before had induced her to leave her country. The famine in the city of Samaria which has just been recorded, would then seem to have been a result not merely of the siege but of the general dearth, and consequent distress.'—Kitto.

3 Yet he did not court the prophet's acquaintance, because he disliked his admonitions, & dreaded his rebukes. God, however, thus prepared his mind to do this pious woman justice; and his providence is especially to be noted in the singular coincidence of apparently casual events; from which important consequences often follow.

2 The textual reading of the Hebrew is, 'Thou shalt not recover,' but that of the margin, supported by many MSS., and the ancient Versions, is what our translators have adopted; and that it is correct is shown by ver. 14. The disease was not mortal, but through the means to be used, by Hazael, death would be the consequence.

4 The words are certainly ambiguous, and were perhaps meant to be so by the speaker. Addressed to an Israelite, he might wish them to convey the idea, 'Can you think me capable of committing so great wickedness?' But his real feeling might be one of doubt, how so insignificant a person as he then was, could ever have it in his power to perform so great exploits. The prophet read his mind, and answered that he would do these things in his public capacity as king of Syria.

9 So [w]Hazael went to meet him, and took a present with[1] him, even of every good thing of Damascus, forty camels' burden, and came and stood before him, and said, [x]Thy son Ben-hadad king of Syria hath sent me to thee, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

10 And Elisha said unto him, Go, say unto him, Thou mayest certainly recover:[2] howbeit [y]the LORD hath showed me that [z]he shall surely die.

11 And he settled his countenance [3]stedfastly, until he was ashamed; and the man of God [a]wept.

12 And Hazael said, Why weepeth [b]my lord? And he answered, Because I know [c]the evil that thou wilt do unto the children of Israel: their strongholds wilt thou set on fire, and their young men wilt thou slay with the sword, and wilt [d]dash their children, and rip up their women with child.

13 And Hazael said, But what! is thy servant [e]a dog, that [f]he should do this great thing?[4] And Elisha answered, [g]The LORD hath showed me that thou shalt be king over Syria.

14 So he departed from Elisha, and came to his master; who said to him, What said Elisha to thee? And he answered, [h]He told me that thou shouldest surely recover.

from under the hand of Judah, and made[u] a king over themselves.

21 So Joram went over to Zair, and all the chariots with him; and he rose by night, and smote the Edomites which compassed him about, and the captains of the chariots: and the people fled into their tents.

23 And [x]the rest of the acts of Joram, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the chronicles of the kings of Judah?

24 And Joram [y]slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David: and [z]Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead.

25 ¶ In the [a]twelfth year of Joram[1] the son of Ahab king of Israel, did Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah begin to reign.

26 [b]Two and twenty years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign; and he reigned [c]one year in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was [d]Athaliah, the daughter[2] of Omri king of Israel.

27 And [e]he walked in the way of the house of Ahab, and did evil in the sight of the LORD, as did the house of Ahab: for he was [f]the son-in-law of the house of Ahab.

28 ¶ And [g]he went with Joram the son of Ahab to the war against [h]Hazael king of Syria in [i]Ramoth-gilead; and the Syrians wounded Joram.

29 And king [k]Joram went back to be healed in Jezreel[3] of the wounds which[4] the Syrians had given him at Ramah,[5] when he fought against Hazael king of Syria: and [l]Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down to see Joram the son of Ahab in Jezreel, because he was sick.[6]

7 Elijah many years before (1 Ki. 20. 35,) had been commissioned to anoint Jehu as head of a new dynasty, appointed by God to reign over Israel, and to execute vengeance on the family and adherents of Ahab. But a respite having been granted to that prince, when he externally humbled himself before God, the anointing of Jehu was deferred likewise; so that this service fell on Elisha as Elijah's successor. But it required secrecy, & it was not proper he should perform it in person, seeing that one of the sons of the prophets, who was little known, might have a far better opportunity of escaping if suspected by Joram's friends.

2 'Probably there were peculiarities in the young prophet's manner and address, which made the captains conclude that he was one of the 'sons of the prophets,' and speak of him in this language; and some reference might be had to that vehement action which the prophets sometimes used when influenced by the spirit of prophecy; but it seems rather from profane contempt of religion, as these captains were generally idolaters. Indeed, without excepting Him who spake as never man spake, those who have faithfully delivered the Lord's message to sinners, have in all ages been treated as madmen.'—Scott.

3 Perhaps Jehu meant that the captains knew the man to be a prophet; and must suppose he came to admonish and instruct him: or, he might intend to evade the question, as if the prophet's errand had nothing peculiar in it; or he really suspected that he acted in concert with them, & that they were previously acquainted with his object.

4 'To give the lie in the East is not considered offensive; and the natives are astonished at the indignation of Europeans at having their assertions questioned. This is particularly the case in Persia, where a king upon his throne, without intending to give offence, has been known in a very quiet way, to ask a British ambassador, 'Is not that a lie that you are telling?'—Kitto.

2 And when thou comest thither, look out there [e]Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat, the son of Nimshi, and go in, and make him rise up from [f]among his brethren, and carry him to an [1]inner chamber;

3 Then take the box of oil, and [g]pour it on his head, and say, Thus saith the LORD, [h]I have anointed thee king over Israel: then open the door, [i]and flee, and tarry not.

4 ¶ So the young man, even the young man the prophet, went to Ramoth-gilead.

5 And when he came, behold, the captains of the host were sitting; and he said, [k]I have an errand to thee, O captain. And Jehu said, Unto which of all us? And he said, To thee, O captain.

6 And [l]he arose, and went into the house; and he poured the oil on his head, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [m]I have anointed thee king [n]over the people of the LORD, even over Israel.

7 And thou shalt smite the house of Ahab thy master, that [o]I may avenge the blood of my servants the prophets, and the blood of all the servants of the LORD, [p]at the hand of Jezebel.

8 For the whole house of Ahab shall perish: and [q]I will cut off from Ahab him that pisseth against the wall, and [r]him that is shut up and left in Israel.

9 And I will make the house of Ahab [s]like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and like [t]the house of Baasha the son of Ahijah.

10 And [u]the dogs shall eat Jezebel in the portion of Jezreel, and there shall be none to bury her. And [v]he opened the door, and fled.

11 ¶ Then Jehu came forth to the servants of his lord: and one said unto him, [w]Is all well? wherefore came this [x]mad fellow[2] to thee? And he said unto them, Ye know the man, and his communication.[3]

12 And they said, It is false;[4] tell us now. And he said, [y]Thus and thus spake he to me, saying, Thus saith the LORD, I have anointed thee king over Israel.

13 Then they hasted, [z]and took every man his garment,[1] and put it under him on the top of the stairs,[2] and blew[a] with trumpets, saying, Jehu is king.[3]

14 So Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat, the son of Nimshi, [b]conspired against Joram; (now Joram had [c]kept Ramoth-gilead, he and all Israel, because of Hazael king of Syria:

15 But king Joram[4] was [d]returned to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds which the Syrians had given[5] him, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria;) And Jehu said, If it be your minds, then let none[6] go forth nor escape out of the city to go to tell it in Jezreel.

16 ¶ So Jehu rode in a chariot, and went to Jezreel; (for Joram lay there.) And [e]Ahaziah king of Judah was come down to see Joram.[7]

17 And there stood [f]a watchman on the tower in Jezreel, and he spied the [g]company of Jehu as he came, and said, I see a company.[8] And Joram said, Take[g] an horseman, and send to meet them, and let him say, [h]Is it peace?

18 So there went one on horseback to meet him, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu said, What[i] hast thou to do with peace?[9] turn thee behind me. And the watchman told, saying, The messenger came to them, but he cometh not again.

19 Then he sent out a second on horseback, which came to them, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu answered, What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me.

20 And the watchman told, saying, He came even unto them, and cometh not again: and the driving[10] is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nimshi; [k]for he driveth furiously.[11]

21 And Joram said, Make[12] ready. And his chariot was made ready. And Joram[l] king of Israel, and Ahaziah king of Judah, went out, each in his chariot, and they went out against Jehu, and met[13] him in [m]the portion of Naboth the Jezreelite.

22 And it came to pass, when Joram saw Jehu, that he said, [n]Is it peace, Jehu? And he answered, [o]What peace, so long as [p]the whoredoms of thy mother Jezebel, and her witchcrafts,[1] are so many?

23 And Joram turned his hands,[2] and fled, and said to Ahaziah, [q]There is treachery, O Ahaziah!

24 ¶ And Jehu drew[3] a bow with his full strength, and [r]smote Jehoram between his arms,[4] and the arrow went out at his heart, and he sunk[5] down in his chariot.

25 Then said Jehu to Bidkar his captain, Take up, and cast him in the portion of the field of Naboth the Jezreelite: for remember how that, when I and thou rode together after Ahab his father, [s]the LORD laid this [6]burden upon him;

26 Surely I have seen yesterday the blood[7] of Naboth, and the blood [t]of his sons, saith the LORD; and [u]I will requite thee in this plat,[8] saith the LORD. Now therefore take and cast him into the plat of ground, according to the word of the LORD.

27 ¶ But when [v]Ahaziah the king of Judah saw this, he fled by the way of the [w]garden-house; and Jehu followed after him, and said, Smite him also in the chariot. And they did so at the going up to Gur, which is by [x]Ibleam: and he fled to [y]Megiddo, and died [9]there.

28 And [z]his servants carried him in a chariot to Jerusalem, and buried him in his sepulchre with his fathers in the city of David.

29 And [a]in the eleventh year of Joram the son of Ahab began Ahaziah to reign over Judah.

30 ¶ And when Jehu was come to Jezreel, [b]Jezebel heard of it; and she painted[10] her face, and [c]tired her head, and looked out at a window.

31 And as Jehu entered in at the gate, she said, Had [d]Zimri [e]peace, who slew his master?

32 And he lifted up his face to the window, and said, [f]Who is on my side? who? And there looked out to him two or three eunuchs.[11]

33 And he said, [g]Throw her down. So they threw her down: and some of her blood was sprinkled on the wall, and on the horses; [h]and he trode her under foot.[12]

35 And they went to bury her; [m]but they found no more of her than the scull, and the feet, and the palms of her hands.[1]

36 Wherefore they came again, and told him: and he said, [n]This is the word of the LORD, which he spake by[2] his servant Elijah the Tishbite, saying, In the portion of Jezreel shall dogs eat the flesh of Jezebel:

CHAPTER X.

Jehu, by his letters, causeth seventy of Ahab's children to be beheaded, 1—7. He excuseth the fact by the prophecy of Elijah, 8—11. At the shearing-house he slayeth two and forty of Ahaziah's brethren, 12—14. He taketh Jehonadab into his company, 15—17. By subtilty he destroyeth at once all the worshippers of Baal, 18—28. Jehu followeth Jeroboam's sins, 29—31. Hazael oppresseth Israel, 32, 33. Jehoahaz succeedeth Jehu, 34—36.

AND Ahab had [a]seventy sons [b]in Samaria. And Jehu wrote letters, and sent to Samaria, unto [c]the rulers of Jezreel,[4] to the elders, and to them[5] that brought up[6] Ahab's children, saying,

2 Now, [d]as soon as this letter cometh to you,[7] seeing your master's sons are with you, and there are with you chariots and horses, a fenced city also, and armour;

3 [e]Look even out the best and meetest of your master's sons, and set him on his father's throne, and [f]fight for your master's house.[8]

4 But they were exceedingly afraid, and said, [g]Behold, two kings stood not before him; [h]how then shall we stand?

5 And he that was over the house, and he that was over the city, the elders also, and the bringers up of the children, sent to Jehu, saying, [i]We are thy servants, and will do all that thou shalt bid us;[9] we will not make any king: do thou that which is good in thine eyes.

6 Then he wrote a letter the second time to them, saying, If ye be mine,[10] and if ye will hearken unto my voice, take[k] ye the heads of the men [l]your master's sons, and come to me to Jezreel by to-morrow this time. (Now the king's sons, being seventy persons, were with the great men of the ci which brought them up.)

7 And it came to pass, when letter came to them, that they took king's sons, and [m]slew seventy perso and put their heads in baskets, sent him them to Jezreel.

8 ¶ And [n]there came a messen and told him, saying, They h brought the heads of the king's s And he said, Lay ye them in two he at the entering in of the gate[1] [o]until morning.

9 And it came to pass in the m ing, that he went out, and stood, said to all the people, [p]Ye be rig ous: behold, [q]I conspired against master, and slew him; but who slev these?

11 So Jehu slew all that rema of the house of Ahab in Jezreel, all his great men, and his kinsfolks, [t]his priests, until [u]he left him remaining.

12 ¶ And he arose and departed came to Samaria: and as he was a shearing-house[4] in the way,

13 Jehu met[5] with [v]the brethr Ahaziah king of Judah, and Who are ye? And they answered are the brethren of Ahaziah; an go down to salute[6] the children[7] o king, and the children of the que and see my zeal[1] for the LORD. So they made him ride in his chariot.[2]

17 And when he came to Samaria, he slew all that remained unto Ahab[3] in Samaria, [e]till he had destroyed him, [f]according to the saying of the LORD, which he spake to Elijah.

18 ¶ And Jehu gathered all the people together, and said unto them, Ahab[g] served Baal a little,[4] but [h]Jehu shall serve him much.

19 Now therefore call unto me [i]all the prophets of Baal, [k]all his servants, and [l]all his priests, let none be wanting; for I have a great sacrifice to do to Baal: whosoever shall be wanting, he shall not live. [m]But Jehu did it in subtilty, to the intent that he might destroy the worshippers of Baal.

20 And Jehu said, Proclaim[5] a solemn assembly for Baal. And they proclaimed it.

21 And Jehu sent through all Israel; and all the worshippers of Baal came, so that there was not a man left that came not. [n]And they came into the[o] house of Baal; and the house of Baal [p]was full[6] from one end to another.

22 And he said unto him that was over the vestry, Bring forth [q]vestments for all the worshippers of Baal. And he brought them forth vestments.

23 And Jehu went, and Jehonadab the son of Rechab, into the house of Baal, and said unto the worshippers of Baal, Search, and look that there be here with you none of the servants of the LORD, but the worshippers of Baal only.

24 And when they went in to offer sacrifices and burnt-offerings, Jehu appointed fourscore men without, and said, [r]If any of the men whom I have brought into your hands escape, he that letteth him go, his life shall be for the life of him.

25 And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt-offering, that Jehu said to the guard, and to the captains, [s]Go in and slay them; [t]let none come forth. And they smote them with the edge[7] of the sword; and the guard and the captains cast them out, and went to the city[8] of the house of Baal.

1 'O thou ostentatious and murderous hypocrite! Thou have zeal for the Lord and his pure religion! witness thy calves at Dan and Bethel, and the general profligacy of thy conduct.'—Clarke. 'The zeal he pretended for the Lord, was really zeal for himself & his own advancement. For, 1st. He boasted of it, and spake as if God and man were indebted to him for it. 2d. He desired it might be noticed, like the pharisees who did all to be seen of men.'—Henry.

2 Jehonadab was held in high esteem among the people; and hence Jehu, with his usual tact, perceived the advantage which the countenance of this person might be to his cause, and prevailed with him to sit with him in his chariot, that they might be publicly seen to enter Samaria together. Yet had he really desired to effect a reform in religion, he would have sent for Elisha to counsel him and concur with him; and his neglect of that was no favourable sign of his real motives and designs.

3 It is generally supposed that he slew the traitorous rulers and elders also. 'Many love the treachery who despise or detest the traitors; and none, when their purpose is answered, afterwards trust them.'

8 And ye shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand: and [t]he that cometh within the ranges, let him be slain; and be ye with the king as he goeth out, and as he cometh in.

9 And [u]the captains over the hundreds did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest commanded; and they took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that should go out on the sabbath, and came to Jehoiada the priest.

10 And to the captains over hundreds did the priest give [v]king David's spears[7] and shields, that were in the temple of the LORD.

11 And the guard stood, [w]every man with his weapons in his hand, round about the king, from the right corner[8] of the temple, to the left corner of the temple, along [x]by the altar and the temple.

CHAPTER XII.

Jehoash reigneth well all the days of Jehoiada, 1—3. He giveth order for the repair of the temple, 4—16. Hazael is diverted from his design against Jerusalem by a present of the hallowed treasures, 17, 18. Jehoash being slain by his servants, Amaziah succeedeth him, 19—21.

A.M.3126.B.C.878.

IN [a]the seventh year of Jehu, [b]Jehoash began to reign; and forty years reigned he in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Zibiah of Beer-sheba.

2 And [c]Jehoash did that which was right in the sight of the LORD all his days wherein Jehoiada the priest instructed him.[1]

3 But [d]the high places were not taken away;[2] the people still sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places.

4 ¶ And Jehoash [e]said to the priests, All [f]the money of the dedicated[3] things that is brought into the house of the LORD, even [g]the money of every one that passeth the account, the money that[4] every man is set at, [h]and all the money that cometh[5] into any man's heart to bring into the house of the LORD,

5 Let [i]the priests take it to them, every man of his acquaintance; and let[k] them repair the breaches[6] of the house, wheresoever any breach shall be found.

6 But it was so, that in the [7]three and twentieth year of king Jehoash [l]the priests had not repaired the breaches of the house.

7 Then [m]king Jehoash called for Jehoiada[n] the priest, and the other priests, and said unto them, [o]Why repair ye not the breaches of the house? Now therefore receive no more money of your acquaintance, but deliver it for the breaches of the house.

8 And the priests consented to receive no more money of the people, neither to repair the breaches of the house.

9 But Jehoiada the priest [p]took a chest, and bored a hole in the lid of it, and set it [q]beside the altar, on the right side as one cometh into the house of the LORD: and [r]the priest that kept the door[8] put therein all the money that was brought into the house of the LORD.

10 And it was so, when they saw that there was much money in the chest, that [s]the king's scribe[9] and the high priest came up, and they put[1] up in bags,[2] and told the money that was found in the house of the LORD.

11 And they [t]gave the money, being told, into the hands of them that did the work, that had the oversight of the house of the LORD: and they laid[3] it out to the carpenters and builders that wrought upon the house of the LORD,

12 And to [u]masons, and hewers of stone, and to buy timber and hewed stone to repair the breaches of the house of the LORD, and for all that [4]was laid out for the house to repair it.

13 Howbeit [v]there were not made for the house of the LORD [w]bowls[5] of silver, snuffers, basons, [x]trumpets, any vessels of gold, or vessels of silver, of the money that was brought into the house of the LORD:

14 But they gave that to the workmen, and repaired therewith the house of the LORD.

15 Moreover [y]they reckoned not with the men into whose hand they delivered the money to be bestowed on workmen: [z]for they dealt faithfully.[6]

16 The [a]trespass-money and sin-money was not brought into the house of the LORD: it was the priests'.[7]

17 ¶ Then [b]Hazael[8] king of Syria went up, and fought [c]against Gath, and took it: and Hazael [d]set his face [e]to go up to Jerusalem.

18 And Jehoash king of Judah [f]took all the hallowed things that Jehoshaphat, and Jehoram, and Ahaziah, his fathers, kings of Judah, had dedicated, and his own hallowed things,[9] and all the gold that was found in the treasures of the house of the LORD, and in the king's house, and sent it to Hazael king of Syria; and he went away[10] from Jerusalem.

19 ¶ And [g]the rest of the acts of Joash, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

20 And [h]his servants arose, and made a conspiracy, and slew Joash in the house[11] of Millo, which goeth down to Silla.[12]

21 For [i]Jozachar the son of Shemeath, and Jehozabad the son of [k]Shomer,[13] his servants, smote him, and 9 He dearly bought a peace which was of short duration; for the next year Hazael returned, and Jehoash having no more treasures, was obliged to hazard a battle, which he lost, (along with the principal part of his nobility,) so that Judah was totally ruined, and Jehoash, shortly after, slain in his bed by his own servants.

CHAPTER XIII.

Jehoahaz's wicked reign, 1, 2. Jehoahaz, oppressed by Hazael, is relieved by prayer, 3—7. Joash succeedeth him, 8—9. His wicked reign, 10, 11. Jeroboam succeedeth him, 12, 13. Elisha dying prophesieth to Joash three victories over the Syrians, 14—19. The Moabites invading the land, Elisha's bones raise up a dead man, 20, 21. Hazael dying, Joash getteth three victories over Ben-hadad, 22—25.

IN the three[2] and twentieth year[3] of Joash the son of Ahaziah king of Judah, [a]Jehoahaz the son of Jehu began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned seventeen years.

2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, [b]and followed[4] the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, which made Israel to sin; he departed not therefrom.

3 ¶ And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel; [c]and he delivered them into the hand of [d]Hazael king of Syria, and into the hand of Ben-hadad[e] the son of Hazael, all their days.

4 And [f]Jehoahaz besought the LORD, and [g]the LORD hearkened unto him; for [h]he saw the oppression of Israel, 'because the king of Syria oppressed them.[5]

5 (And the LORD gave Israel [k]a saviour,[6] so that they went out from under the hand of the Syrians; and the children of Israel dwelt in their tents, as beforetime.[7]

6 Nevertheless they [l]departed not from the sins of the house of Jeroboam, who made Israel sin, but walked[8] therein: [m]and there remained[9] the grove also in Samaria.)

7 Neither did he leave of the people to Jehoahaz but [n]fifty horsemen, and ten chariots, and ten thousand footmen; for [o]the king of Syria had destroyed them, and had made them [p]like the dust by threshing.

8 ¶ Now [q]the rest of the acts of Jehoahaz, and all that he did, and his might, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

9 And Jehoahaz slept with his fathers; and they [r]buried him in Samaria: and [s]Joash his son reigned[10] in his stead.

3 'As sons frequently reigned with their fathers during the Hebrew monarchy, their reigns are made, in some instances, to commence from their partnership with their fathers in the throne, and in others from the commencement of their governing alone, after their father's decease. Thus we read here that Jehoahaz of Israel began to reign in the twenty-third year of Joash of Judah, and in ver. 10. we read it was in the thirty-seventh of Joash that Jehoash of Israel began to reign, tho' his father Jehoahaz reigned seventeen years, which would make it about the fortieth of Joash. This is explained by supposing his father admitted him to the government two or three years before his death.'—T. H. Horne.

6 The shooting with the arrows intimated simply the overthrow of the Syrians; the smiting on the ground was an emblem of trampling them in the dust, as they had trampled on the Israelites, ver. 7. Joash could not be ignorant of the meaning of the symbol, and, by not striking often enough, he gave proofs of his sad lukewarmness, & his want of faith and courage to improve the promised advantage. Do not we, alas! too much resemble him? We sit down satisfied with low desires and poor attainments; if we obtain some victory over our spiritual enemies, we do not pursue it to the utmost with persevering vigour; because 'faint,' we do not 'pursue.' How different would have been our character this day had we always put forth promised strength to perform duty and to resist sin.

14 ¶ Now Elisha was [z]fallen sick his sickness whereof [a]he died. A Joash the king of Israel came do unto him, and wept over his face, a said, [b]O my father, my father! chariot of Israel, and the horsem thereof!

15 And Elisha said unto him, T bow and arrows: and he took u him bow and arrows.

16 And he said to the king of Isr Put[4] thine hand upon the bow: and put his hand upon it; and [c]Elisha his hands upon the king's hands.

Moabites invaded the land at the coming in of the year.[1]

21 And it came to pass, as they were burying a man, that, behold, they spied a band of men; and they cast the man into the sepulchre of Elisha:[2] and when the man was let down,[3] and [p]touched the bones of Elisha, he revived, and stood up on his feet.

22 ¶ But [q]Hazael king of Syria oppressed Israel all the days of Jehoahaz.

23 And [r]the LORD was gracious unto them, and had compassion on them, and [s]had respect unto them, [t]because of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and would not destroy them, [u]neither cast he them from his presence[4] as yet.

24 So [v]Hazael king of Syria died; and Ben-hadad his son reigned in his stead.

25 And Jehoash the son of Jehoahaz took again,[5] out of the hand of Ben-hadad the son of Hazael, the cities which he had taken out of the hand of Jehoahaz his father by war: [w]three times[6] did Joash beat him, and recovered the cities of Israel.

CHAPTER XIV.

Amaziah's good reign, 1—4. His justice on the murderers of his father, 5, 6. His victory over Edom, 7. Amaziah, provoking Jehoash, is overcome and spoiled, 8—14. Jeroboam succeedeth Jehoash, 15, 16. Amaziah is slain by a conspiracy, 17—20. Azariah succeedeth him, 21, 22. Jeroboam's wicked reign, 23—27. Zachariah succeedeth him, 28, 29.

IN the second year of [a]Joash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel, [b]reigned Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah.

2 He was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

3 And [c]he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, yet not like David his father; [d]he did according to all things as Joash his father did.[7]

4 Howbeit [e]the high places were not taken away; as yet the people did sacrifice and burnt incense on the high places.

5 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as the kingdom was confirmed in his hand, [f]that he slew [g]his servants which had slain the king his father.

A.M.3165. B.C.839.

1 'Here we see the Moabites did not come in a large army, but in particular bands, to pillage and alarm; and it shows us in how undefended a state, at this period, the country must have been. But what has this to do with the death and burial of Elisha? The one is mentioned in connection with the other; and has a reference to the exclamation the king made in the prophet's dying chamber (ver.14.) "O my father, my father, the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof." And "see," would the historian say: "see how soon this began to be exemplified."' —Jay.

2 Through fear of the marauding party they hastily threw the dead body into the sepulchre of Elisha, and as soon as it touched the prophet's bones it revived; not that any virtue resided in the relics of the saint, but the miracle proceeded from the vivifying power of God. Thus Jehovah was glorified in the sight of the heathen, the faith of the Israelites was strengthened for the coming conflict, and a proof and pledge given of a resurrection of the dead, when by a virtue issuing from the body of the Saviour, the dust of his saints shall be gathered and glorified.

But if Selah here be Petra (as is now generally admitted) the former is the true locality.

3 Selah signifies a rock. It was afterwards called Petra, and became the capital of Arabia Petræa. The remains of it have been visited by modern travellers. Most of the habitations were excavations in the rock, and hence its name.

7 ¶ He [i]slew of Edom in [k]the valley of Salt[2] ten thousand, and took [3]Selah by war, and called the name of it [l]Joktheel[4] unto this day.

8 ¶ Then [m]Amaziah sent messengers to Jehoash, the son of Jehoahaz, son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, [n]Come, let us look one another in the face.[5]

9 And Jehoash the king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, [o]The thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and there passed by a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thistle.[6]

10 Thou hast indeed smitten Edom, and [p]thine heart hath lifted thee up: [q]glory of this, and tarry at home;[7] for [r]why shouldest thou meddle to thy hurt, that thou shouldest fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

26 For the LORD [u]saw the affliction of Israel, that it was very bitter: for there was [v]not any shut up, nor any left,[2] nor any helper for Israel.

27 And the LORD [w]said not that he would [x]blot out[3] the name of Israel from under heaven: but [y]he saved them by the hand of Jeroboam the son of Joash.

29 And Jeroboam slept with his fathers, even with the kings of Israel, and [b]Zachariah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XV.

Azariah's good reign, 1—4. He dying a leper, Jotham succeeds him, 5—7. Zachariah, the last of Jehu's generation, reigns and is slain by Shallum, 8—12. Shallum, reigning a month, is slain by Menahem, 13—15. Menahem strengtheneth himself by tyranny, 16—20. Pekahiah succeedeth him, 21, 22. Pekahiah is slain by Pekah, 23—26. Pekah is oppressed by Tiglath-pileser, and slain by Hoshea, 27—31. Jotham's good reign, 32—35. Ahaz succeeds him, 36—38.

IN [a]the twenty and seventh[1] year of Jeroboam king of Israel began Azariah[2] son of Amaziah king of Judah to reign.

2 [b]Sixteen years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned two and fifty[3] years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Jecholiah of Jerusalem.

3 And [c]he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Amaziah had done:

4 Save that [d]the high places were not removed: the people sacrificed and burnt incense still on the high places.

5 ¶ And [e]the LORD smote the king, [f]so that he was a leper unto the day of his death, [g]and dwelt in a several house:[4] and [h]Jotham the king's son was over the house, [i]judging the people of the land.

6 And the rest of the acts of Azariah, and all that he did, are [k]they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

7 So [l]Azariah slept with his fathers; and they buried him with his fathers in the city of David: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

8 ¶ In [m]the thirty and eighth[5] year of Azariah king of Judah did [n]Zachariah the son of Jeroboam reign over Israel in Samaria six months.

9 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, [o]as his fathers had done: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

1 This was Jeroboam II.; his was the longest reign of any king of Israel, (41 years,) & it was also the most prosperous. Joel, Amos, and Hosea, lived at the same time, predicting the calamities of the Jews, the blessings of their restoration, the judgments upon their enemies, and other subjects of high nature. These prophets commenced their office by predicting three fearful judgments. 1st. The earthquake which took place in the reign of Uzziah and Jeroboam II. was foretold by Amos, ch. 1. 1, two years before it happened. The 2nd was of the locusts, caterpillars and canker-worm, Joel ch. i. Amos ch. vii. The 3d was a marvellous drought, accompanied by fearful fire from heaven, Joel 1. 19; Hos. 4. 7.

CHAP. XV.

A.M.3194. B.C.810.

[a] ver. 8; ch. 14. 16, 17.

1 Uzziah was but five years old at his father's death, yet the Jews did not give their allegiance to an infant, but waited till he was sixteen years old before they called him to the throne. 'This accounts for the length of the interregnum in Judah. Amaziah was slain fifteen years current after the death of Jehoahaz king of Israel, (ch. 14. 17,) or 14 years complete from the accession of Jeroboam II. his son; and Uzziah did not begin to reign till the 25th of Jeroboam, (and not the 27th,) which gives the length of the interregnum, eleven years complete.'—Hales.

2 Dr Kennicott complains of the corruption in the name of this king of Judah, which is expressed in four different ways in this chapter: Ozriah, Ozah, Ozrihu, and Ozihu. But the oldest Hebrew MS. reads here & in ver. 6, 7, Uzziah, which is supported by the Syriac and Arabic versions, by the parallel place in Chronicles, by Josephus, & by St Matthew's genealogy, where it is Ozias, not Azarias. This is also the reading at ver. 32, 34, of the present chapter.

3 The long reign of Uzziah must be considered as having been very advantageous to Judah, when contrasted with the state of Israel during the same period.

11 And [r]the rest of the acts of Zachariah, behold, they are written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.

12 This was [s]the word of the LORD which he spake unto Jehu, saying, Thy[t] sons shall sit on the throne of Israel unto the fourth generation.[3] [u]And so it came to pass.

13 ¶ Shallum the son of Jabesh began to reign in the nine and thirtieth year of [v]Uzziah king of Judah; and he reigned a full[4] [w]month in Samaria.

14 For Menahem the son of Gadi went up from [x]Tirzah, and came to Samaria, [y]and smote Shallum the son of Jabesh in Samaria,[5] and slew him, and reigned in his stead.

15 And [z]the rest of the acts of Shallum, and his conspiracy which he made, behold, they are written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.

16 ¶ Then Menahem smote [a]Tiphsah, and all that were therein, and the coasts thereof from Tirzah: because they opened not to him, therefore he smote it; and [b]all the women therein that were with child he ripped up.

17 In [c]the nine and thirtieth year of Azariah king of Judah began Menahem the son of Gadi to reign over Israel, and reigned ten years in Samaria.

18 And he did that which was [d]evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not all his days from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

19 And [e]Pul[6] the king of Assyria came against the land: and [f]Menahem gave Pul a thousand talents of silver, that his hand might be with him [g]to confirm the kingdom in his hand.

20 And [h]Menahem exacted[7] the money of Israel, even of all [i]the mighty men of wealth, of each man fifty shekels of silver,[8] to give to the king of Assyria: so the king of Assyria turned back, and [k]stayed not there in the land.

21 ¶ And [l]the rest of the acts of Menahem, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

22 And Menahem slept with his fathers; and Pekahiah his son reigned in his stead.

23 ¶ In the fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah, Pekahiah the son of Menahem began to reign over Israel in Samaria, [m]and reigned two years.

24 And he did that which was [n]evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

25 But [o]Pekah the son of Remaliah, [p]a captain of his, [q]conspired against him, and smote him in Samaria, in the palace of the king's house, with Argob and Arieh, and with him[1] fifty men of the Gileadites: and he killed him, and reigned in his room.

26 And [r]the rest of the acts of Pekahiah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.

27 ¶ In [s]the two and fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah, [t]Pekah the son of Remaliah began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned twenty years.

28 And he did that which was [u]evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

29 ¶ In the days of Pekah king of Israel came [v]Tiglath-pileser[2] king of Assyria, and took [w]Ijon, and [x]Abel-beth-maachah, and [y]Janoah, and [z]Kedesh, and [a]Hazor, and [b]Gilead, and Galilee,[c] all the land of Naphtali, and carried[d] them captive[3] to Assyria.

30 And Hoshea the son of Elah made[e] a conspiracy against Pekah the son of Remaliah, [f]and smote him, and slew him, and reigned[4] in his stead, [g]in the twentieth[5] year of Jotham the son of Uzziah.

31 And the rest of the acts of Pekah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.

2 ThoughZachariah had not been called to the throne till the twenty-second year after his father's death, his reign did not exceed six months in duration. During the whole of this period great commotions prevailed. Kings were suddenly raised to the throne, and as suddenly dethroned; and all this (as well as the lamentable state of religion and morals) agrees strikingly with the representations given by the prophet Hosea.

Of the first word, Tiglath, no plausible explanation can be given from the modern Persian. Kitto thinks of Dijlath, the Tigris, q. d. great lord of the Tigris. Sir Isaac Newton conjectures that, on the death of Pul, his empire was divided between his two sons: Tiglath-pileser receiving Assyria, and Nabonassar Babylon; and it is from the date of the latter's reign that the famous era of Nabonassar originated, B. C. 747. The occasion of the incursion of Tiglath-pileser is detailed in the next chapter. Some think (comparing this with 1 Ch. 5. 26) that the tribes beyond Jordan were carried captive by Pul, & the people of Galilee by his son.

CHAPTER XVI.

Ahaz's wicked reign, 1—4. Ahaz, assailed by Rezin and Pekah, hireth Tiglath-pileser against them, 5—9. Ahaz, sending a pattern of an altar from Damascus to Urijah, diverteth the brasen altar to his own devotion, 10—16. He spoileth the temple of its ornaments, 17, 18. Hezekiah succeedeth him, 19, 20.

IN the [a]seventeenth year of Pekah the son of Remaliah, [b]Ahaz the son of Jotham king of Judah began to reign.

2 Twenty years[1] old was Ahaz when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem, and [c]did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD his God, like David his father.

3 But [d]he walked in the way of the kings of Israel; yea, and [e]made his son to pass through the fire,[2] [f]according to the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel.

4 And he sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places, and [g]on the hills, and under every green tree.

5 ¶ Then [h]Rezin king of Syria, and Pekah son of Remaliah king of Israel, came up to Jerusalem to war: and they besieged Ahaz, [i]but could not overcome him.

6 At that time Rezin king of Syria[3] [k]recovered Elath to Syria, and dra the Jews from Elath;[1] and the Syria came to Elath, and dwelt there un this day.

7 So Ahaz sent messengers Tiglath-pileser[2] king of Assyria, sa ing, [m]I am thy servant, and thy so come up, [n]and save me out of the ha of the king of Syria, and out of t hand of the king of Israel, which r up against me.

8 And Ahaz took [o]the silver a gold that was found in the house the LORD, and in the treasures of king's house, and sent it for a pres [p]to the king of Assyria.

9 And the king of Assyria heark ed unto him: for the king of Ass [q]went up against Damascus,[3] took it, and carried the people o captive to [r]Kir,[4] [s]and slew Rezin.

10 ¶ And king Ahaz went to mascus to meet Tiglath-pileser k of Assyria, [t]and saw an altar[5] that at Damascus: and king Ahaz sen Urijah the priest the fashion of altar, and [u]the pattern of it, accord to all the workmanship thereof.

11 And Urijah the priest [v]built altar according to all that king A had sent from Damascus: so [w]Ur the priest made it against king A came from Damascus.

12 And when the king was c from Damascus, the king saw altar; and the king [x]approached to altar, and [y]offered thereon.

13 And [z]he burnt his burnt-o ing and his meat-offering, and po his drink-offering, and sprinkled blood of his peace-offerings,[6] upon altar.

14 And he brought also [a]the br altar, which was before the LORD, the forefront of the house, from tween the altar and the house of LORD, and put it on the north[7] sid [b]the altar.

15 And king Ahaz comma Urijah the priest, saying, Upon great altar[8] burn [c]the morning bu offering, and the evening meat-o ing, and [d]the king's burnt-sacri and his meat-offering, with the bu offering of all the people of the l

1 At ch. 18. 2, it is said, that Hezekiah son of Ahaz, was twenty-five years old when he began to reign, & his father Ahaz had reigned only sixteen years. If the number here in the text be correct, Ahaz must have begotten Hezekiah when only eleven years old, which is improbable. But the Sept. reads here 25, which is also the reading of the Sept. the Syr. and Arab., in 2 Ch. 28. 1, and this makes Anaz fifteen or sixteen years old at the time of Hezekiah's birth, and he died in his forty-first year.

3 Instead of 'Syrians,' in the second clause of this verse, the marginal Masoretic reading has 'Edomites,' which is also found in many MSS., and in the Sept. and Vulg. That this is the correct reading can scarcely be doubted, and in that case we must follow Le Clerc and Houbigant in reading in the first clause 'to Edom,' instead of 'to Syria.' Tho' there is no critical evidence for this, historical fact seems to require it, for Elath had never belonged to Syria.

4 Kir is probably a country on the river Kur, the Kuros, (Cyrus) of the Greeks, (in Zend, Koro) which rises in the mountains between the Euxine and Caspian Seas, & runs into the latter after being joined by the Araxes. The name Kur was likewise employed to denote a country through which the river flows, and Gurdjistan, or Grusia, commonly called Georgia, seems also to have derived its name from this river.

5 This was some idolatrous altar, the shape & workmanship of which pleased Ahaz so much, that he determined to have one like it at Jerusalem. For this he had no divine authority; and the compliance of Urijah was both mean and sinful. That Ahaz did this for an idolatrous purpose is evident from 2 Ch. 28. 21-25.

16 Thus did [f]Urijah the priest, according to all that king Ahaz commanded.

17 ¶ And king Ahaz [g]cut off [h]the borders of the bases, and removed the laver from off them; and took down the[i] sea from off the brasen oxen that were under it, and put it upon a pavement of stones:

CHAPTER XVII.

Hoshea's wicked reign, 1, 2. Being subdued by Shalmaneser, he conspireth against him with So king of Egypt, 3, 4. Samaria, for their sins, is carried captive, 5—23. The strange nations, which were transplanted in Samaria, being plagued with lions, make a mixture of religions, 24—41.

IN the twelfth year of Ahaz king of Judah began [a]Hoshea the son of Elah to reign in Samaria over Israel nine years.

2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, [b]but not as the kings of Israel that were before him.

3 ¶ Against him came up [c]Shalmaneser [d]king of Assyria; [e]and Hoshea became his servant, and gave[3] him presents.[4]

4 And the king of Assyria [f]found conspiracy in Hoshea: for he had sent messengers to So[5] [g]king of Egypt, and brought[h] no present to the king of Assyria, as he had done year by year; therefore the king of Assyria shut him up, and [i]bound him in prison.

5 ¶ Then [k]the king of Assyria came up throughout all the land, and went up to Samaria, and besieged it [l]three years.

1 What this was is not very clear, & the ancient versions give us no assistance. It was perhaps a covered or shaded seat for the king and his court, or a covered portico or area for the people when they attended worship on the sabbath, & it was probably, (as well as the 'king's entry,') covered with plates of brass or gold, which Ahaz took away to give to Tiglath-pileser.
2 Ahaz had little cause to congratulate himself on his policy, the result of which, in reference to Judah, was similar to the result of the protection afforded to the Britons by the Saxons. 'Instead of two petty princes whom he had before for his neighbours, and with either of whom he was able to cope; he had now for his neighbour this mighty king.'—Prideaux.

5 This was the Sabacon of Herodotus, (Sabakoph on the monuments,) an Ethiopian who reigned 50 years in Egypt, till being warned by an oracle, he withdrew to his own country. Hales conjectures, that this may have been owing to his dread of a war with Assyria, in consequence of the encouragement he had given to Hoshea. About this time a series of contests began between the kings of Egypt & those of Assyria; & the land of Canaan lying between these contending powers, was often the occasion and seat of war, alternately dependent upon one or other of them.

6 In the ninth year of Hoshea [m]the king of Assyria took Samaria, and carried[n] Israel away into Assyria, and placed them in [o]Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of [p]the Medes.

7 For so it was, that the children of Israel had [q]sinned against [r]the LORD their God, [s]which had brought them up out of the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt, [t]and had feared other gods,

8 And [u]walked in the statutes of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel, and [v]of the kings of Israel, which they had made.

9 And the children of Israel did [w]secretly those things that were not right against the LORD their God, and they built them high places in all their cities, [x]from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.[1]

10 And [y]they set them up [2]images and [z]groves[3] [a]in every high hill, and under every green tree:

11 And there they [b]burnt incense in all the high places, as did the heathen whom the LORD carried away before them; and wrought wicked things [c]to provoke the LORD to anger:

12 For they served idols, [d]whereof the LORD had said unto them, [e]Ye shall not do this thing.

13 Yet the LORD [f]testified against Israel [g]and against Judah [h]by all[4] the prophets, and by all the [i]seers, saying, [k]Turn ye from your evil ways, and [l]keep my commandments, and my statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I sent to you by my servants the prophets.

14 Notwithstanding they would not hear, but [m]hardened their [5]necks, like to the neck of their fathers, [n]that did not believe in the LORD their God.

15 And they rejected his statutes, and [o]his covenant that he made with their fathers, and [p]his testimonies which he testified against them; and they followed [q]vanity, and [r]became vain, and went after the heathen that were round about them, concerning

16 And they left all the commandments of the LORD their God, and made them [t]molten images, even two calves, and made [u]a grove, and [v]worshipped all the host of heaven, and served Baal.[w]

17 And [x]they caused their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire, and [y]used divination and enchantments, and [z]sold themselves to do evil in[a] the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

18 Therefore the LORD was very angry with Israel, and [b]removed them out of his sight: there was none left but [c]the tribe of Judah only.

19 Also [d]Judah kept not the commandments of the LORD their God, but [e]walked in the statutes of Israel which they made.

20 And the LORD [f]rejected [g]all the seed of Israel, and afflicted them, and delivered[h] them into the hand of spoilers, [i]until he had cast them out of his sight.

21 For [k]he rent Israel from the house of David; and [l]they made Jeroboam the son of Nebat king: and [m]Jeroboam drave Israel from following the LORD, and made them sin [n]a great sin.

22 For the children of Israel [o]walked in all the sins of Jeroboam which he did; they departed not from them,

23 Until [p]the LORD removed Israel out of his sight, [q]as he had said by all his servants the prophets. [r]So was Israel carried away out of their own land to Assyria unto this day.[1]

24 ¶ And [s]the king of Assyria brought men from [t]Babylon, and from Cuthah, and from [u]Ava, and from Hamath,[v] and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria instead of the children of Israel; and they possessed Samaria, and dwelt [w]in the cities thereof.

25 And so it was, at the beginning of their dwelling there, that [x]they feared not the LORD: therefore [y]the LORD sent lions among them, which slew some of them.

26 Wherefore they spake to the king of Assyria, saying, The nations which thou hast removed, [z]and plac in the cities of Samaria, [a]know r the manner of the God of the lar therefore he hath sent lions amc them, and, behold, they slay the because they know not the manner the God of the land.[1]

27 Then the king of Assyria cc manded, saying, Carry thither [b]one the priests whom ye brought fi thence; and let them go[2] and dv there, and let him teach them the m ner of the God of the land.

1 From that time to this, no account can be given of the people of Israel, as distinct from the people of Judah. Bishop Newton states a variety of opinions on the subject, & concludes that the ten tribes were in a manner lost in their captivity; a part returning to Jerusalem with the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, others remaining scattered among the nations in the countries to which they had been carried. Many a theory has since been started on the subject; one finding the ten tribes in the Affghans, another on the borders of the Caspian sea, a third in the Indians of North America, &c. One of the latest works on the subject is entitled 'The Nestorians, or the Lost Tribes,' by A. Grant, M. D., Lond. 1841. He is an American missionary, & identifies the descendants of the Israelites with the Kurdistan Jews.

him[r] shall ye fear, and him shall ye worship, and to him shall ye do sacrifice.

37 And [s]the statutes, and the ordinances, and the law, and the commandment, which he [t]wrote for you, ye shall observe to do for evermore; [u]and ye shall not fear other gods.

38 And the covenant that I have made with you [v]ye shall not forget; neither shall ye fear other gods.

39 But [w]the LORD your God ye shall fear; and [x]he shall deliver you out of the hand of all your enemies.

40 Howbeit they did not hearken, but[y] they did after their former manner.[1]

41 So [z]these nations feared the LORD, and served their graven images, both their children, and their children's children: as did their fathers, so do they [a]unto this day.[2]

CHAPTER XVIII.

Hezekiah's good reign, 1—3. He abolisheth idolatry, and prospereth, 4—8. Samaria is carried captive for their sins, 9—12. Sennacherib invading Judah is pacified by a tribute, 13—16. Rab-shakeh, sent by Sennacherib again, reviileth Hezekiah, and by blasphemous persuasions soliciteth the people to revolt, 17—37.

NOW it came to pass, [a]in the third year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, that [b]Hezekiah the son of Ahaz king of Judah began to reign.

2 Twenty and five years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was [c]Abi, the daughter of Zechariah.

3 And he did that which was [d]right in the sight of the LORD, [e]according to all that David his father did.

4 ¶ He [f]removed the high places, and [g]brake the images,[3] and cut down the groves, and brake in pieces [h]the brasen serpent that Moses had made: for [i]unto those days the children of Israel did burn incense to it; and he called it Nehushtan.[4]

5 He [k]trusted in the LORD God of Israel; so that [l]after him was none like him among all the kings of Judah, nor any that were before him.

6 For [m]he clave to the LORD, and departed not from[5] following him, but kept[n] his commandments, which the LORD commanded Moses.

7 And [o]the LORD was with him; and he[p] prospered whithersoever he went forth: and he [q]rebelled against the king of Assyria, and served him not.

5 Compare what follows in this and the two next chapters with Is. xxxvi. to xxxix. 8 If the fuller's field was near Enrogel, or the fuller's fountain east of Jerusalem, as is generally supposed, then it is probable that the conduit of the upper pool was an aqueduct that brought the water from the upper or eastern reservoir of that fountain; which they had probably seized in order to distress the city. But Robinson identifies the upper pool with the Birket-el Mamilla on the west of the city.

8 He smote [r]the Philistines, even unto Gaza,[1] and the borders thereof, from[s] the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.

9 ¶ And it came to pass, in [t]the fourth year of king Hezekiah, which was the seventh year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, that [u]Shalmaneser king of Assyria came up against Samaria, and besieged it.

10 And at the end of three years [v]they took it: even in the sixth year of Hezekiah, (that is, the ninth year of Hoshea king of Israel,) Samaria was taken

11 And [w]the king of Assyria did carry away Israel unto Assyria, and put them in Halah[2] and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes;

12 Because [x]they obeyed not the voice of the LORD their God, but transgressed his covenant, and all that [y]Moses the servant of the LORD commanded, and would not hear them, nor do them.

13 ¶ Now, in [z]the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah did [3]Sennacherib king of Assyria [a]come up against all the fenced cities of Judah, and took them.

14 And Hezekiah king of Judah sent to the king of Assyria to Lachish, saying, [b]I have offended; return from me: that which thou puttest on me will I bear. And the king of Assyria appointed unto Hezekiah king of Judah three hundred talents of silver, and thirty talents of gold.

15 And Hezekiah [c]gave him all the silver that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house.

16 At that time did Hezekiah cut off the [d]gold from the doors of the temple of the LORD, and from the pillars which Hezekiah king of Judah had overlaid, and gave it[4] to the king of Assyria.

17 And [e]the king of Assyria [5]sent Tartan,[6] and Rabsaris, and Rab-shakeh, from Lachish to king Hezekiah with a great[7] host against Jerusalem: and they went up, and came to Jerusalem. And when they were come up, they came and stood by [f]the conduit of the upper pool,[8] which is in the highway of the fuller's field.

18 And when they had called to the king, there came out to them Eliakim[g] the son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and [h]Shebna the scribe,[1] and Joah the son of Asaph [i]the recorder.

19 And Rab-shakeh[2] said unto them, Speak ye now to Hezekiah, [k]Thus saith the great king, the king of Assyria, [l]What confidence is this wherein thou trustest?

20 Thou sayest,[3] (but they are but vain words,[4]) I[5] have counsel and strength for the war. Now on whom dost thou trust, that thou [m]rebellest against me?

21 Now, behold, thou trustest[6] upon the[n] staff of this bruised reed, even upon[o] Egypt, on which if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so[p] is Pharaoh king of Egypt unto all that trust on him.

22 But if ye say unto me, [q]We trust in the LORD our God: is not that he [r]whose high places and whose altars Hezekiah hath taken away,[7] and hath said to Judah and Jerusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar in Jerusalem?

23 Now therefore, I pray thee, give pledges[8] to my lord the king of Assyria, and [s]I will deliver thee two thousand horses, if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon them.

24 How then [t]wilt thou turn away the face of one captain of the least of my master's servants, and put [u]thy trust on Egypt for [v]chariots and for horsemen?[9]

25 Am [w]I now come up without the LORD against this place to destroy it? The LORD said to me, Go up against this land, and destroy it.

26 Then said Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, and Shebna, and Joah, unto Rab-shakeh, Speak, I pray thee, to thy servants [x]in the Syrian[10] language; (for we understand it;) and talk not with us in the Jews' language in the ears of the people that are on the wall.

27 But Rab-shakeh said unto them, Hath my master sent me to thy master, and to thee, to speak these words? hath he not sent me to the men which sit on the wall, that they may [y]eat[11] their own dung, and drink their[1] own piss with you?

28 ¶ Then [z]Rab-shakeh stood, and cried with a loud voice in the Jews' language, and spake, saying, Hear the word of [a]the great king, the king of Assyria:

29 Thus saith the king, [b]Let not Hezekiah deceive you; for he shall not be able to deliver you out of his hand:

30 Neither let Hezekiah [c]make you trust in the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us, and [d]this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

31 Hearken not unto Hezekiah: for thus saith the king of Assyria, [2]Make an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me, and then [e]eat ye every man of his own vine, and every one of his fig-tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his cistern;[3]

32 Until [f]I come and take you away to a land [g]like your own land; a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of oil-olive and of honey, that ye may live, and not [4]die: and hearken not unto Hezekiah, when he persuadeth[5] you, saying, The LORD will deliver us.

33 Hath [h]any of the gods of the nations delivered at all his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

34 Where are [i]the gods of [6]Hamath, and of Arpad? where are [k]the gods of Sepharvaim,[7] Hena, and Ivah? [l]have they delivered Samaria out of mine hand?

35 Who are they among all the gods of the countries, that have delivered their country out of mine hand, that[m] the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of mine hand?

36 But the people [n]held their peace, and answered him not a word: for the king's commandment was, saying, Answer him not.

37 Then came Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder, to Hezekiah, [o]with their clothes rent, and told him the words of Rab-shakeh.

7 This was one of the places whence Salmanassar sent a colony into Israel, ch. 17. 24. That it was a small state under its own king appears from ch. 19. 13. We include it in Mesopotamia, because it is mentioned along with other places of that province; and Ptolemy speaks of a town of a similar name, Sipphara, as the southernmost city of Mesopotamia. Below it the Euphrates divided into two branches, one going to Seleucia, the other to Babylon. Ivah is probably the same as Ava, (ch. 17. 24). Michaelis places it between Berytus and Tripoli.

CHAPTER XIX.

Hezekiah mourning sendeth to Isaiah to pray for them, 1—5. Isaiah comforteth them, 6, 7. Sennacherib, going to encounter Tirhakah, sendeth a blasphemous letter to Hezekiah, 8—13. Hezekiah's prayer, 14—19. Isaiah's prophecy of the pride and destruction of Sennacherib, and the good of Zion, 20—34. An angel slayeth the Assyrians, 35. Sennacherib is slain at Nineveh by his own sons, 36, 37.

A.M.3294. B.C.710.

AND it came to pass, [a]when king Hezekiah heard it, that [b]he rent his clothes, and [c]covered himself with sackcloth, and [d]went into the house of the LORD.

2 And [e]he sent Eliakim, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests, covered with sackcloth, [f]to Isaiah the prophet, [g]the son of Amoz.

3 And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, [h]This day is a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and blasphemy:[1] for[i] the children[2] are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth.

4 It may be [k]the LORD thy God will hear all the words of Rab-shakeh, whom[l] the king of Assyria his master hath sent to reproach the living God; and will [m]reprove the words which the LORD thy God hath heard: wherefore [n]lift up thy prayer for [o]the remnant that are left.[3]

5 So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah.

6 ¶ And [p]Isaiah said unto them, Thus shall ye say to your master, Thus saith the LORD, [q]Be not afraid of the words which thou hast heard, with which [r]the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.

7 Behold, I will send [s]a blast[4] upon him, and he shall [t]hear a rumour, and shall return to his own land; and [u]I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.

8 ¶ So Rab-shakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against [v]Libnah: for he had heard that he was departed [w]from Lachish.

9 And [x]when he had heard say of Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, Behold, he is come out to fight against thee; he[y] sent messengers again unto Hezekiah, saying,

10 Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, [z]Let not thy God in whom thou trustest deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

11 Behold, [a]thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, by destroying them utterly: and shalt thou be delivered?

12 Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed; as [b]Gozan, and [c]Haran, and Rezeph, and the children of [d]Eden which were in Thelasar?

13 Where is [e]the king of Hamath, and the king of [f]Arpad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, of Hena, and Ivah?

14 ¶ And [g]Hezekiah received the letter of the hand of the messengers, and read it: and Hezekiah went up into the house of the LORD, and [h]spread it[1] before the LORD.

15 And Hezekiah [i]prayed before the LORD, and said, [k]O LORD God of Israel, which [l]dwellest between the cherubims, [m]thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth; [n]thou hast made heaven and earth.

16 LORD, [o]bow down thine ear, and hear; [p]open, LORD, thine eyes, and see; and hear the words of Sennacherib, [q]which hath sent him to reproach the living God.

17 [r]Of a truth, LORD, [s]the kings of Assyria have destroyed the nations and their lands, 18 And [t]have cast[2] their gods into the fire: [u]for they were no gods, but the work of men's hands, wood and stone; therefore they have destroyed them.

19 Now therefore, [v]O LORD our God, I beseech thee, save thou us out of his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the LORD God, even thou only.[3]

20 ¶ Then Isaiah the son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, That [w]which thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib king of Assyria [x]I have heard.

21 This is the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning him; [y]The virgin, [z]the daughter of Zion, hath despised thee, and laughed thee to

At the mercy seat of his almighty Friend, he spreads his case, & makes his appeal. When he can discern that the glory of God is on his side, faith gains the victory; he again exults in the assurance that he shall never be moved. The best pleas in prayer are taken from God's honour. scorn; the daughter of Jerusalem hath shaken[a] her head at thee.

22 [b]Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed? and against whom hast thou [c]exalted thy voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high? even against the [d]Holy One of Israel.

23 By[1] thy [e]messengers thou hast reproached the Lord, and hast said, With[f] the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon, and will cut down the tall[2] cedar-trees thereof, and the choice fir-trees thereof: and I will enter into the lodgings of his borders,[3] and into the forest[4] of his Carmel.

24 I have digged and drunk strange waters, and [g]with the sole of my feet[5] have I dried up all the rivers of besieged[6] places.

25 Hast[7] thou not heard long ago how [h]I have done it,[8] and of ancient times that I have formed it? now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldest be to lay waste fenced cities into ruinous heaps.

26 Therefore their inhabitants [i]were of[9] small power, they were dismayed and confounded; [k]they were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb, as [l]the grass on the housetops, and as corn blasted before it be grown up.

27 But [m]I know thy abode,[10] and thy[n] going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage against me.

28 Because [o]thy rage against me and [p]thy tumult is come up into mine ears, therefore I will put [q]my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back [r]by the way by which thou camest.

29 And this shall be [s]a sign unto thee,[11] [t]Ye shall eat this year such things as grow of themselves, and in the second year that which springeth of the same; and in the third year sow ye, and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruits thereof.

30 [u]And the remnant[12] that is escaped of the house of Judah [v]shall yet again take root downward, and bear fruit upward.

31 For [w]out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and they that [x]escape out of mount Zion: [z]the zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do this.

32 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the king of Assyria, He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shield, nor [z]cast a bank against it.

33 By the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city, saith the LORD.

34 For [a]I will defend this city to save it, [b]for mine own sake, and for [c]my servant David's sake.

35 ¶ And it came to pass [d]that night, that [e]the angel[2] of the LORD went out, [f]and smote in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred fourscore and five thousand: and [g]when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses.[3]

36 So [h]Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at [i]Nineveh.

37 And it came to pass, as he was worshipping in the house of [k]Nisroch his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer [l]his sons smote him with the sword; and they escaped into the land of Armenia:[4] and [m]Esarhaddon his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XX.

Hezekiah, having received a message of death, by prayer has life lengthened, 1—7. The sun goeth ten degrees backward for sign of that promise, 8—11. Berodach-baladan sending to Hezekiah, because of the wonder, hath notice of his treasure 13. Isaiah understanding thereof, foretelleth the Babylonish captivity 14—19. Hezekiah dieth: Manasseh succeedeth 20, 21.

IN those days [a]was Hezekiah sick unto death: and [b]the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz came to him, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Set thine house in order; for [c]thou shalt die, and not live.

2 Then [d]he turned his face to the wall, and prayed unto the LORD, saying,

3 I beseech thee, O LORD, [e]remember now how [f]I have walked before thee [g]in truth, and with [h]a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight. And Hezekiah wept[i] sore.[6]

4 And it came to pass, afore Isaiah was gone out into the middle [7]court, that the word of the LORD came to him, saying,

5 [k]Turn again, and tell Hezekiah the [l] captain of my people, Thus saith the LORD, [m]the God of David thy father, [n]I have heard thy prayer, [o]I have seen thy tears: behold, [p]I will heal thee; on the third day [q]thou shalt go up unto the house of the LORD.

6 And [r]I will add unto thy days fifteen years; and I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria; and [s]I will defend this city for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

7 And Isaiah said, [t]Take a lump of figs:[1] and they took and laid it on the boil, and he recovered.

8 ¶ And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, What[u] shall be the sign that the LORD will heal me, and that I shall go up into the house of the LORD the third day?

9 And Isaiah said, [v]This sign shalt thou have of the LORD, that the LORD will do the thing that he hath spoken; shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go back ten degrees?

10 And Hezekiah answered, [w]It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees.

11 And Isaiah the prophet [x]cried unto the LORD; and [y]he brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the dial[2] of Ahaz.

12 ¶ At that time [z]Berodach-baladan, the son of Baladan, [a]king of Babylon,[b] [c]sent letters and a present unto Hezekiah: [d]for he had heard that Hezekiah had been sick.

13 And Hezekiah hearkened[3] unto them, and [e]shewed them all the house of his precious[4] things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his armour,[5] and all that was found in his treasures: [f]there was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah shewed them not.

14 ¶ Then [g]came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, [h]What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, They are come from a[i] far country, even from Babylon.

2 Heb. degrees. Since this dial was distinguished by the name of the king by whom it had been erected, we may conclude that it was a new and rare thing, & probably one of the curiosities Ahaz had brought from Damascus (ch.16.10) or from Babylon. Many fruitless conjectures have been made as to its precise form. As the word translated degrees means steps or stairs, many have imagined it was a kind of ascent or stair marked with figures, showing the divisions of the day; or perhaps it was a staircase, framed with so much art and proportion that the shadows of the steps expressed the hours of the day, & the course of the sun. How God produced the appearance we are not concerned to determine; only the text does not say that the sun went backward, or indeed the shadow of any object, save the shadow on this one dial.

1 This custom of heaping up treasure is common in the East. Vertomannus, describing the treasure of the king of Calicut, says, that it was esteemed so immense, that it could not be contained in two very large cellars or warehouses. It consisted of precious stones, plates of gold, and as much coined gold as might load 100 mules.

2 Hezekiah made an exhibition of his riches and power in a spirit of great vanity and ostentation, which displeased the Lord. It was also ruinous to Judea; for when these foreigners had seen such a profusion of wealth, such princely establishments, and such an inviting fruitful country, it was natural for them to conceive the wish to possess these treasures. They made their report to their king and countrymen, and there is little doubt that it was in consequence of this that the conquest of Jerusalem was projected.

of the LORD, of which the LORD said, [k]In Jerusalem will I put my name.

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven [l]in the two courts of the house of the LORD.

6 And [m]he made his son pass through the fire, and [n]observed times,[1] and used enchantments, and dealt with familiar[o] spirits and wizards: he wrought[p] much wickedness in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

7 And [q]he set a graven image of the grove that he had made in the house, of which the LORD said to David, and to Solomon his son, [r]In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever.

8 Neither [s]will I make the feet of Israel move any more out of the land which I gave their fathers; only[t] if they will observe to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my servant Moses commanded them.

9 But [u]they hearkened not: and Manasseh [v]seduced them to do [w]more evil than did the nations whom the LORD destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 ¶ And [x]the LORD spake by his servants the prophets, saying,

11 [y]Because Manasseh king of Judah had done these abominations, and hath done wickedly [z]above all that the Amorites did, which were before him, and hath [a]made Judah also to sin with his idols;

12 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Behold, [b]I am bringing such evil upon Jerusalem and Judah, that [c]whosoever heareth of it, both his ears shall tingle.

13 And [d]I will stretch over Jerusalem the line[2] of Samaria, and [e]the plummet of the house of Ahab: and I[f] will wipe Jerusalem as a man wipeth a dish, wiping[3] it, and turning it upside down.

14 And [g]I will forsake [h]the remnant of mine inheritance, and [i]deliver them into the hand of their enemies; and they shall become a prey and a spoil to all their enemies;[1]

15 Because they have done that which was evil in my sight, and have provoked me to anger, [k]since the day their fathers came forth out of Egypt, even unto this day.

16 Moreover, [l]Manasseh shed innocent blood very much, till he had filled Jerusalem from one[2] end to another; [m]besides his sin wherewith he made Judah to sin, in doing that which was evil in the sight of the LORD.

17 ¶ Now [n]the rest of the acts[3] of Manasseh, and all that he did, and his sin that he sinned, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?[4]

18 And Manasseh slept with his fathers, [o]and was buried in the garden of his own house,[5] in the garden of Uzza: and Amon his son reigned in his stead.

19 ¶ [p]Amon was twenty and two years old when he began to reign; and he reigned [q]two[6] years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Meshullemeth, the daughter of Haruz of Jotbah.

20 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, [r]as his father Manasseh did.

21 And he walked in all the ways that his father walked in, and served the idols that his father served,[7] and worshipped them:

22 And [s]he forsook the LORD God of his fathers, and walked not in the way of the LORD.

23 ¶ And [t]the servants of Amon conspired against him, and slew the king in his own house.

24 And [u]the people of the land slew all them that had conspired against king Amon: and [v]the people of the land made Josiah his son king in his stead.[8]

25 Now [w]the rest of the acts of Amon which he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

26 And he was buried in his sepulchre [x]in the garden of Uzza: and [y]Josiah his son reigned in his stead.

They cannot have quietness in vice till they have stupified their consciences, and the greater the obstacles before they can fully indulge their lusts, the more depraved do they afterwards become.

3 ¶ And it came to pass in [g]the ...re the ...ighteenth year of king Josiah, that ...he Chr... the king sent Shaphan the son of ...Azaliah, the son of Meshullam, the ...scribe, to the house of the LORD, ...ed in ...aying,

4 Go up to [h]Hilkiah the high priest, ...son ...hat he may [i]sum the silver which is ...brought into the house of the LORD, ...ven ...which [k]the keepers of the door[2] have ...gathered of the people;

5 And let them [l]deliver it into the ...hand of the doers of the work, that ...have the oversight of the house of the ...LORD: and let them give it to the doers ...of the work which is in the house of ...the LORD, [m]to repair the breaches of ...the house,

6 Unto carpenters, and builders, ...and masons, and to buy timber and ...hewn stone to repair the house.

7 Howbeit [n]there was no reckoning made with them of the money that was delivered into their hand, because [o]they dealt faithfully.

8 ¶ And Hilkiah the high priest said unto Shaphan the scribe, [p]I have found the book of the law[3] in the house of the LORD: and Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan, and he read it.

9 And [q]Shaphan [r]the scribe came to the king, and brought the king word again, and said, Thy servants have gathered[4] the money that was found in the house, and have delivered it into the hand of them that do the work, that have the oversight of the house of the LORD.

10 And Shaphan the scribe shewed the king,[5] saying, Hilkiah the priest hath delivered me a book: and [s]Shaphan read it before [t]the king.

11 And it came to pass, when the king had heard the words of the book of the law, [u]that he rent his clothes.

12 And [v]the king commanded Hilkiah the [w]priest, and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and [x]Achbor the son of Michaiah,[1] and Shaphan the scribe, and Asahiah a servant of the king's, saying,

13 Go ye, [y]enquire of the LORD for me, and for the people, and for all Judah, concerning the words of this book that is found: for [z]great is the wrath of the LORD that is kindled against us, [a]because our fathers have not hearkened unto the words of this book, to do according unto all that which is written concerning us.

14 So Hilkiah the priest, and Ahikam, and Achbor, and Shaphan, and Asahiah, went unto Huldah [b]the prophetess, the wife of Shallum the son of [c]Tikvah, the son of Harhas, keeper of the wardrobe;[2] (now she dwelt in Jerusalem in the college;[3]) and they communed with her.

15 ¶ And she said unto them, [d]Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Tell the man that sent you to me,

16 Thus saith the LORD, [e]Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even [f]all the words of the book which the king of Judah hath read:

17 Because they [g]have forsaken me, and have burnt incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all [h]the works of their hands; therefore my wrath shall be kindled against this place, [i]and shall not be quenched.

18 But [k]to the king of Judah, which sent you to enquire of the LORD, [l]thus shall ye say to him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, As touching the words which thou hast heard;

19 Because [m]thine heart was tender, and thou hast [n]humbled thyself before the LORD, when thou heardest what I spake against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, that they should become [o]a desolation, and a curse, and hast rent thy clothes, and

3 This was perhaps the autograph of Moses; for it is called (2 Ch. 34. 14,) the Book of the law of the Lord by Moses. It is not likely that it was the only copy of the law found in Judea, or that Josiah had never before seen the Pentateuch. But it may have been the original of the covenant renewed by Moses in the plains of Moab, and which he ordered to be laid up beside the ark, see De. 28. 31. And now being unexpectedly found, its antiquity, the occasion of its being made, the present circumstances of the people, the imperfect state in which the national reformation as yet was, would all concur to produce the effect here mentioned on the mind of the pious Josiah. 'If the Holy Scriptures had not been of God, they had not been in being at this day. God's care of the bible is a plain indication of his interest in it.

5 As this book seemed new to Josiah, perhaps the one in common use was some abstract, (like an abridgment of the statutes,) containing only matters of positive enactment, leaving out the promises and threatenings. In unrolling the MS. the after part of the book of Deuteronomy would probably first appear, and the king being impatient to know the contents, would hear the awful denunciations contained in the 28th chapter.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Josiah causeth the book to be read in a solemn assembly, 1, 2. He reneweth the covenant of the Lord, 3. He destroyeth idolatry, 4—14. He burnt dead men's bones upon the altar of Beth-el, according to the prophecy, 15—20. He kept a most solemn passover, 21—23. He put away witches and all abomination, 24, 25. God's final wrath against Judah, 26, 28. Josiah, provoking Pharaoh-nechoh, is slain at Meggido, 29, 30. Jehoahaz, succeeding him, is imprisoned by Pharaoh-nechoh, who made Jehoiakim king, 31—35. Jehoiakim's wicked reign, 36, 37.

AND [a]the king sent, and they gathered unto him all the elders of Judah and of Jerusalem.

2 And the king went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem with him, and the priests, and the prophets, and all the people, both[2] [b]small and great: and [c]he read[3] in their ears all the words of [d]the book of the covenant which was found in the house of the LORD.

3 ¶ And the king [e]stood by a pillar,[4] and [f]made a covenant before the LORD, to[g] walk after the LORD, and to keep his[h] commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, [i]with all their heart, and all their soul, to perform the words of this covenant that were written in this book: [k]and all the people stood to the covenant.

4 And the king commanded Hilkiah the high priest, and the [l]priests of the second order, and [m]the keepers of the door, [n]to bring forth out of the temple of the LORD all the vessels that were made for [o]Baal, and for the grove, and for all the host of heaven; and he burnt them without Jerusalem in the fields of [p]Kidron, and carried the ashes of them unto [q]Beth-el.

5 And he put[5] down the idolatrous[6] priests, whom the kings of Judah had ordained to burn incense in the high places in the cities of Judah, and in the places round about Jerusalem: them also that burnt incense unto Baal,[7] to the sun, and to the moon, and to the planets,[8] and to [r]all the host of heaven.

6 And he brought out [s]the grove from the house of the LORD, with Jerusalem, unto the brook Kid and[t] burned it at the brook Kid and stamped it small to powder, cast the powder thereof upon graves of the children of the peop

7 And he brake down the house [v]the sodomites, that were by the h of the LORD, [w]where the women v hangings[1] for the grove.[2]

8 And he brought all the priest of the cities of Judah, and defile high places where the priests had b incense, from [x]Geba to [y]Beer-sh and brake down the high places o gates[4] that were in the entering i the gate of Joshua the governor o city, which were on a man's left at the gate of the city.

9 Nevertheless, [z]the priests o high places came not up to the of the LORD in Jerusalem, [a]but did eat of the unleavened bread a their brethren.

10 And he defiled [b]Topheth,[5] v is in [c]the valley of the childre Hinnom, that no man [d]might his son or his daughter to pass thr the fire to Molech.

11 And he took away the [6]h that the kings of Judah had giv [e]the sun, at the entering in o house of the LORD, by the chamb Nathan-melech the chamberlain,[7] was in the suburbs,[8] and burn chariots of the sun with fire.

12 And the altars that were [f]o top of the upper chamber of which the kings of Judah had and the altars [g]which Manasseh made in the two courts of the of the LORD, did the king beat and brake[9] them down from thenc [h]cast the dust of them into the Kidron.

13 And the high places that before Jerusalem, which were o right hand of the mount[10] of c tion, which [i]Solomon the kin Israel had builded for [k]Ashtoret abomination of the Sidonians, a [l]Chemosh the abomination o Moabites, and for [m]Milcom the a nation of the children of Ammo the king defile.

14 And [n]he brake in pieces the images,[1] and cut down the groves, and filled their places with [o]the bones of men.

15 ¶ Moreover, [p]the altar that was at Beth-el,[2] and the high place which Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, had made, both that altar and the high place he brake down, and burnt the high place, and [q]stamped it small to powder, and burnt the grove.

16 And as Josiah turned himself, he spied the sepulchres that were there in the mount, and sent, and took the bones out of the sepulchres, and [r]burnt them upon the altar, and polluted it, according to the word of the LORD, which the man of God proclaimed,[3] who proclaimed these words.

17 Then he said, What title[4] is that that I see? And the men of the city told him, [s]It is the sepulchre of the man of God, which came from Judah, and proclaimed these things that thou hast done against the altar of Beth-el.

18 And he said, Let him alone; let no man move his bones. So they let his bones alone,[5] with [t]the bones of the prophet that came out of Samaria.

19 ¶ And all [u]the houses also of the high places that were in [v]the cities of Samaria, which [w]the kings of Israel had made [x]to provoke the LORD to anger, Josiah took away, and did to them according to all the acts that he had done in Beth-el.

20 And [y]he slew[6] all the priests of the high places that were there upon the altars, and burnt men's bones[7] upon them, and returned to Jerusalem.

21 ¶ And the king commanded all the people, saying, [z]Keep the passover[8] unto the LORD your God, [a]as it is written in the book of this covenant.

22 Surely [b]there was not holden such a passover,[8] from the days of the judges that judged Israel, nor in all the days [c]of the kings of Israel, nor of the kings of Judah;

23 But in the eighteenth year of king Josiah, wherein this passover was holden to the LORD in Jerusalem.

24 ¶ Moreover, [d]the workers with familiar spirits, and the wizards, and the images,[9] and the idols, and all the abominations that were spied in the land of Judah, and in Jerusalem, did Josiah put away, [e]that he might perform the words of the law, which were written in [f]the book that Hilkiah the priest found in the house of the LORD.

25 And [g]like unto him was there no king[1] before him, [h]that turned to the LORD with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his might, [i]according to all the law of Moses; neither after him arose there any like him.

26 ¶ [k]Notwithstanding the LORD turned not[2] from the fierceness of his great wrath, wherewith his anger was kindled against Judah, because of all the provocations[3] that Manasseh had provoked him withal.

27 And the LORD said, [l]I will remove Judah also [m]out of my sight, as I have removed Israel, and will cast off this city Jerusalem, which I have chosen, and the house of which I said, [n]My name shall be there.

28 ¶ Now [o]the rest of the acts of Josiah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

29 In his days [p][4]Pharaoh-nechoh king of Egypt went up against the king of Assyria to the river Euphrates: and king Josiah went against him; and he [q]slew him at [r]Megiddo, when [s]he had seen him.

30 And [t]his servants carried him in a chariot dead from Megiddo, and brought him to Jerusalem, and buried him in his own sepulchre: and [u]the people of the land took Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, and anointed him, and made him king in his father's stead.

31 ¶ [v]Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign; and he reigned three months in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was [w]Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.

2 Josiah had evidently some authority over a great part of the former kingdom of Israel, no doubt by permission of the king of Assyria. He had carried the ashes of the idolatrous vessels to Bethel (ver. 4,) in order to render both it and the ashes abominable to the people.

The king whom he attacked is supposed to have been the famous Nabopollasar, father of Nebuchadnezzar. In the great tomb opened by Belzoni, Dr Young thought he found the name of Psammis, Necos' successor, but others doubt it. There is on the walls a painting, which is by some supposed to refer to the transaction in the text. A procession appears before the king, who is seated on a throne; it ends with seventeen figures, consisting of people of four different nations, in groups of four, the second of which is said to be evidently composed of Jews.

34 And Pharaoh-nechoh made [a]Eliakim the son of Josiah king in the room of Josiah his father, and [b]turned[1] his name to Jehoiakim,[2] and took Jehoahaz away: and [c]he came to Egypt, and died there.[3]

35 ¶ And Jehoiakim gave the silver and the gold to Pharaoh; but he [d]taxed the land to give the money, according to the commandment of Pharaoh: he exacted the silver and the gold of the people of the land, of every one according to his taxation, to give it unto Pharaoh-nechoh.

36 ¶ [e]Jehoiakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Zebudah, the daughter of Pedaiah of Rumah.

37 And [f]he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all[g] that his fathers had done.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Jehoiakim, first submitting to Nebuchadnezzar, then rebelling against him, procureth his own ruin, 1—4. Jehoiachin succeedeth him, 5, 6. The king of Egypt is vanquished by the king of Babylon, 7. Jehoiachin's evil reign, 8, 9. Jerusalem is taken and carried captive into Babylon, 10—16. Zedekiah is made king, and reigneth wickedly: he rebelleth, to the utter destruction of Judah, 17—20.

IN [a]his days Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up, and Jehoiakim became his servant three years; then he turned and rebelled against him.

2 And [b]the LORD sent against him bands[4] of the Chaldees, and bands of the Syrians, and bands of the Moabites, and bands of the children of Ammon, and sent them against Judah to destroy it, [c]according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by [5]his servants the prophets.

3 Surely [d]at the commandment of the LORD came this upon Judah, to remove[e] them out of his sight, [f]for the sins of Manasseh, according to all that he did;

4 And also [g]for the innocent blood that he shed, (for he filled Jerusalem with innocent blood,) [h]which the LORD would not pardon.[6]

5 ¶ Now [i]the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

6 So Jehoiakim [k]slept with his fathers;[1] and Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead.

7 ¶ And [l]the king of Egypt came not again[2] any more out of his land: for the king of Babylon had taken, [m]from the river of Egypt unto the river Euphrates, all that pertained to the king of Egypt.

8 ¶ [n]Jehoiachin[3] was [o]eighteen years old when he began to reign; and he reigned in Jerusalem three months: and his mother's name was Nehushta, the daughter of Elnathan of Jerusalem.

9 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father had done.

10 ¶ At that time the servants of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up against Jerusalem, and the city was besieged.[4]

11 And Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came against the city, and his servants did besiege it.

12 And [p]Jehoiachin the king of Judah went out to the king of Babylon, he, and his mother, and his servants, and his princes, and his [5]officers; and the king of Babylon [q]took him in the eighth year of his reign.[6]

13 And [r]he carried out thence all the treasures[7] of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house, and [s]cut in pieces all the vessels of gold [t]which Solomon king of Israel had made in the temple of the LORD, as the LORD had said.

14 And he carried away all [u]Jerusalem, and all the princes, and all the mighty men of valour, even ten thousand captives, and all the [v]craftsmen and smiths: none remained, save [w]the poorest sort of the people of the land.

15 And [x]he carried away Jehoiachin to Babylon, and the king's [8]mother, and the king's wives, and his [9]officers, and the mighty of the land; those carried he into captivity from Jerusalem to Babylon.

16 And all the men of might,[10] even [y]seven thousand, and craftsmen and smiths a thousand, all that were strong 17 ¶ And [a]the king of Babylon made Mattaniah[1] [b]his father's brother king in his stead, and [c]changed his name to Zedekiah.

19 And [e]he did that which was evil[2] in the sight of the LORD, according to all that Jehoiakim had done.

20 For [f]through the anger of the LORD it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, until he had cast them out from his presence, that [g]Zedekiah rebelled[3] against the king of Babylon.

CHAPTER XXV.

Jerusalem is again besieged, 1—3. Zedekiah taken, his sons slain, and his eyes put out, 4—7. Nebuzaradan defaceth the city, carrieth the remnant, except a few poor labourers, into captivity, 8—13; spoileth and carrieth away the treasures, 13—17. The nobles of Judah are slain at Riblah, 18—21. Gedaliah, who was set over the people that remained, being slain, the rest flee into Egypt, 22—26. Evil-merodach advanceth Jehoiachin in his court, 27—30.

AND it came to pass [a]in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that [b]Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his host, against Jerusalem, and [c]pitched against it; and they built forts against it round about.

2 And the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah.

3 And on [d]the ninth day of the fourth month [e]the famine prevailed in the city, and [f]there was no bread for the people of the land.

4 ¶ And [g]the city was broken up, and all the men of war [h]fled by night by the way of the gate, between two walls,[4] which is by the king's garden; (now the Chaldees were against the city round about;) [i]and the king[5] went the way toward the plain.

5 And the army of the Chaldees pursued after the king, [k]and overtook him in the plains of Jericho: and all his army were scattered from him.

6 So [l]they took the king, and brought him up to the king of Babylon to [m]Riblah; and they gave[6] judgment upon him.

7 And [n]they slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes,[1] [o]and put out[2] the eyes of Zedekiah, and [p]bound him with fetters of brass,[3] and carried him to Babylon.[4]

8 ¶ And [q]in the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month, (which is [r]the nineteenth year of king Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon,) came [s]Nebuzar-adan, captain[5] of the guard, a servant of the king of Babylon, unto Jerusalem.

9 And [t]he burnt the house of the LORD,[6] and [u]the king's house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, and every great man's house burnt he with fire.

10 And all the army of the Chaldees, that were with the captain of the guard, [v]brake down the walls of Jerusalem round about.

11 Now [w]the rest of the people that were left in the city, and the [7]fugitives that fell away to the king of Babylon, with the remnant of the multitude, did Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, carry away.

12 But the captain of the guard [x]left of the poor[8] of the land to be vine-dressers and husbandmen.

13 ¶ And [y]the [z]pillars of brass that were in the house of the LORD, and the [a]bases, and the brasen sea, that was in the house of the LORD, did the Chaldees break in pieces, and carried the brass of them to Babylon.

14 And [b]the pots, and the shovels, and the snuffers, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass, wherewith they ministered, took they away.

15 And the fire-pans, and the bowls, [c]and such things as were of gold, in gold, and of silver, in silver, the captain of the guard took away.

16 The two pillars, one[9] sea, and the bases which Solomon had made for the house of the LORD: [d]the brass of all these vessels was without weight.

17 The height of the [e]one pillar was eighteen cubits, and the chapiter upon it was brass; and the height of the chapiter three cubits; and the wreathen work, and pomegranates upon the chapiter round about, all of brass: and like unto these had the second pillar with wreathen work.

took [f]Seraiah the chief priest,[1] and Jephaniah[g] the second priest, and the three keepers of the door:[2]

19 And out of the city he took an officer[3] that was set over the men of war, and [h]five[4] men of them that were[5] in the king's presence, which were found in the city, and the principal[6] scribe of the host, which mustered the people of the land, and threescore men of the people of the land that were found in the city:

20 And Nebuzar-adan, captain of the guard, took these, [i]and brought them to the king of Babylon to Riblah:

21 And the king of Babylon smote them,[7] and slew them at Riblah, in the land of Hamath. [k]So Judah was carried away out of their land.

22 ¶ And as for [l]the people that remained in the land of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had left, even over them he made [m]Gedaliah, the son of [n]Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, ruler.

23 And [o]when all the captains of the armies, they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah governor, there came to Gedaliah to Mizpeh, even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan the son of Careah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth the Netophathite, and Jaazaniah the son of a Maachathite, they and their men.

24 And Gedaliah[8] [p]sware to them, and to their men, and said unto them, Fear not to be the servants of the Chaldees: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, [q]and it shall be well with you.

25 But it came to pass [r]in the seventh month, that [s]Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, of the seed royal,[1] came, and ten men with him, and smote Gedaliah, that he died, and the Jews and the Chaldees that were with him at Mizpah.

26 And [t]all the people, both small and great, and the captains of the armies, arose, and came to Egypt: for they were afraid of the Chaldees.

27 ¶ And [u]it came to pass, in the seven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, that Evil-merodach[2] [v]king of Babylon, in the year that he began to reign, did [w]lift up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah out of prison:

28 And he spake kindly [3]to him, and set his throne above [x]the throne of the kings that were with him in Babylon;

29 And [y]changed his prison-garments: and [z]he did eat bread continually before him all the days of his life.

30 And his allowance was a continual allowance[4] given him of the king, [a]a daily rate for every day, [b]all the days of his life.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE SECOND BOOK OF KINGS.

The following is the tabular view given by Hales, of the chronology of those kings of Judah and Israel, the history of whose reigns is contained in this second book. It forms the completion of the table, of which the commencement appears at the end of the first book of Kings:

Kings of Judah.

'This period has been hitherto considered as the Gordian knot of sacred chronology; the intricacy of which all the chronologers have complained of, but none have been able to unravel. The whole is here adjusted and harmonized, upon the following principles:—I. The standard of the reigns of the kings of Judah is considered as correct, for it is verified by the concurrence of the books of Kings and Chronicles, and of Josephus, Abulfaragi, and Eutychius. II. The two series of reigns agree in three points of time: 1st. The reign of Rehoboam and Jeroboam began together, or in the same year, 1 Ki. xii. 1—20; 2 Ch. x. 1—19; as did also, 2nd. The reigns of queen Athaliah, and of Jehu, who slew the two kings of Judah and Israel, Ahaziah and Jehoram, the same day, 2 Ki. ix. 24—27; and, 3d. Samaria was taken by the Assyrians in the ninth year of Hoshea, king of Israel, and in the sixth year of Hezekiah king of Judah, 2 Ki. xviii. 10. III. Hence it necessarily follows, 1st. That the first six reigns in Judah must be equal in length to the first eight in Israel; and also, 2nd. That the next seven in Judah to the sixth of Hezekiah, including one interregnum, must be equal to the remainder in Israel, including two interregnums. IV. But upon comparing the former together, it appears that the first six of Judah amount to ninety-five years; whereas the first eight of Israel amount to ninety-eight years, according to the table of reigns in scripture. Consequently three years must be retrenched from the latter to reduce them to an equality with the former.' For practical remarks, see the end of the second book of Chronicles.

THE FIRST BOOK

OF THE

CHRONICLES.

THE name of 'Chronicles,' (i. e. Records of events in the order of Time,) was first given to these books by St Jerome. In the original, where they form but one ok, the title is Dibrey-Ha-Yamim, literally, 'Words of Days,' which is commonly understood to mean 'Diaries,' or journals of daily transactions; but as in Hebrew e term day is often used in a much more extended sense, the designation of 'Chronicles' is sufficiently expressive and correct. The Greek translators gave to these oks the title of Paraleipomena, 'Things omitted;' being probably led to this, by finding them placed, as they still are, at the end of the Hebrew Bible.

The general design of these books doubtless is to be supplemental to the former history, particularly in matters of genealogy, statistics, the ordering of the public service things civil and sacred, &c., but with special reference to the kingdom of Judah, after the revolt of the ten tribes. They are not, therefore, to be confounded with the Chronicles of the Kings,' so often alluded to in the books of Kings, though some portions may have been extracted from these more ancient and minute registers. It ey contain repetitions of what appears elsewhere, these will generally be found accompanied with some additions or elucidations, and the few passages that may seem contain little or nothing new, were necessary to connect the whole into a continuous narrative.

The compilation of these records appears to date from the period which immediately succeeded the return from the captivity; and the constant tradition of the Jewish urch has pointed to Ezra as the compiler. There is certainly an evident connection between the book which bears his name, and the conclusion of the second book the Chronicles; and as to those passages which might seem to fix the date of the composition either before or after the period when he flourished, (e. g. 2 Ch. v. 9; iii. —end,) they are explained on the supposition, that he copied the former without alteration from the public registers, and that the latter were added afterwards from the me authentic source. The divine authority of these books is stamped by the frequent appeal made to them by Christ and his apostles. The discrepancies we meet with e chiefly verbal, and admit for the most part of an easy solution, having, no doubt, arisen in part from the changes that had taken place in the orthography and pronunation of the Hebrew dialect during the captivity.

The first nine chapters of this first book are taken up with genealogical tables; 1st. Of the patriarchs from Adam to Jacob; of Judah's descendants to David; and David's descendants by the line of Zerubbabel, which was to be that of the Messiah, ch. i.—iii. 2nd. Of the rest of Judah's posterity, and the descendants of the other even sons of Jacob, ch. iv.—ix. And, 3d. Of the first inhabitants of Jerusalem after their return from Babylon, ch. ix. The pedigree of Saul introduces a short account his death, (ch. ix. and x.) and the rest of the book is occupied with the transactions of the reign of David, along with a full description of his court and camp, his eparations for the building of the temple, and his regulations for the temple service.

37 The sons of Reuel; Nahath, Zerah, Shammah, and Mizzah.

38 ¶ And [p]the sons of Seir; Lotan, and Shobal, and Zibeon, and Anah, and Dishon, and [q]Ezar,[3] and Dishan.

39 And the sons of Lotan; [r]Hori, and Homam: [s]and Timna was Lotan's sister.

40 The sons of Shobal; [t]Alian,[4] and Manahath, and Ebal, Shephi, and Onam. And the sons of Zibeon; Aiah,[u] and Anah.

41 The sons of Anah; [v]Dishon. And the sons of Dishon; [w]Amram, and Eshban, and Ithran, and Cheran.

42 The sons of Ezar; Bilhan, and Zavan,[x] and Jakan. The sons of Dishan; [y]Uz, and Aran.

43 ¶ Now these are [z]the kings that reigned in the land of Edom before any king reigned over the children of Israel;[1] Bela the son of Beor: and the name of his city was Dinhabah.

44 And when Bela was dead, Jobab, the son of Zerah of [a]Bozrah,[2] reigned in his stead.

45 And when Jobab was dead, Husham of the land of the Temanites reigned in his stead.

46 And when Husham was dead, Hadad the son of Bedad, (which smote Midian in the field of Moab,) reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was Avith.

47 And when Hadad was dead, Samlah of Masrekah reigned in his stead.

48 And when Samlah was dead, Shaul[b] of Rehoboth by the river[3] reigned in his stead.

49 And when Shaul was dead, Baal-hanan the son of Achbor reigned in his stead.

50 And when Baal-hanan was dead, Hadad reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was [c]Pai; and his wife's name was Mehetabel, the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mezahab.

51 ¶ Hadad died also. And the dukes of Edom were; duke[4] Timnah, duke [d]Aliah, duke Jetheth,

52 Duke Aholibamah, duke Elah, duke Pinon,

53 Duke Kenaz, duke Teman, duke Mibzar,

54 Duke Magdiel, duke Iram. [e]These are the dukes of Edom.

CHAPTER II.

The sons of Israel, 1, 2. The posterity of Judah by Tamar, 3—12. The children of Jesse, 13—17. The posterity of Caleb the son of Hezron, 18—20. Hezron's posterity by the daughter of Machir, 21—24. Jerahmeel's posterity, 25—33. Sheshan's posterity, 34—41. Another branch of Caleb's posterity, 42—49. The posterity of Caleb the son of Hur, 50—55.

THESE are the sons of [a]Israel; [b]Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun,

2 Dan, Joseph, and Benjamin, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher.

2 Timna was not a son of Eliphaz but his concubine, and motherof Amalek, Ge. 36. 12, with which the Arab. and Wechelius' edit. of the Sept. agree here. The Cod. 495 of Kennicott omits Timnah. Several difficulties in these genealogies have arisen from errors or omissions in transcribing. It is in this way that various readings and apparent contradictions have originated, particularly in this and thefollowing chapter. They are however, of no moment except as mattersofcriticism. In some cases, (as Chileab, 2 Sa. 3. 3, called Daniel 1Ch. 3. 1,) the person probably had two names, & in others the pronunciation might be altered. We know that changes occur in every language during the lapse of several hundred years. Grandsons and remote descendants are often mentioned as sons. The marginal readings remove many of the seeming discrepancies.

1 It would appear that at an early period, (probably during the residence of the Hebrews in Egypt,) that portion of the Esauites, who spread to the north-east, & took possession of Djebal, had adopted the monarchical form of government, while those in mount Seir retained their ancient constitution. For,after the list of the heads of tribes among the Esauites, on mount Seir, mention is made of eight kings of Edom, who reigned there before there was any king in Israel. But these Edomite kings did not come in the place of the heads of tribes, of whom there had been previous mention; both were contemporary in two different districts of the country of which Esau's descendants had taken possession.

b Ge. 36. 37, Saul.
3 Whether those places,whence the kings of Edom came, belonged to the Idumean territory, is very uncertain. One of these towns, Rechoboth, on the Euphrates, in all probability, did not. Three others, Masrekah, Awith, and Pagu, occur no where else. Of Dinhaba, the town of the king who is mentioned first, there was in Eusebius & Jerome's days a trace in Dennaba, the name of two small towns, one of which was eight Roman miles from Ar, or Rabbath-Moab, towards the Arnon, the other wasbeyond mount Peor, in the territoryof Moab,seven Roman miles from Heshbon.
c Ge. 36. 39, Pau.
4 From these lists it appears that Esau's descendants, like the Hebrews & Horites, were divided into tribes, and that each tribe had its own Alluff, or chief. This term seems to have been common in mount Seir,for the chiefs of the Horites are also so designated. In the English versions it is duke, a word which now suggests the idea of an order of nobility, but originally had the sense of the Latin dux, a leader.

born of Judah, was evil in the sight of the LORD, and he slew him.

4 And [d]Tamar his daughter-in-law bare him [e]Pharez and [f]Zerah. All the sons of Judah were five.

5 The sons of Pharez; [g]Hezron, and Hamul.

6 And the sons of Zerah; [h]Zimri, and [i]Ethan, and Heman, and Calcol, and Dara: five of them in all.

7 And the sons of [k]Carmi; [l]Achar,[1] the troubler of Israel, who transgressed in the thing [m]accursed.

8 And the sons of Ethan; Azariah.

9 The sons also of Hezron, that were born unto him; [n]Jerahmeel, and Ram,[o] and [p]Chelubai.

10 And Ram begat [q]Amminadab; and Amminadab begat [r]Nahshon, prince of the children of Judah;

11 And Nahshon begat [s]Salma, and Salma begat Boaz, 12 And Boaz begat Obed, and Obed begat [t]Jesse.

13 ¶ And Jesse begat [u]his first-born Eliab,[v] and Abinadab the second, and Shimma[w] the third,

14 Nethaneel the fourth, Raddai the fifth,

15 Ozem the sixth, [x]David the seventh:[2]

16 Whose sisters were Zeruiah, and Abigail. And [y]the sons of Zeruiah; Abishai, and Joab, and Asahel, three.

17 And Abigail bare [z]Amasa; and the father of Amasa was [a]Jether the Ishmaelite.[3]

18 ¶ And [b]Caleb the son of Hezron begat children of Azubah[4] his wife, and of Jerioth: her sons are these; Jesher, and Shobab, and Ardon.

19 And when Azubah was dead, Caleb took unto him [c]Ephrath, which bare him Hur.

20 And Hur begat Uri, and Uri begat [d]Bezaleel.

21 ¶ And afterward Hezron went in to the daughter of [e]Machir, the father of Gilead, whom he married[5] when he was threescore years old, and she bare him Segub.

22 And Segub begat Jair, [f]who had three and twenty cities in the land of Gilead.

23 And he took [g]Geshur, and Aram, with the towns of Jair, from them, with Kenath, and the towns thereof, even threescore cities: all these belonged to the sons of Machir, the father[1] of Gilead.

24 And after that Hezron[2] was dead in [h]Caleb-ephratah, then Abiah, Hezron's wife, bare him [i]Ashur the father of [k]Tekoa.

25 ¶ And the sons of [l]Jerahmeel, the first-born of Hezron, were Ram the first-born, and Bunah, and Oren, and Ozem, and Ahijah.

26 Jerahmeel had also another wife, whose name was Atarah: she was the mother of Onam.

27 And the sons of [m]Ram, the first-born of Jerahmeel, were Maaz, and Jamin, and Eker.

28 And the sons of [n]Onam were Shammai, and Jada. And the sons of Shammai; Nadab, and Abishur.

29 And the name of the wife of Abishur was Abihail, and she bare him Ahban, and Molid.

30 And the sons of [o]Nadab; Seled, and Appaim; but Seled died without children.

31 And the sons of Appaim; Ishi. And the sons of Ishi; Sheshan. And [p]the children of Sheshan; Ahlai.

32 And the sons of Jada, the brother of Shammai; Jether, and Jonathan: and Jether died without children.

33 And the sons of Jonathan; Peleth, and Zaza. These were the sons of Jerahmeel.

34 ¶ Now Sheshan had no sons, but daughters: and Sheshan had a servant, an Egyptian, whose name was Jarha.

35 And [q]Sheshan gave his daughter to Jarha his servant[3] to wife, and she bare him Attai.

36 And Attai begat Nathan, and Nathan begat [r]Zabad,

37 And Zabad begat Ephlal, and Ephlal begat Obed,

38 And Obed begat Jehu, and Jehu begat Azariah,

39 And Azariah begat Helez, and Helez begat Eleasah,

40 And Eleasah begat Sisamai, and Sisamai begat Shallum, 41 And Shallum begat Jekamiah, and Jekamiah begat Elishama.

1 To be father of a city or country, is to be the father of its inhabitants, or its founder or chief ruler.
2 It will be observed that Hezron married the daughter of Machir, of the tribe of Manasseh, ver. 21. The fruit of this marriage was Segub, who had a son called Jair, who was not (as his paternal descent required,) reckoned in the tribe of Judah, but in the tribe of Manasseh, the tribe of his grandmother. In Nu. 32,40. he is distinctly called 'the son of Manasseh.' He must therefore, in right of his grandmother, have inherited in that tribe; and he actually did so, for his family received the villages called after him, Havoth-Jair, the villages of Jair. This change of tribe took place before the law of Moses directed that heiresses should marry in their own tribes, and that every one should inherit in his own tribe only; and we may suppose that so remarkable a case as the present of the contrary practice, was one of those that gave occasion to that determination. But from this instance, it seems that a man could not inherit in another tribe without taking his ground in that tribe decidedly & exclusively, as the representative of the family whose inheritance devolved on him.'—Kitto.

3 The object donbtless was to preserve the inheritance in the family. This is no uncommon circumstance in the East. 'Among the attendants of the Cambay Nabob, as also at Surat and other places, are several Abyssinian and Caffree slaves, called by way of courtesy, seddees or master. They are often promoted to great honour, richly apparelled, & furnished with horses, arms, and servants. This is customary among the Moguls, Turks, Persians, and Arabians, and especially the Mamelukes of Egypt, most of whom have ascended to their eminence from such an origin. The slaves who conduct themselves well find their chains light, are treated like near relatives, and are admitted to great confidence. They often obtain their freedom, and marry their masters' daughters.'—Forbes's Oriental Memoirs, v. 3. p. 67.

Rephaiah, the sons of Arnan, the sons of Obadiah, the sons of Shechaniah.

22 And the sons of Shechaniah; Shemaiah: and the sons of Shemaiah; Hattush,[w] and Igeal, and Bariah, and Neariah, and Shaphat, six.

23 And the sons of Neariah; Elioenai, and Hezekiah,[1] and Azrikam, three.

24 And the sons of Elioenai were Hodaiah, and Eliashib, and Pelaiah, and Akkub, and Johanan, and Dalaiah, and Anani, seven.

CHAPTER IV.

The posterity of Judah by Caleb the son of Hur, 1—4, 11. Of Ashur the posthumous son of Hezron, 5—8. Concerning Jabez, and his prayer, 9—20. The posterity of Shelah, 21—23. The posterity and cities of Simeon, 24—38. Their conquest of Gedor, and of the Amalekites in mount Seir, 39—43.

THE sons of Judah; [a]Pharez, Hezron, and [b]Carmi, and Hur, and Shobal.

2 And [c]Reaiah the son of Shobal begat Jahath, and Jahath begat Ahumai, and Lahad. These are the families of the [d]Zorathites.

3 And these were of the father of Etam;[e] Jezreel, and Ishma, and Idbash; and the name of their sister was Hazelelponi:

4 And Penuel the father of [f]Gedor, and Ezer the father of Hushah. These are the sons of [g]Hur, the first-born of Ephratah, the father of Beth-lehem.

5 ¶ And [h]Ashur, the father of Tekoa, had two wives, Helah and Naarah.

6 And Naarah bare him Ahuzam, and Hepher, and Temeni, and Haahashtari. These were the sons of Naarah.

7 And the sons of Helah were Zereth, and Jezoar, and Ethnan.

8 And Coz begat Anub, and Zobebah, and the families of Aharhel the son of Harum.

9 ¶ And Jabez[1] was [i]more honourable than his brethren: and his mother called his name Jabez,[2] saying, Because [k]I bare him with sorrow.

10 And Jabez [l]called on [m]the God of Israel, saying, Oh[3] that thou wouldest [n]bless me indeed, and [o]enlarge my coast, and that [p]thine hand might be with me, and that [q]thou wouldest keep[4] me from evil, [r]that it may not grieve me! And [s]God granted him that which he requested.

11 ¶ And Chelub, the brother of Shuah, begat Mehir, which was the father of Eshton.

12 And Eshton begat Beth-rapha, and Paseah, and Tehinnah the father of Ir-nahash.[1] These are the men of Rechah.

13 And the sons of [t]Kenaz;[2] Othniel, and Seraiah: and the sons of Othniel; Hathath.[3]

14 And Meonothai begat Ophrah: and Seraiah begat Joab, the father of the valley[4] of Charashim;[5] for they were craftsmen.

15 And the sons of [u]Caleb the son of Jephunneh; Iru, Elah, and Naam: and the sons of Elah, even Kenaz.[6]

16 And the sons of Jehaleleel; Ziph, and Ziphah, Tiria, and Asareel.

17 And the sons of Ezra were Jether, and Mered, and Epher, and Jalon: and she bare Miriam, and Shammai, and Ishbah the father of [v]Eshtemoa.

18 And his wife Jehudijah[7] bare Jered [w]the father of Gedor, and Heber the father of [x]Socho, and Jekuthiel the father of Zanoah. And these are the sons of Bithiah, the daughter of Pharaoh, which Mered took.

19 And the sons of his wife [8]Hodiah, the sister of Naham, the father of [y]Keilah the Garmite, and Eshtemoa the Maachathite.

20 And the sons of Shimon[9] were Amnon, and Rinnah, Ben-hanan, and Tilon. And the sons of Ishi were Zoheth, and Ben-zoheth.

21 ¶ The sons of [z]Shelah the son of Judah[10] were Er, the father of Lecah, and Laadah, the father of Mareshah, and the families of the house of them that wrought fine linen, of the house of Ashbea, 22 And Jokim, and the men of Chozeba, and Joash, and Saraph, who had the dominion in Moab, and Jashubilehem. And these are ancient [11]things.

23 These were [a]the potters,[12] and those that dwelt among plants and hedges: there they dwelt with the king for his work.

24 ¶ The sons of Simeon were [b]Nemuel, and Jamin, [c]Jarib, [d]Zerah, and Shaul:

1 Looking at the reason assigned for the imposition of his name, viz., because born bejatzeb, in sorrow, the letters seem to have been transposed to jabetz. Nothing is recorded concerning the parentage of this remarkable person. It must be supposed that he lived soon after Israel took possession of Canaan, and when they were greatly straitened by the remains of the ancient inhabitants. His achievements are not recorded, but his prayers are, for our instruction & imitation. He was a genuine son of Jacob, who wrestled and so prevailed with God, refusing to depart without a blessing. The Jews think that Jabez was an eminent doctor of the law, and that the scribes which dwelt at Jabez were his disciples. The Targum says he was called 'Jabets,' because in his counsel 'beytsatih,' he instituted a school for disciples, and that he was Othniel the son of Kenaz. 'This instructive example, in the midst of genealogies, to us so abstruse, seems like the fragrant rose, surrounded bythorns; or as refreshing streams in the desert; &it appears a recompense intended for the careful student of God's word, who diligently & reverently examines the whole, comparing one part with another, withoutdisregarding or undervaluing any.'

10 The sacred historian had mentioned the descendants of Judah by Zerah, and having more copiously given the genealogies of Judah's posterity by Pharez, he here mentions briefly a few or the line of Shelah the son of Judah by the Canaanitish woman whom he married.

11 Coverdale and Matthews, who are followed by Boothroyd, read ver. 22, 23 thus: 'And Jokim, and the men of Chozeba; and Joash, & Saraph, who sojourned in Moab, but returned to Bethlehem and Hadebasim—acthikim; these, and the inhabitants of Netaim & Gadera, were potters employed by the king in his own work.' This is partly countenanced by the Sept.

1 In Nu. 1. 23, the number of all the families of Simeon was 59,300; and that of Judah was (ver.27) not less than 74,600. When the next census was made, Nu. xxvi. the tribe of Judah amounted to 76,500, an increase of 1,900; while the tribe of Simeon amounted only to 22,200, a decrease of 37,100. It was at that time the smallest tribe in Israel.

3 It appears that David took some of the cities of the Simeonites, & added them to Judah, Ziklag for instance, 1 Sa. 27. 6. As the tribe of Simeon had withdrawn their allegiance from the house of David, the kings of Judah extended their domination as far as possible into the territories of that tribe; so that they were obliged to seek pasture for their flocks at Gedor, and in the mountains of Seir, as we find ver. 39, 42.

8 This expedition of the Simeonites took place in the days of Hezekiah; and, as Calmet conjectures, near the time of the captivity of the ten tribes, when the remnant of Simeon would feel themselves obliged to retire more southward into Arabia Petræa for fear of the Jews, and to seek pasture for their flocks. Or it is possible that on the revolt of the ten tribes, the ancestors of these persons had adhered to the family of David.

2 Or prince.

3 This is by both the Syriac and Arabic understood of Christ: 'from Judah the King Messiah shall proceed.' The Chaldee paraphrases the verse thus: 'Seeing Judah prevailed over his brethren, so the kingdom was taken from Reuben and given to Judah; and because he was strong so was his kingdom. Levi also was godly, & did not transgress in the matter of the golden calf, therefore the high-priesthood was taken away from the children of Reuben, and, on their account, from all the first-born, and given to Aaron and his sons.' The custody of the sanctuary belonged to the Levites, but the birth-right to Joseph.

1 There were three places of this name — the district of Sharon, between mount Tabor and the sea of Tiberias, — another, which lay between Cæsarea, and Joppa, celebrated by the Jewish Rabbins for its wines; and that mentioned here east of Jordan, in the country of Bashan. The name was used as an emblem of extraordinary beauty & fertility.

5 The descendants of the tenth and eleventh sons of Ishmael are here mentioned as tribes in alliance with the Hagarites, with whom the Reubenites, Gadites, and Manassites made war, in Saul's days, & overcame them. We infer from this that the Ituræans and Naphishæans lived in the neighbourhood of the Gadites; &, from the similarity of the former name, we naturally place them in Ituræa, that extensive hilly tract which separates Syria from the deserts of Arabia by several mountain ranges.

It is now called Jebel-esh-sheikh, & is comprised in the district of Kanneytra.

37 The son of Tahath, the son of Assir, the son of [c]Ebiasaph, the son of [d]Korah, 38 The son of Izhar, the son of Kohath, the son of Levi, the son of Israel.

39 And his brother [f]Asaph,[1] (who stood on his right hand,) even Asaph the son of Berachiah, the son of Shimea,

40 The son of Michael, the son of Baaseiah, the son of Malchiah,

41 The son of [g]Ethni, the son of Zerah, the son of [h]Adaiah,

42 The son of [i]Ethan, the son of Zimmah, the son of Shimei, 43 The son of [k]Jahath, the son of [l]Gershom, the son of Levi.

44 And their brethren, the sons of Merari, stood on the left hand: [m]Ethan the son of [n]Kishi, the son of Abdi, the son of Malluch,

45 The son of Hashabiah, the son of Amaziah, the son of Hilkiah,

46 The son of Amzi, the son of Bani, the son of Shamer, 47 The son of Mahli, the son of Mushi, the son of [o]Merari, the son of Levi.

48 Their [p]brethren also the Levites were appointed unto all manner of service of the tabernacle of the house of God.

49 ¶ But [q]Aaron and his sons offered upon the altar of the burnt-offering, and on the altar of incense, and were appointed for all the work of the place most holy, and to [r]make an atonement for Israel, according to all that [s]Moses,[2] the servant of God, had commanded.

1 'If God so care for the remembrance of Levites, singers, and ceremonial priests, how fixed in his book of life must be the names of those who are loved, and washed in Jesus' blood, & made kings and priests to him & his father.'—Brown. The principal persons who presided over the three families of Levi, till the time of David, seem to be mentioned in these verses. The marginal references contain the variation in the names given to the same persons, in different parts of sacred history, as far as it can be ascertained; and nearly the whole that is at present known concerning them, may be learned by carefully consulting them. Samuel the son of Elkanah was not a priest, but descended from Izhar, Aaron's uncle: yet, as a prophet he sacrificed personally, and not by the ministration of the priests.

1 This is one of the most ancient cities mentioned in scripture, or perhaps in the records of the world. It is now called El-Khulil, i. e. 'The Friend,' from its having been the residence of Abraham 'the friend of God.' Dr Robinson says, (Biblical Researches, vol. 1. p. 315); 'The town lies low down on the sloping sides of a deep narrow valley, chiefly on the eastern, but in the southern part extends across to the western side. The houses are all of stone, high & well built, with windows & flat roofs, and on these roofs small domes, and sometimes two or three to each house; a mode of building apparently peculiar to Judea, for I do not remember to have seen it further north than Nablous. This gave to the city, in our eyes, a new and rathers triking aspect.' The population is estimated at not much under 10,000 souls. The most remarkable object in Hebron is the great Haram, or court of the mosque, which is supposed to cover the cave of Machpelah, the sepulchre of Abraham.

1 None of the Lord's people, and especially of his ministers, should be unemployed; they who through want of ability or change of circumstances, are precluded from one method of glorifying God, should set themselves to devise another. And if they deem nothing which may conduce to the advancement of true religion too laborious, mean, disgusting or discouraging, if they be disposed to be instant in season & out of season, to instruct or encourage, one, ten, or ten thousand, in public or in private, in a cottage, an hospital, a prison, or a palace; in safe and easy, or in difficult or perilous circumstance; if they consider nothing too little to be attended to, and nothing too arduous to be attempted, & if they do all in sincerity, humility and simplicity of spirit, they cannot long be unoccupied or useless.'—Scott.

2 When David numbered the people, the effective men of Issachar amounted to 87,000, 22,600 of whom descended from Tola, his oldest son; but whether the 36,000 mentioned at ver. 4, were descendants of Tola by Uzzi, and the 22,600, ver. 3, his descendants by Tola's other sons; or whether another of Issachar's sons is intended, does not clearly appear. If the former be meant, (which seems the more obvious meaning), by far the greatest part of the tribe of Issachar descended from Tola.

Rephaiah, and Jeriel, and Jahmai, and Jibsam, and Shemuel, heads of their father's house, to wit, of Tola: they were valiant men of might in their generations; [b]whose number was, in the days of David,[1] two and twenty thousand and six hundred.

3 And the sons of Uzzi; Izrahiah: and the sons of Izrahiah; Michael, and Obadiah, and Joel, Ishiah, five:[2] all of them chief men.

4 And [c]with them, by their generations, after the house of their fathers, were bands of soldiers for war, six and thirty thousand men: for they had many wives and sons.

5 And their brethren, among all the families of Issachar, were valiant men of might,[3] reckoned in all, by their genealogies, fourscore and seven thousand.

6 ¶ The sons[4] [d]of Benjamin; Bela, and Becher, and [e]Jediael, three.

7 And the sons of Bela;[5] Ezbon, and Uzzi, and Uzziel, and Jerimoth, and Iri, five; heads of the house of their fathers, mighty men of valour; and [f]were reckoned by their genealogies twenty and two thousand and thirty and four.

8 And the sons of Becher; Zemira, and Joash, and Eliezer, and Elioenai, and Omri, and Jerimoth, and Abiah, and Anathoth, and Alameth. All these are the sons of Becher.

9 And the number of them, after their genealogy by their generations, heads of the house of their fathers, mighty men of valour, was twenty thousand and two hundred.

10 The sons also of Jediael; Bilhan: and the sons of Bilhan; Jeush, and Benjamin, and [g]Ehud, and Chenaanah, and Zethan, and Tharshish, and Ahishahar.

11 All these the sons of Jediael, by the heads of their fathers, mighty men of valour, were seventeen thousand and two hundred[6] soldiers, fit to go out for war and battle.

12 [h]Shuppim also, and Huppim, the children of [i]Ir, and Hushim, the sons of [k]Aher.[7]

13 ¶ The sons of Naphtali; [l]Jahziel, and Guni, and Jezer, and [m]Shallum, the[n] sons of Bilhah.

14 ¶ The sons of Manasseh; Ashriel, whom she bare;[1] (but his concubine the Aramitess bare [o]Machir the father of Gilead:

15 And Machir[2] took to wife the sister of [p]Huppim and [3]Shuppim, whose sister's name was Maachah;) and the name of the second was Zelophehad; and [q]Zelophehad had daughters.

16 And Maachah, the wife of Machir, bare a son, and she called his name Peresh; and the name of his brother was Sheresh; and his sons were Ulam and Rakem.

17 And the sons of Ulam; [r]Bedan. These were the sons of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh.

18 And his sister Hammoleketh bare Ishod, and [s]Abiezer, and Mahalah.

19 And the sons of Shemida were Ahian, and Shechem, and Likhi, and Aniam.

20 ¶ And [t]the sons of Ephraim; Shuthelah, and Bered his son, and Tahath his son, and Eladah his son, and Tahath his son, 21 And Zabad his son, and Shuthelah his son, and Ezer, and Elead, whom the men of Gath that were born in that land slew, because they came down to take away their cattle.

22 And Ephraim[4] their father [u]mourned many days, and his brethren came to comfort him.

23 ¶ And when he went in to his wife, she conceived, and bare a son, and [v]he called his name Beriah,[5] because it went evil with his house.

24 (And his daughter was Sherah, who built [w]Beth-horon the nether, and the upper, and Uzzen-sherah.)

25 And Rephah was his son, also Resheph, and Telah his son, and Tahan his son,

26 Laadan his son, Ammihud his son, Elishama his son,

27 [x]Non his son, [y]Jehoshua his son.

28 ¶ And their possessions and habitations were, [z]Beth-el and the towns thereof, and eastward [a]Naaran, and westward [b]Gezer, with the [6]towns thereof; Shechem also and the towns thereof, unto Gaza and the towns thereof:

1 This was probably the number reported by Joab & his assistants, when they made that census of the people with which God was so much displeased.

2 The Syriac and Arabic read four, in place of five as in the text. As four only are mentioned, if five be the true reading, it is probable that Izrahiah is reckoned with his four sons.

4 In Ge. 46. 21, ten sons of Benjamin are reckoned; in Nu. 26. 38, only five, and Ard and Naaman are there said to be sons of Bela, and consequently grandsons of Benjamin. In the beginning of the following chapter, five sons of Benjamin are alone registered. From this it is evident that in these genealogical rolls sons and grandsons are often confounded. To attempt to reconcile such discrepancies were a task as endless as it would be useless. It is our comfort to know, that these are matters which do not affect the essentials either of faith or practice.

4 The name of Ephraim has been substituted for that of Zabad, for it is impossible that Ephraim should then have been alive to mourn over the seventh generation of his descendants. This was exactly such a freebooting expedition as Bedouin shepherds are at this day prone to undertake; & considering that it was undertaken in the most bitter days of the 'bondage,' it may probably have been entered upon with the view of convincing the Egyptians, that no such good understanding existed between the Israelites and the Philistines, as appears to have been made one of the reasons or pretences for their oppression. It shows that this tribe entered into the Bedouin character with great spirit, and that the Hebrews in Goshen understood & entered into the Egyptian policy, as against the Philistines for the prosecution of which the occupation of that land had been assigned to them.

3 Many great and mighty nations were at this period upon the earth, and many illustrious men in them, whose names are buried in perpetual oblivion; while the names of multitudes of the Israel of God are here carefully preserved in everlasting remembrance. These are Jeshurum,—'just ones,' and the memory of the just is blessed. Yet many of those here recorded, we have reason to fear came short of everlasting honour, for even the wicked kings of Judah come into this genealogy. The perpetuating of their names here was a figure of the writing of the names of all God's spiritual Israel in the Lamb's book of life. May this be the privilege of every reader,however unnoticed in the histories of the world, or the rolls of human fame!

4 The tribe of Benjamin adhered to Judah in the division of the kingdom, and returned with the Jews from Babylon ; & as the history is about to open with the translation of the kingdom from Saul of that tribe, to David of Judah, we have here a more copious account given of it than of several other tribes. But either some of the sons of Benjamin had several names, or those called his sons were his more remote descendants. Gera, called his son in Genesis, is here mentioned as his grandson by Bela, and the whole subsequent genealogy is very obscure.

1 As Gibeah and Geba are only the masculine & feminine form of the same word,(meaning 'hill,') some think them the same; but that they were two distinct places is evident from Jos. 18.24; comp. 5. 28; 1 Sa. 13. 2; comp. 5. 3. Robinson says, in his Biblical Researches, (vol. 2.p.114). 'In respect to Geba, I was for some time in doubt whether it is to be regarded as the ancient Gibeah of Saul, or the Geba of scripture. Both these places are described as lying over against Michmash towards the south, across a 'passage' which proves to be a very deep and rugged valley. Gibeah also was situated near to Ramah, & it would follow that Geba must have been somewhat further down towards the east, upon the same high ridge of land. The name Jeba corresponds more directly to the form Geba; & did there exist any traces of an ancient site between the present Jeba and Er-Ram, (Ramah,) should have had no hesitation in regarding that as the site of Gibeah of Saul, and making Jeba & Geba identical.

4 Jerusalem, Jebus, or Salem, the ancient capital of Judea, is situated 136 miles S.W. of Damascus, thirty-four S. of Shechem or Nablous, forty-five E. of Jaffa, twenty-seven N. of Hebron, and about twenty W. of Jericho. It was built on & surrounded by mountains, in a stony and barren soil, & was about sixteen furlongs in length.--Strabo i. 16. The ancient city of Jebus, taken by David from the Jebusites, was not large, and stood on a mountain south of that on which the temple was erected. Between lay the valley of Millo, filled up by David and Solomon. The Maccabees considerably enlarged Jerusalem on the north, inclosing a third hill; and Josephus mentions a fourth hill called Bezetha which Agrippa joined to the former. This new city lay north of the temple, along the brook Kidron —See Note ch. 9. 3.

29 And at Gibeon dwelt [s]the father of Gibeon, whose wife's name was Maachah;

30 And his first-born son [t]Abdon, and Zur, and Kish, and Baal, and Nadab,

31 And Gedor, and Ahio, and Zacher.[u]

32 And Mikloth begat [v]Shimeah. And these also dwelt with their brethren in Jerusalem, over against them.

33 And [w]Ner begat [x]Kish, and Kish begat Saul, and [y]Saul begat Jonathan,[1] and Malchi-shua, and [z]Abinadab, and Esh-baal.[a]

34 And the son of Jonathan was Merib-baal;[b2] and Merib-baal begat Micah.[c]

35 And the sons of Micah were, Pithon, and Melech, and [d]Tarea, and Ahaz.

36 And Ahaz begat [e]Jehoadah; and Jehoadah begat Alemeth, and Azmaveth, and Zimri; and Zimri begat Moza;

37 And Moza begat Binea: [f]Rapha was his son, Eleasah his son, Azel his son.

38 And Azel had six sons, whose names are these, Azrikam, Bocheru, and Ishmael, and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and Hanan. All these were the sons of Azel.

39 And the sons of Eshek his brother were Ulam his first-born, Jehush the second, and Eliphelet the third.

40 And the sons of Ulam were mighty men of valour, [g]archers, and had [h]many sons, and sons' sons, an hundred and fifty. All these are of the sons of Benjamin.[3]

CHAPTER IX.

Concerning the original register of Israel's and Judah's genealogies, 1. The Israelites, 2—9; the priests, 10—13; and the Levites, with the Nethinims, which dwelt in Jerusalem, 14—26. The charge of certain Levites, 27—34. The stock of Saul and Jonathan, 35—44.

SO [a]all Israel[4] were reckoned by genealogies; and, behold, they were written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah, who were [b]carried away to Babylon for their transgression.[5]

2 ¶ Now [c]the first[6] inhabitants, that dwelt in their possessions in their cities, were the Israelites, the priests, Levites, and [d]the Nethinims.

3 ¶ And [e]in Jerusalem[1] dwelt of the children of Judah, and of the children of Benjamin, and [f]of the children of Ephraim, and Manasseh;

4 Uthai the son of Ammihud, the son of Omri, the son of Imri, the son of [g]Bani, of the children of [h]Pharez the son of Judah.

5 And of the [i]Shilonites; Assaiah the first-born, and his sons.

6 And of the sons of [k]Zerah; Jeuel and their brethren, six hundred and ninety.

7 And of the sons of Benjamin; [l]Sallu the son of Meshullam, the son of Hodaviah, the son of Hasenuah,

8 And Ibneiah the son of Jeroham, and Elah the son of Uzzi, the son of Michri, and Meshullam the son of Shephatiah, the son of Reuel, the son of Ibnijah;

9 And their brethren, according to their generations, nine hundred and fifty and six. All these men were chief of the fathers in the house of their fathers.

10 ¶ And of the priests; Jedaiah, and [m]Jehoiarib, and Jachin,

11 And [n]Azariah[2] the son of Hilkiah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Zadok, the son of Meraioth, the son of Ahitub, [o]the ruler of the house of God;

12 And Adaiah[3] the son of Jeroham, the son of Pashur, the son of Malchijah, and Maasiah the son of Adiel, the son of Jahzerah, the son of Meshullam, the son of [p]Meshillemith, the son of [q]Immer;

13 And their brethren, heads of the house of their fathers, a thousand and seven hundred and threescore; [4]very able men for the work of the service of the house of God.

14 ¶ And of the Levites; [r]Shemaiah the son of Hashub, the son of Azrikam, the son of [s]Hashabiah, [t]of the sons of Merari;

15 And Bakbakkar, Heresh, and Galal, and [u]Mattaniah the son of Micah, the son of [v]Zichri, the son of Asaph;

5 It is here intimated that one object of recording all these genealogies was to direct the Jews, when they returned from captivity, with whom to incorporate as a people and where to reside. Whenever we speak of any calamity that has befallen us, it is good to add (as here,) 'It was for my transgression,' that God may be justified when we are condemned.

1 We have seen (Note ch. 8. 28;) the situation and extent of this ancient city, but the Jerusalem of sacred history is no more. It was successively destroyed by the Babylonians & Romans, and taken by the Saracens, Crusaders and Turks, the latter of whom still possess it, and now not a vestige remains of the capital of David and Solomon, not a monument of Jewish times is standing. Thevery course of the walls is changed, & the boundaries of the ancient city are become doubtful. The modern Jerusalem, called by the Arabs El Koudz, or 'the holy city,' is a town of an irregular shape; it is surrounded by high embattled walls,enclosing an area not exceeding two and a half miles. The most elaborate description that has yet appeared is that of Dr Robinson, in his Biblical Researches in Palestine, &c. He estimates the standing population at about 11,000, viz. Mahommedans, 4500: Jews, 3000: Christians, 3500. They dwell in separate quarters, according to their religion. The Christian quarter extends along the upper or western part of the city; the Jewish is in the N.E. part of Zion; the Mahommedan in the lower and middle parts of the city.

Asa, the son of Elkanah, that dwelt in the villages of the [y]Netophathites.

17 And [z]the porters were Shallum, and Akkub, and Talmon, and Ahiman, and their brethren: [a]Shallum was the chief;

18 (Who hitherto waited in [b]the king's gate[1] eastward;) [c]they were porters in the companies of the children of Levi.

19 And Shallum the son of Kore, the son of [d]Ebiasaph, the son of [e]Korah, and his brethren, of the house of his father, the Korahites, were over the work of the service, keepers of the gates[2] of the tabernacle:[3] and their fathers, being [f]over the host of the LORD, [g]were keepers of the entry.

20 And [h]Phinehas the son of Eleazar was the ruler over them in time past, and [i]the LORD[4] was with him.

21 [k]And[5] Zechariah the son of Meshelemiah was porter of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

22 All these which were chosen to be porters in the gates were two hundred and twelve. These were reckoned by their genealogy [l]in their villages, whom [m]David and [n]Samuel[6] the seer did[7] ordain in their set office.[8]

23 So they and their children had the[o] oversight ot the gates of the house of the LORD, namely, the house of the tabernacle, by wards.

24 In [p]four quarters were the porters, toward the east, west, north, and south.

25 And their brethren, which were in their villages, were to come after seven[q] days from time to time with them.

26 For these Levites, the four chief porters, were in their set office,[9] and were over the chambers[10] [r]and treasuries of the house of God.

27 ¶ And they lodged round about the house of God, because [s]the charge was upon them, and [t]the opening thereof every morning pertained to them.

28 And certain of them had [u]the charge of the ministering vessels, that they should bring[11] them in and out by tale.

29 Some of them also were appointed to oversee the vessels, and all the instruments[1] of the sanctuary, and the fine flour, and the wine, and [v]the oil, and [w]the frankincense, and the spices.

30 And some [x]of the sons of the priests made the ointment of the spices.

31 And Mattithiah, one of the Levites, (who was the first-born of [y]Shallum the Korahite,) had the set [2]office over the things that were made in the pans.[3]

32 And other of their brethren, of [z]the sons of the Kohathites, were over the shew-bread,[4] [a]to prepare it every sabbath.

33 And these are [b]the [5]singers, chief of the fathers of the Levites, who remaining in the chambers [c]were free; for they[6] were [d]employed in that work day and night.

34 These [e]chief fathers of the Levites were chief throughout their generations: these dwelt at Jerusalem.

35 ¶ And [f]in Gibeon dwelt [g]the father of Gibeon, Jehiel, whose wife's name was Maachah:

36 And his first-born son Abdon, then Zur, and [h]Kish, and Baal, and Ner, and Nadab, 37 And Gedor, and Ahio, and [i]Zechariah, and Mikloth.

38 And Mikloth begat [k]Shimeam: and they also dwelt with their brethren at Jerusalem, over against their brethren.

39 And [l]Ner begat Kish, and Kish begat Saul, [m]and Saul begat Jonathan, and Malchi-shua, and Abinadab, and [n]Esh-baal.

40 And the son of Jonathan was [o]Merib-baal: and Merib-baal begat Micah.

41 And the sons of Micah were Pithon, and Melech, and Tahrea, and Ahaz.[7]

42 And Ahaz begat [p]Jarah; and Jarah begat Alemeth, and Azmaveth, and Zimri; and Zimri begat Moza;

43 And Moza begat Binea; and [q]Rephaiah his son, Eleasah his son, Azel his son.

44 And Azel[8] had six sons, whose names are these, Azrikam, Bocheru, and Ishmael, and Sheariah, and Obadiah, and Hanan. These were the sons of Azel.

Indeed the sanctuary at first was only a tent or tabernacle when Phinehas superintended it in time past; yet the Lord was with him. This seems to have been mentioned as an instruction and encouragement to the priests & Levites in the times of Ezra and Nehemiah: for there can be no reasonable doubt that Phinehas, the grandsonof Aaron, was intended.

5 The Syriac reads, 'keepers.' This, Boothroyd thinks, is more clear and consistentwith the narrative than the common version, yet the latter gives also a very congruous sense. 'Thus was God continually praised, as it is fit He should be who is continually doing us good. Thus devout people might at any time have assistance in their devotion. Thus was that temple a figure of the heavenly one, where they praise God 'day & night, and go out no more.' Residence, labour, and zeal, says Brown, are indispensably required from every minister of God; and, if they begin with God, they may hope to prosper in their undertakings. Happy is it for the church when every one knows and waits on his proper work, and when the meanest offices and services are reckoned truly honourable. Better be doorkeepers in the house of God than dwell in palaces of wickedness. It is pleasant to be always rejoicing in and praising God, who is continually loading us with his benefits; for it is a blessed token that we shall praise him without ceasing in the temple above.

CHAPTER X.

Saul's overthrow and death, 1—7. The Philistines triumph over Saul, 8—10. The kindness shown by the men of Jabesh-gilead toward Saul and his sons, 11, 12. Saul's sin; for which the kingdom was translated from him to David, 13, 14.

NOW[1] [a]the Philistines fought against Israel; and the men of Israel fled from before the Philistines, and fell down slain[2] in [b]mount Gilboa.

2 And the Philistines followed hard after Saul, and after his sons; and the Philistines slew [c]Jonathan, and [d]Abinadab, and Malchi-shua, [e]the sons of Saul.

3 And the battle [f]went sore against Saul, and the archers[3] hit him,[4] and he[g] was wounded of the archers.

4 Then said Saul to his armour-bearer, [h]Draw thy sword, and thrust me through therewith, lest these [i]uncircumcised come and abuse[5] me. But his armour-bearer would not; for [k]he was sore afraid. So [l]Saul took a sword, and fell upon it.

5 And when his armour-bearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell likewise on the sword, and died.

6 So [m]Saul died, and his three sons, and all his house[6] died together.

7 And when all the men of Israel that were in the valley saw that they fled, and that Saul and his sons were dead, [n]then they forsook their cities, and fled: and the Philistines came and dwelt in them.

8 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, when the Philistines came to[o] strip the slain, that they found Saul and his sons fallen in mount Gilboa.

9 And when they had stripped him, they [p]took his head, and his armour, and sent into the land of the Philistines round about, to carry [q]tidings unto their idols, and to the people.

10 And they put his armour[7] in the house of [r]their gods, and fastened his head [s]in the temple of Dagon.

11 ¶ And when [t]all Jabesh-gilead[8] heard all that the Philistines had done to Saul, 12 They arose, all the valiant men, and took away the body of Saul, and the bodies of his sons, and brought them to Jabesh, and buried their bones under [u]the oak in Jabesh, and [v]fasted seven days.

13 ¶ So Saul died for his transgression, which he committed[1] against the LORD, [w]even against the word of the LORD, which he kept not, and also for [x]asking counsel of one that had [y]a familiar spirit, to enquire of it;

14 And [z]enquired not of the LORD: therefore [a]he slew him, and [b]turned the kingdom unto David the son of Jesse.[2]

CHAPTER XI.

David by a general consent is made king over Israel at Hebron, 1—3. He winneth the castle of Zion from the Jebusites by Joab's valour, 4—9. A catalogue of David's mighty men, 10—47.

THEN [a]all Israel gathered themselves to David unto [b]Hebron, saying, [c]Behold, we are thy bone and thy flesh.

2 And moreover, in time [3]past, even when Saul was king, thou wast he [d]that leddest out and broughtest in Israel; and the LORD thy God said unto thee, [e]Thou shalt feed[4] my people Israel, and thou shalt be [f]ruler over my people Israel.

3 Therefore came all the [g]elders of Israel to the king to Hebron; and [h]David made a covenant with them in Hebron [i]before the LORD; and they [k]anointed David king over Israel, [l]according to the word of the LORD by Samuel.[5]

4 ¶ And [m]David and all Israel went to Jerusalem, which is [n]Jebus, where the Jebusites were, [o]the inhabitants of the land.

5 And the inhabitants of Jebus said to David, [p]Thou shalt not come hither. Nevertheless David took [q]the castle of Zion, which is [r]the city of David.

6 And David said, [s]Whosoever smiteth the Jebusites first shall be chief[6] and captain. [t]So Joab the son of Zeruiah went first up, and was chief.

7 And [u]David dwelt in the castle; therefore they called it[7] the city of David.

8 And he built the city round about, even from [v]Millo[8] round about: and Joab repaired[9] the rest of the city.

9 So David waxed[10] greater and greater: [w]for the LORD of hosts was with him.

1 The chief design of this book was to preserve the records of the house of David, which, though to a common eye much diminished by the captivity, yet grew more and more illustrious in the eyes of those who lived by faith, by the nearer approach of the Son of David. The writer, therefore, repeats not the history of Saul's reign, but only of his death, which paved the way for David's accession. The reader will find the same history in almost the same words in 1 Sa. 31. 1-13, to the Notes on which he is referred for every thing important here.

He selected Jerusalem as his metropolis, because a more central situation would have placed him in the hands of the turbulent and ambitious Ephraimites, upon whom little dependence could then be placed.

7 As a thank-offering for the blood or life of his devoted captains preserved. To make libations, both of water and wine, was a frequent custom among the heathen. We have a similar story in Arrian's Life of Alexander. When his army was greatly oppressed with heat & thirst a soldier brought him a cup of water; he ordered it to be carried back, saying, 'I cannot bear to drink alone while so many are in want, and this cup is too small to be divided among the whole.' The example was noble in both cases, but David added piety to self-denial.

CHAPTER XII.

The companies that came to David at Ziglag, 1—22. The armies that came to him at Hebron, 23—40.

NOW[2] [a]these are they that came to David to Ziklag, while he yet kept himself close[3] because of [b]Saul the son of Kish; and they were among the[c] mighty men, helpers of the war.

2 They were armed with bows, and could[d] use both the right hand and the left [e]in hurling stones, and shooting arrows out of a bow, even of Saul's brethren of Benjamin.

3 The chief was Ahiezer, then Joash, the sons of Shemaah[4] the [f]Gibeathite, and Jeziel, and Pelet,[5] the sons of Azmaveth,[g] and Berachah, and Jehu the [h]Antothite,

4 And Ismaiah the [i]Gibeonite, [k]a mighty man among the thirty, and over the thirty; and Jeremiah, and Jahaziel, and Johanan, and Josabad the Gederathite,[l]

5 Eluzai, and Jerimoth, and Bealiah, and Shemariah, and Shephatiah the Haruphite,

6 Elkanah, and Jesiah, and Azareel, and Joezer, and Jashobeam, the Korhites,

7 And Joelah and Zebadiah, the sons of Jeroham of [m]Gedor.

8 And of the Gadites there separated themselves unto David, [n]into the hold to the wilderness, men of might, and men of war[6] fit for the battle, that could [o]handle shield and buckler, whose[p] faces were like the faces of lions, and were as[7] [q]swift as the roes upon the mountains;

9 Ezer the first, Obadiah the second, Eliab the third,

10 Mishmannah the fourth, Jeremiah the fifth,

11 Attai the sixth, Eliel the seventh,

12 Johanan the eighth, Elzabad the ninth,

13 Jeremiah the tenth, Machbanai the eleventh.

14 These were of the sons of Gad, captains of the host: one[1] of the least was over an hundred, and the greatest over a thousand.

15 These are they that went over Jordan in the first month,[2] when [r]it had overflown[3] all his banks; and they put to flight all them of the valleys, both toward the east, and toward the west.

16 And there came of [s]the children of Benjamin and Judah to [t]the hold unto David.

17 And David went out to [4]meet them, and answered and said unto them, [u]If ye be come peaceably unto me to help me, [v]mine heart shall be [5]knit unto you: but if ye be come to betray me to mine enemies, seeing there is no wrong[6] in mine hands, [w]the God of our fathers look thereon, and [x]rebuke it.

18 Then [y]the Spirit came[7] upon [z]Amasai,[8] who was chief of the captains, and he said, [a]Thine are we, David, [b]and on thy side, thou son of Jesse: [c]peace, peace be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers; for [d]thy God helpeth thee. Then David received them, and made them [e]captains of the band.

19 And there fell some of Manasseh to David, [f]when he came with the Philistines against Saul to battle; but they helped them not: for the lords of the Philistines, upon advisement, sent him away, saying, He will fall to his master Saul to the jeopardy[9] of our heads.

20 As he [g]went to Ziklag, there fell to him of Manasseh,[10] Adnah, and Jozabad, and Jediael, and Michael, and Jozabad, and Elihu, and Zilthai, [h]captains of the thousands that were of Manasseh.

21 And they helped David [11]against [i]the band of the rovers: for they were all [k]mighty men of valour, and were captains in the host.

22 For at that time, [l]day by day, there came to David to help him, until CHAP. XII.

2 The writer here goes back to the times which preceded the death of Saul, and records some particulars not mentioned in the books of Samuel, respecting David's advancement to the throne. Several considerable persons resorted to him at Ziklag: and either joined his small troop, or assured him of assistance when it became necessary. Some of these were Benjamites, and related to Saul, who were either induced through a firm belief of the word of God by Samuel respecting him; or by indignation at the base treatment which David met with from Saul, to the disgrace of their family and tribe; or because they perceived that the Lord was departed from Saul, and was with David of a truth. The hand of God was, however, very conspicuous, in raising him up friends from this tribe, whence he might have expected the most determined opposition.

3 Heb. being yet shut up. The expression shut up, so often applied to the extermination of Eastern royal families, (De. 32. 36; 1 Ki. 14. 10; 21. 21; 2Ki.9.8, 14,26.) strictly speaking, refers to the case when some of them had secured themselves in an impregnable fortress, or in places of great secrecy, from the usurper. But the term is used in a more extensive sense for those who had fled to foreign countries to escape being slain; thus it is here applied to David. Ziklag is described as a town in the country, and was probably an unwalled town; and it is certain he did not confine himself to it, but was continually making excursions from thence. 2 The Septuagint and Vulgate understand this only to mean that 'it was full up to all its banks,' i. e. it filled its whole channel; and so Luther. Professor Robinson adopts this idea (Biblical Researches, vol. ii. p. 262) and thinks that the ancient rise of the river has been greatly exaggerated. Yet where the banks are low, it does sometimes overflow them, and if the inundations are less extensive than formerly, it may be from the river having worn to itself a deeper channel. See Paxton's Letters on Palestine. The passage of the river by the captains of Gad, at this particular season, is mentioned by the historian as an additional proof of their heroism.

it was a great host, like [m]the host[1] of God.

23 ¶ And these are [n]the numbers of the bands[2] that were ready armed to the war, and came to David to Hebron,[3] [o]to turn the kingdom of Saul to him, [p]according to the word of the LORD.

24 The children of Judah, that bare shield and spear, were six thousand and eight hundred, ready armed[4] to the war.

25 Of the children of Simeon, mighty men of valour for the war, seven thousand and one hundred.

26 Of the children of Levi, four thousand and six hundred.

27 And Jehoiada[5] was [q]the leader of the [r]Aaronites, and with him were three thousand and seven hundred;

28 And [s]Zadok, a young man mighty of valour, and of his father's house twenty and two captains.

29 And of the children of Benjamin, the kindred[6] of Saul, three thousand: for hitherto the greatest[7] part of them had kept the ward of the house of Saul.

30 And of the children of Ephraim twenty thousand and eight hundred, mighty men of valour, famous[8] throughout the house of their fathers.

31 And of [t]the half-tribe of Manasseh eighteen thousand, which were expressed by name, to come and make David king.

32 And of the children of Issachar, which were men that had [u]understanding of the times,[9] [v]to know what Israel ought to do: the heads of them were two hundred; and [w]all their brethren were at their commandment.

33 Of Zebulun, such as went forth to battle, expert[10] in war, with all instruments of war, fifty thousand which could keep rank:[11] they were not[12] of double heart.[13]

34 And of Naphtali a thousand captains, and with them, with shield and spear, thirty and seven thousand.

35 And of the Danites, expert in war, twenty and eight thousand and six hundred.

36 And of Asher, such as went forth to battle, expert[14] in war, forty thousand.

37 And on [x]the other side of Jordan, of the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and of the half tribe of Manasseh, with all manner of instruments of war for the battle, an hundred and twenty thousand.

38 All these men of war, that could keep rank, came [y]with a perfect heart to Hebron, to make David king over all Israel: and [z]all the rest also of Israel were of one heart to make David king.

39 And there they were with David three days, [a]eating and drinking: for their brethren had prepared for them.

40 Moreover, they that were nigh them, even unto Issachar, and Zebulun, and Naphtali, brought [b]bread on asses, and on camels, and on mules, and on oxen,[1] and meat,[2] meal, [c]cakes of figs, and bunches of raisins, and wine, and oil, and oxen, and sheep abundantly; for there was joy in Israel.

CHAPTER XIII.

David fetcheth the ark with great solemnity from Kirjath-jearim, 1—8. Uzza being smitten, the ark is left at the house of Obed-edom, 9—14.

AND David [a]consulted with the captains of thousands and hundreds, and with every leader.

2 And David said unto all the congregation of Israel, [b]If it seem good unto you, [c]and that it be of the LORD our God, let us send[3] abroad unto our brethren every where, that are [d]left in all the land of Israel, and with them also to [e]the priests and Levites which are in their cities[4] and suburbs, that they may gather themselves unto us:

3 And let us bring[5] again [f]the ark of our God to us: for [g]we enquired not at it in the days of Saul.

4 And all the congregation said that they would do so: for [h]the thing was right in the eyes of all the people.

5 So [i]David gathered all Israel together, from [k]Shihor of Egypt even unto the entering of [l]Hemath,[6] to bring the ark of God from [m]Kirjath-jearim.

6 And David went up, and all Israel, to [n]Baalah, that is, to Kirjath-jearim, which belonged to Judah, to bring up thence the ark of God the LORD, [o]that dwelleth between the cherubims, [p]whose name is called on it.

9 The Jewish commentators hold the absurd opinion, that 'by understanding of the times,' was meant astronomy, as forming the basis of chronology in the division of months, years, &c. But of what service would a body of scientific chronologists have been in furthering David's claims to the throne of Israel? besides, that the knowledge of new moons and other sacred seasons, was the special business of the priests. The Syr. and Arab. give the sense that these Issacharites were 'the wisest men of their own time, and did good and right works before the Lord.' They were intelligent men, who understood the signs of the times, and perceived that it was both the duty and political interest of Israel to advance David to the throne.

But the Sept. and Vulg. read the original word so as to make the clause mean, that the men of Zebulun came to assist David, not that they could keep rank.

The form of back in these animals does not adapt them for this service, but in the East they are still required to perform it, and they do it well, though in their deliberate and quiet way. Greek writers intimate the same use of oxen. At present, in different parts of Asia, they are employed for riding, burden, or draught. Their use as beasts of burden, is still more extensive, and is not unknown in Europe or Africa, but in Western Asia at least, they are not employed in caravans or long journeys, but by the peasantry in the conveyance of goods to and from the villages and towns of a district or province. They are also employed for draught more than any other animals in Asia. At Constantinople they draw the ornamented arabah. The carts of the peasantry are drawn by oxen. Abinadab: and Uzza and Ahio drave the cart.

8 And [s]David and all Israel played before God with all their might, and with singing,[1] and with harps, and with psalteries, and with timbrels, and with cymbals, and with trumpets.

9 ¶ And when they came unto the threshing-floor of [u]Chidon, Uzza put forth[2] his hand to hold the ark; for the oxen stumbled.[3]

10 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Uzza, and he smote him, because [v]he put his hand to the ark: and [w]there he died before God.

11 And David was [x]displeased,[4] because the LORD had made a breach upon Uzza: wherefore that place is called Perez-uzza[5] [y]to this day.

12 And David was [z]afraid of God that day, saying, [a]How shall I bring the ark of God home to me?

13 So David brought[6] not the ark home to himself to the city of David, but carried it aside into the house of Obed-edom[b] [c]the Gittite.[7]

14 And the ark of God remained with the family of Obed-edom in his house three months. And [d]the LORD blessed the house of Obed-edom, and all that he had.

NOW [a]Hiram king of Tyre sent messengers to David, [b]and timber of cedars, with masons and carpenters,[c] to build him an house.

2 ¶ And David perceived that [d]the LORD had confirmed him king over Israel; for [e]his kingdom was lifted up on high, [f]because of his people Israel.[8]

3 ¶ And David [g]took more[9] wives at Jerusalem:[10] and David begat more sons and daughters.

4 Now these are the names of his children which he had in Jerusalem; Shammua,[h] and Shobab, [i]Nathan, and Solomon,[k]

5 And Ibhar, and [l]Elishua, and Elpalet,

6 And Nogah, and Nepheg, and Japhia,

7 And Elishama, and [m]Beeliada,[11] and [n]Eliphalet.

8 ¶ And [o]when the Philistines heard that David was [p]anointed king over all Israel, [q]all the Philistines went up to seek David: and David heard of it, and went out against them.

9 And the Philistines came[1] and spread themselves in [r]the valley of Rephaim.[2]

10 And David [s]enquired of God, saying, [t]Shall I go up against the Philistines? and wilt thou deliver them into mine hand? And the LORD said unto him, [u]Go up; for I will deliver them into thine hand.

11 So they came up to [v]Baal-perazim; and David smote them there. Then David said, [w]God hath broken in upon mine enemies by mine hand, [x]like the breaking forth of waters: therefore they called the name of that place Baal-perazim.[3]

12 And when they had left their gods there, David gave a commandment, and they [y]were burned with fire.

13 And the Philistines [z]yet again spread themselves abroad in the valley.

14 Therefore David [a]enquired again of God; and God said unto him, Go not up after them; [b]turn away from them, and come upon them over against the mulberry-trees.

15 And it shall be, when thou shalt hear [c]a sound of going in the tops of the mulberry-trees, that [d]then thou shalt go out to battle: [e]for God is gone forth before thee, to smite the host of the Philistines.

16 David therefore [f]did as God commanded him: and they smote the host of the Philistines from [g]Gibeon[4] even to [h]Gazer.

17 And the [i]fame of David went out into all lands; and the LORD brought [k]the fear of him upon all nations.

2 'According to the passage in Samuel, it seems as if David was induced to dislodge the ark from Obed-edom's house out of envy, being informed that the Lord had blessed him in consequence of the ark being in his charge. To clear David from such an imputation, the author of Chronicles explains that the reason of the king's resolution to remove the ark was his being convinced by the blessings poured on Obed-edom, that the misfortunes which the ark had occasioned to its former possessors, was because it had not been attended or ministered by the Levites only, according to what was prescribed by the law.' — Carpenter.

3 The Moguls, who profess the Lamai religion, still have such music. The temple instruments consist of a large drum, a large trumpet, and metal basins, which are struck together, bells, &c. &c. All these musical instruments have their prescribed objects and use, and are part of the sacred utensils of the temple and altar. 2 'Musical art with the Hebrews was limited to the execution of a few simple tunes, and it was originally not very different from that of the ancient Greeks and the present Orientals. Of its technicalities nothing certain is known. The Alamoth was perhaps a kind of tune or harmony in music. The tune of certain songs was, it appears, marked after other songs to which it was peculiar. The Sheminith (ver. 21,) has clearly a reference to music, and denotes a kind of tune. From the order of words here, it appears to have been the lowest of three voices; according to Forkel, the bass, which was sung by men.' — Bibl. Cyclop. art. Music. ren, [e]Asaph the son of Berechiah; and of the sons of Merari their brethren, [f]Ethan the son of Kushaiah;

18 And with them their brethren of [g]the second degree, [h]Zechariah, [1]Ben, and [i]Jaaziel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Unni, Eliab, and Benaiah, and Maaseiah, and Mattithiah, and Elipheleh, and Mikneiah, [k]and Obed-edom, and Jeiel, the porters.

19 So the singers, Heman, Asaph, and Ethan, were appointed to sound with [l]cymbals of brass;

20 And Zechariah, and [m]Aziel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Unni, and Eliab, and Maaseiah, and Benaiah, with psalteries on [n]Alamoth;[2]

21 And [o]Mattithiah, and Elipheleh, and Mikneiah, and Obed-edom, and Jeiel, and Azaziah, with [p]harps on the Sheminith[3] to excel.

22 And Chenaniah, chief of the Levites, was for[4] song:[5] [q]he instructed about the song, because he was skilful.

23 And Berechiah and Elkanah were [r]door-keepers for the ark.

24 And Shebaniah, and Jehoshaphat, and Nathaneel, and Amasai, and Zechariah, and Benaiah, and Eleazar, [s]the priests, did blow with the trumpets before the ark of God: and [t]Obed-edom and Jehiah were door-keepers for the ark.

25 ¶ So [u]David, and the elders of Israel, and the [v]captains over thousands, went to bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of the house of [w]Obed-edom [x]with joy.

26 And it came to pass, when [y]God helped the Levites that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, that [z]they offered [a]seven bullocks and seven rams.

27 And David was clothed with [b]a robe of fine linen, and all the Levites that bare the ark, and the singers, and [c]Chenaniah the master of the [6]song with the singers: David also had upon him an ephod of linen.

28 Thus all Israel [d]brought up the ark of the covenant of the LORD [e]with shouting, and with sound of the cornet, and with trumpets, and with cymbals, making a noise with psalteries and harps.

the city of David, that [h]Michal, the daughter of Saul, looking out at a window, saw king David [i]dancing and playing; [k]and she despised him in her heart.

CHAPTER XVI.

David's festival sacrifice, 1—3 He appointeth a band of singers and music to praise the Lord, 4—6. The psalm of thanksgiving, 7—36. He appointeth ministers, porters, priests, and musicians, to attend continually on the ark, 37—43.

SO [a]they brought the ark of God, and set it [b]in the midst of the tent that David had pitched for it: and they[c] offered burnt-sacrifices and peace-offerings before God.

2 And when David had made an end of offering [d]the burnt-offerings and the peace-offerings, [e]he blessed the people in the name of the LORD.

3 And he dealt to every one of Israel, both man and woman, [f]to every one a loaf of bread, and a good piece of flesh, and a flagon of wine.

4 ¶ And [g]he appointed certain of the Levites to [h]minister before the ark of the LORD, and [i]to record, and to thank and praise[1] [k]the LORD God of Israel:

5 [l]Asaph the chief, and next to him Zechariah, Jeiel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Mattithiah, and Eliab, and Benaiah, and Obed-edom; and Jeiel with psalteries[2] and with harps: but Asaph made a sound with cymbals;

6 Benaiah also and Jahaziel the priests [m]with trumpets continually before the ark of the covenant of God.

7 ¶ Then [n]on that day David delivered first this psalm,[3] to thank the LORD, [o]into the hand of Asaph and his brethren.

8 [p]Give thanks unto the LORD, [q]call upon his name, [r]make known his deeds among the people.

9 [s]Sing unto him, sing [t]psalms unto him, [u]talk ye of all his wondrous works.

10 [v]Glory[4] ye in his holy name: let[w] the heart of them rejoice that seek the LORD.

11 [x]Seek the LORD and [y]his strength, seek[z] his face continually.

12 [a]Remember his marvellous works that he hath done, his wonders, and the[b] judgments of his mouth;

13 O [c]ye seed of Israel his servant, ye children of Jacob, [d]his chosen ones.

14 He is [e]the LORD our God; [f]his judgments are in all the earth.

15 Be [g]ye mindful always of his covenant,[1] the word which he commanded to [h]a thousand generations;

16 Even of the covenant [i]which he made with Abraham, and of his oath unto Isaac;

17 And hath confirmed the same to Jacob [k]for a law, and to Israel for [l]an everlasting covenant,

18 Saying, [m]Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot[2] of your [n]inheritance;

19 When ye were but few,[3] even [o]a few, and strangers in it.

20 And when [p]they went from nation to nation, and from one kingdom to another people,

21 [q]He suffered no man to do them wrong; yea, [r]he reproved kings for their sakes, 22 Saying, Touch not [s]mine anointed, and do my [t]prophets no harm.

23 [u]Sing unto the LORD, all the earth; [v]shew forth from day to day his salvation.

24 [w]Declare his glory among the heathen; his marvellous works among all nations.

25 For [x]great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised: [y]he also is to be feared above all gods.

26 For [z]all the gods of the people are idols: but [a]the LORD made the heavens.

27 [b]Glory and honour are in his presence; [c]strength and gladness are in his [d]place.

28 [e]Give unto the LORD, [f]ye kindreds of the people, give unto the LORD [g]glory and strength.

29 Give unto the LORD [h]the glory due unto his name: [i]bring an offering, and [k]come before him; worship the LORD in [l]the beauty of holiness.

30 Fear [m]before him, all the earth: the world also shall be [n]stable, that it be not moved.

31 Let [o]the heavens be glad, and [p]let the earth rejoice; and let men say among the nations, [q]The LORD reigneth.

32 Let [r]the sea roar, and the fulness thereof; let the [s]fields rejoice, and all that is therein.

1 As he is the saving God, so we pray to him to save us. To pray to God under the attribute, the influence of which we need, serves to inspire much confidence. 'I am weak; almighty God, help me! I am ignorant; O thou Father of lights, teach me! I am lost; O merciful God, save me!'

2 The practice of saying 'amen' at the end of prayer is of very great antiquity, and was in general use with the Jews in early times. It was also retained by them after the captivity, Ne. 8. 6. The Jewish doctors give three rules for pronouncing the word;—1. That it be not pronounced too harshly and swiftly, but with a grave and distinct voice; 2. That it be not louder than the tone of him that blessed; 3. It was to be expressed in faith, and with a certain persuasion that God would bless them & hear their prayer.

1 The Syriac, Arabic, and some MSS. add, 'out of Egypt.' The going from tent to tent, and from tabernacle to tabernacle, alludes to the frequent changes of the site of that sacred shrine. 'I have transferred my tabernacle from Gilgal to Nob, from Nob to Shiloh, & from Shiloh to Gibeon.'—Targum & Jarchi. It is clear from this, that it had not always been judged necessary that the ark should be exclusively set in the tabernacle framed under divine direction in the wilderness. Indeed, we see in ch. 15. 1, that when David contemplated the removal of the ark from the house of Obed-edom, he 'prepared a place for the ark of God, and pitched for it a tent.'

2 Then Nathan said unto David, Do[f] all that is in thine heart; [g]for God is with thee.
3 ¶ And it came to pass the same night, that [h]the word of God came to Nathan, saying,
4 Go and [i]tell David my servant, Thus saith the LORD, [k]Thou shalt not build me an house to dwell in:
5 For I have not [l]dwelt in an house since the day that I brought up [1]Israel unto this day; but have gone[2] [m]from tent to tent, and from one tabernacle to another.
6 Wheresoever I have [n]walked with all Israel, spake I a word to any of [o]the judges of Israel, whom I commanded to [p]feed my people, saying, Why have ye not built me an house of cedars?
7 Now therefore thus shalt thou say unto my servant David, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [q]I took thee from the sheep-cote, even from[3] following the sheep, that thou shouldest be [r]ruler over my people Israel;
8 And [s]I have been with thee whithersoever thou hast walked, and [t]have cut off all thine enemies from before thee, and have [u]made thee a name like the name of the great men that are in the earth:
9 Also [v]I will ordain a place for my people Israel, and will [w]plant them, and they shall dwell in their place, [x]and shall be moved no more; neither shall [y]the children of wickedness [z]waste them any more, [a]as at the beginning,
10 And [b]since the time that I commanded judges to be over my people Israel: [c]moreover, I will subdue all thine enemies. Furthermore I tell thee, that [d]the LORD will build thee an house.
11 ¶ And it shall come to pass, [e]when thy days be expired, that thou must [f]go to be with thy fathers, that [g]I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy sons; and I will establish his kingdom.
12 [h]He shall build me an house, and [i]I will stablish his throne for ever.
13 [k]I will be his father, and he shall be [l]my son; and [m]I will not take my mercy away from him, [n]as I took it from him that was before thee:

14 But I will settle him [o]in mine house[1] and in my kingdom for ever; and his throne shall be established for evermore.

15 [p]According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David.

16 ¶ And David the king came and sat[q][2] before the LORD, and said, [r]Who am I, O LORD God, and [s]what is mine house, [t]that thou hast brought me[3] hitherto?

17 And yet this was [u]a small thing in thine eyes, O God; for [v]thou hast also spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come, and [w]hast regarded me according to the estate of a man of high degree,[4] O LORD God.

18 What can David speak more to thee for [x]the honour of thy servant? for [y]thou knowest thy servant.

19 O LORD, for [z]thy servant's sake, and [a]according to thine own heart, hast thou done all this greatness, in making known all these great[5] things.

20 O LORD, there is [b]none like thee, neither is there any God [c]besides thee, according[d] to all that we have heard with our ears.

21 And [e]what one nation in the earth is like thy people Israel, whom God went to [f]redeem to be his own people, to [g]make thee a name of [h]greatness and terribleness, [i]by driving out nations from before thy people, whom thou hast redeemed out of Egypt?

22 For [k]thy people Israel didst thou make thine own people for ever; and thou, LORD, becamest their God.

23 Therefore now, LORD, [l]let the thing that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant and concerning his house be established for ever, and do as thou hast said.

24 Let it even be established, [m]that thy name may be magnified for ever, saying, The LORD of hosts is the God of Israel, even [n]a God to Israel; and let the house of David thy servant be established before thee.

25 For thou, O my God, hast told[6] thy servant [o]that thou wilt build him an house: therefore thy servant hath found[p] in his heart to pray before thee.

26 And now, LORD, [q]thou art God,

6 In 2 Sa. 8. 8, we read for Tibhath, 'Betah,' probably by transposition, (for the letters are the same,) only th is here added. And Chun was perhaps another name for Berothai. If Zobah were Nisibis, then Berothai might be, (as some have supposed,) Bir, the Birtha of Ptolemy, on the east bank of the Euphrates. But as Aram-zobah was certainly on the west of the Euphrates, Berothai must have been in the same direction. Some identify it with Berytus, or Beirout, a well known seaport on the coast of Syro-Phœnicia; but if Berothai was the same as the Berotah of Eze.47.16. it seems rather to have been situated between Hamath & Damascus.

27 Now therefore let[1] it please thee to bless the house of thy servant, that it may be before thee for ever: for thou [r]blessest, O LORD, and it shall be blessed for ever.

CHAPTER XVIII.

David subdueth the Philistines, and maketh the Moabites tributary, 1, 2. He smiteth Hadarezer and the Syrians, 3—8. Tou sendeth Hadoram with presents to bless David, 9, 10. The presents and the spoil David dedicateth to God, 11, 12. He putteth garrisons in Edom, 13. David's officers, 14—17.

NOW [a]after this it came to pass, that David smote the Philistines, and subdued them, and took [b]Gath and her towns out of the hand of the Philistines.

2 And [c]he smote Moab; and the Moabites became David's servants, and [d]brought gifts.

3 ¶ And David smote [e]Hadarezer king of [f]Zobah[2] unto Hamath, as he went to stablish his dominion [g]by the river Euphrates.

4 And David took from him a thousand chariots, and [h]seven thousand horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen: David also [i]houghed[3] all the chariot horses, but reserved of them [k]an hundred chariots.

5 And when [l]the Syrians of Damascus[4] came [m]to help Hadarezer king of [n]Zobah, David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men.

6 Then David put garrisons[5] in Syria-damascus; and the Syrians [o]became David's servants, and brought gifts. [p]Thus the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

7 And David took the [q]shields of gold that were on the servants of Hadarezer, and brought them to Jerusalem.

8 Likewise from [r]Tibhath, and from Chun,[6] cities of Hadarezer, brought David very much brass, [s]wherewith Solomon made the brazen sea, and the pillars, and the vessels of brass.

9 ¶ Now when [t]Tou king of Hamath heard how David had smitten all the host of Hadarezer king of Zobah,

10 He sent Hadoram[7] his son to king David, to enquire[8] of his welfare, and to congratulate[9] him, because he had fought against Hadarezer, and smitten him; (for Hadarezer had[10] war with Tou;) and with him [u]all manner

NOW it came to pass after this, that [a]Nahash the king of the children
Ammon died, and his son reigned

2 And David said, [b]I will shew kind-

And David sent messengers to servants of David came into the of [c]the children of Ammon to un, to comfort him.

3 But [d]the princes of the children mmon said to Hanun, Thinkest[6] that [e]David doth honour thy er, that he hath sent comforters thee? are not his servants come thee for [f]to search, and to over-w, and to spy out the land?
4 Wherefore Hanun [g]took David's nts, and [h]shaved[7] them, [i]and cut off their garments in the midst, hard by their buttocks, and [k]sent them away.
5 Then there went certain, [l]and told David how the men were served: and he sent to meet them; (for the men were greatly ashamed;) and the king said, Tarry [m]at Jericho until [n]your beards be grown, and then return.
6 ¶ And when the children of Ammon saw that they [o]had made themselves odious[1] to David, Hanun and the children of Ammon sent [p]a thousand talents of silver to hire them chariots and horsemen out of Mesopotamia, and out of [2q]Syria-maachah, and out of [r]Zobah.
7 So they [s]hired thirty and two thousand chariots,[3] and [t]the king of Maachah and his people; who came and pitched before [u]Medeba. And the children of Ammon gathered themselves together from their cities, and came to battle.
8 And when David heard of it, he sent [v]Joab, and all the host of the mighty men.
9 And the children of Ammon came out, and [w]put the battle in array before the gate of the city; and [x]the kings that were come were by themselves in the field.
10 Now [y]when Joab saw that the battle[4] was [z]set against him before and behind, he chose out of all the choice[5] of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians.
11 And the rest of the people he delivered unto the hand of [6]Abishai his brother, [a]and they set themselves in array against the children of Ammon.
12 And he said, [b]If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me: but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will help thee.
13 Be [c]of good courage, and let us behave ourselves valiantly for our people, and for the cities of our God; and [d]let the LORD do that which is good in his sight.
14 So Joab, and the people that were with him, drew nigh before the Syrians unto the battle; and [e]they fled before him.
15 And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled,

5 We may expect that in this world our kindest actions will often be requited with the basest returns, and our best intentions expose us to the most injurious suspicions. Even in our implicit obedience to our great and gracious Lord, when we most sincerely do good to our fellow-creatures, we must lay our account with ingratitude, contempt & abuse. But these things should not discourage us, for he will both plead our cause, and comfort us, and kindly recompense all that we endure for his sake.

2 Aram-maachah, or simply Maachah, 2 Sa. 10.6,8, is mentioned along with Aram-zobah. It seems to have extended from Damascus southward, as far as the north border of the country of the Jews, on the east side of Jordan; for it is related in De. 3. 13, that Zair, the son of Manasseh, took possession of the country of Argob, in Bashan, unto the borders of Geshur and Maachah; and according to Joshua, 13. 11, the tribe of Reuben received (among other territories,) Gilead unto the borders of Geshur and Maachah. Yet it is added at ver. 13, that the Israelites had not then expected the inhabitants of Geshur & Maachah, but dwelt along with them there.

The word rechab denotes not only a chariot but a rider, and in this sense it is probably here employed, or in a collective sense, cavalry. The Syr. has 'horsemen,' the Arab. 'chariots & horsemen.' Perhaps the word may be taken to denote all those Syrian auxiliaries who fought either in chariots or on horseback. If we exclude the contingent furnished by Maachah, the number of men is precisely 32,000.

they[f] likewise fled before Abishai his brother, and entered into the city. Then Joab came to Jerusalem.

16 ¶ And when the Syrians saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they sent messengers, [g]and drew forth the Syrians that were beyond the river;[1] and [h]Shophach, the captain of the host of Hadarezer, went before them.

17 And it was told David; and he gathered all Israel, and passed over Jordan, and came upon them, [i]and set the battle in array against them. So when David had put the battle in array against the Syrians, they fought with him.

18 But the Syrians [k]fled before Israel; and David slew of the Syrians seven thousand men which fought in chariots, and forty thousand [l]footmen, and killed Shophach the captain of the host.

19 And when [m]the servants of Hadarezer saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they made peace with David, and became his servants: neither [n]would the Syrians help the children of Ammon any more.

CHAPTER XX.

Rabbah is besieged by Joab, spoiled by David, and the people thereof tortured, 1—3. Three giants are slain by David's servants in three several battles with the Philistines, 4—8.

AND [a]it came to pass, that after[2] the year was expired, at the time that kings go out to battle, Joab led forth the power of the army, and [b]wasted the country of the children of Ammon, and came and besieged [c]Rabbah;[3] (but David tarried at Jerusalem;) and [d]Joab smote Rabbah, and destroyed it.

2 And David took the crown of their king from off his head, and found it[4] to weigh a talent of gold, and there were precious stones in it; and it was set upon David's head: [e]and he brought also exceeding much spoil out of the city.

3 And [f]he brought out the people that were in it and cut them[5] [g]with saws, and with harrows of iron, and with axes: even so dealt David with all the cities of the children of Ammon. And David and all the people returned to Jerusalem.

4 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that [h]there arose[1] war [i]at Gezer with the Philistines; at which time [k]Sibbechai the Hushathite slew [l]Sippai, that was of the children of the giant;[2] and they were subdued.

5 And there was war again with the Philistines; and Elhanan[3] the son of [m]Jair slew Lahmi, the brother of [n]Goliath the Gittite, whose spear's staff was like a weaver's beam.

6 And yet again there was war at Gath, where was a man of[4] great stature, whose fingers and toes were four and twenty, six on each hand, and six on each foot;[5] and he also was the[6] son of the giant.

7 But when [o]he defied[7] Israel, Jonathan the son of [p]Shimea, David's brother, slew him.

8 These were born unto the giant in Gath; and [q]they fell by the hand of David, and by the hand of his servants.

CHAPTER XXI.

David, tempted by Satan, forceth Joab to number the people. 1—4. The number of the people being brought, David repenteth of it, 5—8. David having three plagues propounded by God, chooseth the three days' pestilence, 9—13. After the death of seventy thousand, David by repentance preventeth the destruction of Jerusalem, 14—17. David, by Gad's direction, purchaseth Ornan's thrashing-floor: where having built an altar, God giveth a sign of his favour by fire, and stayeth the plague, 18—27. David sacrificeth there, being restraineth from Gibeon by fear of the angel, 28—30.

AND [a]Satan[8] stood up against Israel, and [b]provoked David to number Israel.

2 And David said to [c]Joab, and to the rulers of the people, Go, number Israel from [d]Beer-sheba, even to Dan; and [e]bring the number of them to me, [f]that I may know it.

3 And Joab answered, [g]The LORD make his people an hundred times so many more as they be: but, my lord the king, are they not all my lord's servants? why then doth my lord require this thing? [h]why will he be a cause of trespass to Israel?

4 Nevertheless [i]the king's word prevailed against Joab: [k]wherefore Joab departed, [l]and went throughout all Israel, and came to Jerusalem.

5 ¶ And Joab gave the sum of the number of the people unto David. And all they of Israel were [m]a thousand thousand[9] and an hundred thousand men that drew sword; and Judah was four hundred threescore and ten thousand men that drew sword.

thee

12 Either [x]three years' famine; or three months [y]to be destroyed before thy foes, while that the sword of thine enemies overtaketh thee; or else three days [z]the sword of the LORD, [a]even the pestilence, in the land, and [b]the angel of the LORD destroying throughout all the coasts of Israel. [c]Now therefore advise thyself what word I shall bring again to him that sent me.

13 And David said unto Gad, [d]I am in a great strait: [e]let me fall now into the hand of the LORD; [f]for very great[5] are his mercies: [g]but let me not fall into the hand of man.

14 ¶ So [h]the LORD sent pestilence upon Israel: and there fell of Israel seventy[i] thousand men.

15 And God sent an angel [k]unto Jerusalem to destroy it: and as he was destroying, the LORD beheld, and he repented[l] him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed, [m]It is enough, stay now thine hand. And the angel of the LORD stood by the thrashing-floor of [n]Ornan the Jebusite.

16 ¶ And David lifted up his eyes, and [o]saw the angel of the LORD stand between the earth and the heaven, having a drawn sword in his hand stretched out over Jerusalem: then David and the elders of Israel, who were [p]clothed in sackcloth, [q]fell upon their faces.

17 And David said unto God, [r]Is it not I that commanded the people to be numbered? even I it is that have sinned, and done evil indeed; but as for [s]these sheep, [t]what have they done?
[u]Let thine hand, I pray thee, O LORD my God, be on me, and [v]on my father's house; but not on thy people, [w]that they should be plagued.

18 ¶ Then [x]the angel of the LORD commanded Gad to say to David, [y]that David should go up, and set up an altar unto the LORD in the thrashing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite.

19 And David [z]went up at the saying of Gad, which he spake in the name of the LORD.

20 And[1] Ornan turned back, and saw the angel;[2] and his four sons with him hid themselves. [a]Now Ornan was thrashing wheat.

21 And as David came to Ornan, Ornan looked, and saw David, and went out of the thrashing-floor, and [b]bowed himself to David with his face to the ground.

22 Then David said to Ornan, [3]Grant me the place of this thrashing-floor, that I may build an altar therein unto the LORD: [c]thou shalt grant it me for the full price; [d]that the plague may be stayed from the people.

23 And Ornan said unto David,
[e]Take it to thee, and let my lord the king do that which is good in his eyes: lo, I give thee [f]the oxen also for burnt-offerings, and the thrashinginstruments for wood, and the wheat for the meat-offering; I give it all.

24 And king David said to Ornan, [g]Nay; but I will verily buy it for the full price: for I will not take that which is thine for the LORD, nor offer burnt-offerings without cost.[4]

25 So [h]David gave to Ornan for the place six hundred shekels of gold by weight.[5]

26 And David [i]built there an altar unto the LORD, and offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, [k]and called upon the LORD; and he answered him from heaven [l]by fire[6] upon the altar of burnt-offering.

27 And [m]the LORD commanded the angel, and [n]he put up his sword again into the sheath thereof.

28 ¶ At that time, when David saw

2 Moses numbered the people by God's command; David to display his own greatness, and perhaps with a view to form a standing army for conquest. He forgot, for once, his true position at the head of the theocracy, and would extend the dominions of Israel beyond the bounds assigned by God. Elated with prosperity and pride, and exulting in the extent of his territories, he wished that the number of his subjects capable of bearing arms might be known and published. It arose from a vain-glorious overweening confidence in his own strength. He thought thereby to appear the more formidable, trusting in an arm of flesh, he who had written so much of 'trusting in God alone.

2 In 2 Sa. 24. 20, it is said that Ornan, saw the king, but not the angel; the words in the original for king and angel, only differ in one letter. The Sept. here reads as in Samuel, and so does Houbigant, who thinks that this verse refers to his seeing David at a distance, but ver. 21, to his seeing him come into his thrashing floor.

4 It is a command from heaven,—'Honour the Lord with thy substance.' He who has a religion that costs him nothing, has a religion that is worth nothing: nor will any man esteem the ordinances of God, if these ordinances cost him nothing. Had Araunah's noble offer been accepted, it would have been Araunah's sacrifice, not David's; nor would it have answered the end of turning away the displeasure of the Most High. It was David that sinned, not Araunah; therefore David must offer the sacrifice.
h 2 Sa. 24. 24, 25.
5 This passage harmonizes with 2Sa. 24. 24, if we there insert a comma after the word thrashing-floor. It will then appear that David bought the oxen for 50 shekels of silver, which is there stated, omitting the price of the thrashing floor, for which he paid 600 shekels of gold, the price of the oxen being here omitted.

that the LORD had answered him in the thrashing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite, then he sacrificed there.

29 For [o]the tabernacle of the LORD, which Moses made in the wilderness, and the altar of the burnt-offering, were at that season in the high-place at [p]Gibeon.

30 But David could not go before it to enquire of God: for [q]he was afraid, because of the sword of the angel of the LORD.[1]

CHAPTER XXII.

David, foreknowing the place of the temple, maketh large preparations for the building of it, 1—5. He instructeth Solomon in God's promises, and his duty in building the temple, 6—16. He chargeth the princes to assist his son in the work, 17—19.

THEN David said, [a]This is the house of the LORD God, [b]and this is the altar of the burnt-offering for Israel.[2]

2 And David commanded to gather together [c]the strangers that were in the land of Israel; and he set [d]masons to hew wrought stones to build the house of God.

3 And David [e]prepared iron in abundance for the nails for the doors of the gates, and for the joinings; and brass in abundance [f]without weight;

4 Also [g]cedar-trees in abundance: for the Zidonians, and they of Tyre, brought much cedar-wood to David.

5 And David said, [h]Solomon my son is young and tender, and the house that is to be builded for the LORD must be exceeding[i] magnifical, of fame and of glory throughout all countries: I will therefore now make preparation for it. So [k]David prepared abundantly before his death.

6 ¶ Then he called for Solomon his son, and [l]charged him to build an house for the LORD God of Israel.

7 And David said to Solomon, My son, as for me, [m]it was in my mind to build an house [n]unto the name of the LORD my God:

8 But the word of the LORD came to me, saying, [o]Thou hast shed blood[3] abundantly, and hast made great wars: thou [p]shalt not build an house unto my name, because thou hast shed much blood upon the earth in my sight.

9 Behold, [q]a son shall be born to thee, who shall be a man of rest; and I [r]will give him rest from all his enemies round about: for his name shall be Solomon,[1] and [s]I will give peace and quietness unto Israel in his days.

10 [t]He shall build an house for my name; and [u]he shall be my son, and I will be his father; and [v]I will establish the throne of his kingdom over Israel for ever.

11 Now, my son, [w]the LORD be with thee; and prosper thou, and build the house of the LORD thy God, as he hath said of thee.

12 Only [x]the LORD give thee wisdom and understanding, and give thee charge concerning Israel, [y]that thou mayest keep the law of the LORD thy God.

13 Then [z]shalt thou prosper, if thou takest heed [a]to fulfil the statutes and judgments which the LORD charged Moses with concerning Israel: [b]be strong, and of good courage; dread not, nor be dismayed.

14 Now, behold, in my trouble[2] I have prepared for the house of the LORD [c]an hundred thousand talents of gold, and a thousand thousand talents of silver;[3] and of brass and iron [d]without weight; (for it is in abundance;) timber also and stone have I prepared; and thou mayest add thereto.

15 Moreover, there are workmen with thee in abundance, hewers[4] and workers of stone and timber, and [e]all manner of cunning men for every manner of work.

16 Of [f]the gold, the silver, and the brass, and the iron, there is no number. [g]Arise therefore, and be doing, [h]and the LORD be with thee.

17 ¶ David also commanded [i]all the princes of Israel to help Solomon his son, saying,

18 Is [k]not the LORD your God with you? [l]and hath he not given you rest on every side? for he hath given the inhabitants of the land into mine hand; and the land is subdued [m]before the LORD, and before his people.

19 Now [n]set your heart and your soul to seek the LORD your God: [o]arise therefore, and build ye the sanctuary of the LORD God, [p]to bring the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and the holy vessels of God, into the house that

3 The maxim which forbade persons polluted with blood to perform any offices of divine worship before they were purified, is so ancient and universal, that it may almost be esteemed a precept of natural religion, tending to inspire a dread and horror of bloodshed. Euripides represents Iphigenia as arguing, that it was impossible for human sacrifices to be acceptable to the gods, since they do not permit any defiled with blood, or even polluted with the touch of a dead body, to come near their altars.

They were ignorant of that new principle of European governments, under which it is found less profitable to to hoard up money than to leave it in circulation. It is therefore not astonishing that David, who had long in view the erection of a superb temple to the Lord, should, during the many years of his glorious reign, and from the spoil and tribute secured by his victories, be enabled to collect and leave to his son very considerable treasures. The reflecting man, aware of the facility with which numbers are altered by transcribers, and of the uncertainties and contradictions which appear in the valuation of ancient monies, only concludes that the sum left by David must have been in itself, and in reference to the time, very considerable, altho' he now finds it impossible to determine its precise amount.'—Guenée.

1 'From this it would seem, that the number of the Levites had been about quadrupled since the time of Moses. By the census in Nu. iv. the males above one month old amounted to 22,273, which at the time of the census in Nu. xxvi. had increased to 23,000, and now we find that the number of only the males above thirty years old amounted to 38,000, & we may fairly suppose that if the computation, like that of Moses, had embraced all the males exceeding one month old, the result would have afforded nearly double the number here stated. It was probably the great increase in their numbers which contributed to render necessary or expedient that distribution & organization which the present and three following chapters record.' —Kitto.

17 And the sons of Eliezer were Rehabiah[1] the chief. And Eliezer had none other sons; but the sons of Rehabiah were very many.[2]

18 Of the sons of Izhar; [d]Shelomith the chief.

19 Of the sons of [e]Hebron; Jeriah the first, Amariah the second, Jehaziel the third, and Jekameam the fourth.

20 Of the sons of Uzziel; Micah the first, and Jesiah the second.

22 And Eleazar died, and [h]had no sons, but daughters; and their brethren[3] the sons of Kish [i]took them.[4]

23 The sons of Mushi; Mahli, and Eder, and [k]Jeremoth, three.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The divisions of the sons of Aaron by lot into four and twenty orders, 1—19. The Kohathites, 20—26; and the Merarites divided by lot, 27—31.

NOW these are [a]the divisions of the sons of Aaron. [b]The sons of Aaron; Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar.

2 But [c]Nadab and Abihu [d]died before their father, and had no children; therefore [e]Eleazar and Ithamar executed the priest's office.

3 And David distributed them, both Zadok,[f] of the sons of Eleazar, and Ahimelech,[g] of the sons of Ithamar, according to their offices in their service.

4 And there were more [h]chief men found of [i]the sons of Eleazar than of the sons of Ithamar; and thus were they divided.[2] Among the sons of Eleazar there were sixteen chief men of the house of their fathers, and eight among the sons of Ithamar, [k]according to the house of their fathers.

5 Thus were [l]they divided by lot, one sort with another; for [m]the governors of the sanctuary, and governors of the house of God,[3] were of the sons of Eleazar, and of the sons of Ithamar.

6 And Shemaiah the son of Nethaneel [n]the scribe, one of the Levites, wrote them before the king, and the princes, and Zadok the priest, and Ahimelech the son of Abiathar, and before the chief of the fathers of the priests and Levites: one principal[4] household being taken for Eleazar, and one taken for Ithamar.

7 Now the first lot came forth to Jehoiarib,[o] the second [p]to Jedaiah,

8 The third to [q]Harim, the fourth to Seorim,

9 The fifth to Malchijah, the sixth to [r]Mijamin,[1]

10 The seventh to Hakkoz, the eighth to [s]Abijah,[2]

11 The ninth to [t]Jeshuah, the tenth to Shecaniah,

12 The eleventh to [u]Eliashib, the twelfth to Jakim,

13 The thirteenth to Huppah, the fourteenth to Jeshebeab,

14 The fifteenth to Bilgah, the sixteenth to [v]Immer,

15 The seventeenth to Hezir, the eighteenth to Aphses,

16 The nineteenth to Pethahiah, the twentieth to Jehezekel,

17 The one and twentieth to Jachin, the two and twentieth to Gamul, 18 The three and twentieth to Delaiah, the four and twentieth to Maaziah.

19 These were [w]the orderings[3] of them in their service, to come into the house of the LORD, according to their manner, [x]under Aaron their father,[4] as the LORD God of Israel had commanded him.

20 ¶ And the rest of the sons of Levi were these: Of the sons of [y]Amram; [z]Shubael: of the sons of Shubael; Jehdeiah.

21 Concerning [a]Rehabiah: of the sons of Rehabiah, the first was [b5]Isshiah.

22 Of the [c]Izharites;[6] [d7]Shelomoth: of the sons of Shelomoth; Jahath.

23 And the sons of Hebron; [e8]Jeriah the first, Amariah the second, Jahaziel the third, Jekameam the fourth.

24 Of the sons of Uzziel; [f]Michah: of the sons of Michah; Shamir.

25 The brother of Michah was [g]Isshiah: of the sons of Isshiah; [h]Zechariah.

26 ¶ The [i]sons of Merari[9] were Mahli and Mushi: the sons of Jaaziah; Beno.

27 The sons of Merari by Jaaziah; Beno, and Shoham, and Zaccur, and Ibri.

28 Of Mahli came Eleazar, [k]who had no sons.

29 Concerning Kish: the son of Kish was Jerahmeel.

30 The sons also of [l]Mushi; Mahli,

2 To avoid all confusion, now that they were much increased, David distributed the priests, as he had done the Levites, into several courses; which no doubt was a divine direction as well as the other. He appointed sixteen courses of the sons of Eleazar, under as many heads of their families; and half as many of the posterity of Ithamar. —Patrick.

3 Grotius, Dathe, &c., render this 'chiefs of the judges.' The heads of the two families of Eleazar and Ithamar were the administrators of religion, and the dispensers of justice. For, tho' the high priesthood had been at first settled in the line of Eleazar, and in the person of Phinehas, (Nu.25.12,) that prerogative had been transferred before the time of Eli to the race of Ithamar, and after him it seems to have been shared equally by the descendants of both. Hence David, to prevent jealousy between the families, makes this distribution by lot.

1 The variation of Miniamin and Mijamin is caused by the elision of n, which is occasioned by the reduplication of the succeeding letter.
[s] Ne. 12.4,17; Lu.1. 5, Abia.
2 As the Evangelist Luke mentions the course of Abia as that to which Zacharias, the father of John the Baptist, belonged, it is evident that these courses of the priests established by David (no doubt under divine direction,) were continued with some alteration till the days of Christ. These records must therefore have been very useful after the Babylonish captivity.

3 Yet the precise arrangements cannot easily be ascertained, in consequence of some obscurities in the text. To reconcile ver. 4 with ver. 6, Geddes (who has bestowed much pains on these lists) translates the latter clause of ver. 6 thus: 'and Abiathar, the son of Abimelech, and the other paternal chiefs of the priests and Levites: one paternal chief being taken for Ithamar, and two for Eleazar.'

8 There is some confusion in the list of names here. Dathe, following the Sept. thinks the verse describes the sons of Jeriah, and that the name of the eldest has dropped out. The variations here exist only in the translation: the original being uniformly Jerijah, Michah, and Isshiah.

1 Eder, and Jerimoth. These were the sons of the Levites, after the house of their fathers.

31 These likewise cast [m]lots[1] over against their brethren the sons of Aaron, in the presence of David the king, and Zadok and Ahimelech, and the chief of the fathers of the priests and Levites, even [n]the principal fathers over against their younger brethren.[2]

CHAPTER XXV.

The number and offices of the singers, 1—7. Their division by lot into four and twenty orders, 8—31.

MOREOVER David, and [a]the captains of the host, separated to the service of the sons of [b]Asaph, and of Heman, and of Jeduthun, who should [c]prophesy with [d]harps, with psalteries, and with cymbals: and the number of the workmen, according to their service, was:

2 Of the sons of [e]Asaph; Zaccur, and Joseph, and Nethaniah, and [f]Asarelah, the sons of Asaph, [g]under the hands of Asaph, which prophesied according[3] to the order of the king.

3 Of [h]Jeduthun: the sons of Jeduthun; [i]Gedaliah, and [k]Zeri, and [l]Jeshaiah, Hashabiah, and [m]Mattithiah, six,[4] under the hands of their father Jeduthun, who prophesied with a harp, [n]to give thanks and to praise the LORD.

4 Of [o]Heman: the sons of Heman; Bukkiah,[p] [q]Mattaniah, [r]Uzziel, [s]Shebuel, and [t]Jerimoth, [u]Hananiah, [v]Hanani, [w]Eliathah, [x]Giddalti, and [y]Romamti-ezer, [z]Joshbekashah, [a]Mallothi, Hothir,[b] and Mahazioth:

5 All these were the sons of Heman the king's seer in the words[5] of God, to lift up the horn.[6] And [d]God gave to Heman fourteen sons and three daughters.

6 All these were [e]under the hands of their father [f]for song in the house of the LORD, with cymbals, psalteries, and harps, for the service of the house of God, according[7] to the king's order to Asaph, Jeduthun, and Heman.

7 So the number of them, with their brethren that were instructed in the songs of the LORD, even all that were cunning, was two hundred fourscore and eight.

8 ¶ And they [h]cast lots, [i]ward against ward, as well the small as the great, [k]the teacher as the scholar.[1]

9 Now the first lot[2] came forth for Asaph to [l]Joseph: the second to Gedaliah, who, with his brethren and sons, were twelve:

10 The third to [m]Zaccur, he, his sons and his brethren, were twelve:

11 The fourth to [n]Izri, he, his sons and his brethren, were twelve:

1 Even among the twenty-four leaders, some were more expert than others; some were teachers and others scholars; but every one was taken by the solemn casting of lots, without any regard to these distinctions. 'Thus all things were disposed for the preserving order, and avoiding all disputes about precedency; there being no respect had in this divine distribution to their birth; but the younger in course preceded the elder.'

2 It is said in ver. 1 that they were separated to this service by David and 'the captains of the host.' But it should be 'the chiefs of the sacred orders;' for it does not mean the military chiefs, but the heads of the priests and Levites who, in Num. 4. 3, are called by the same name. To them naturally belonged the appointment of singers, and not to the generals of the army. When it is said (ver. 1) that they should prophecy, all that is meant is, 'to sing the sacred hymns' composed by David or other psalmists. Instead of Jeduthun (ver. 1) we find in ch. 6. 44, the name of Etham; it was either the same person, or if different, Etham was now dead, and Jeduthun had succeeded him. Each master singer had in his chorus persons who are called his sons and his brethren, 'because,' says Patrick, 'they observed them as sons, and concurred with them as brethren.' At ver. 3, Jeduthun is said to have had six of these sons, but only five names are given. But Cod. 172 of Kennicott, the Cod. Alex. of the Sept. and Arab. vers. introduce the name of Shimei after that of Jeshaiah; and this is confirmed by ver. 17, where Shimei is mentioned as having obtained the tenth course by lot. At ch. 23. 5, the number of musicians is given as 4000, whereas, at ver. 7 of this chapter, the number of those 'instructed in the songs of the Lord,' is stated at only 288. Perhaps the 4000 (in which the 288 were doubtless included) were divided in such a manner that each of the larger courses included one of these minor courses, which, as consisting of the most perfect masters, took the lead in the service.

CHAPTER XXVI.

The divisions of the porters, 1—12. The gates assigned by lot, 13—19. The Levites that had charge of the treasures, 20—28. Officers and judges, 29—32.

CONCERNING the divisions[1] of [a]the porters:[2] Of the [b]Korhites was Meshelemiah[c] the son of Kore, of the sons of [d]Asaph.

2 And the sons of Meshelemiah were Zechariah the first-born, Jediael the second, Zebadiah the third, Jathniel the fourth,

3 Elam the fifth, Jehohanan the sixth, Elioenai the seventh.

4 Moreover, the sons of [e]Obed-edom were, Shemaiah the first-born, Jehozabad the second, Joah the third, and Sacar the fourth, and Nethaneel the fifth,

5 Ammiel the sixth, Issachar the seventh, Peulthai the eighth; for [f]God blessed him.[3]

6 Also unto Shemaiah his son were sons born, that ruled throughout the house of their father; for they were mighty[g] men of valour.[4]

7 The sons of Shemaiah; Othni, and Rephael, and Obed, Elzabad, (whose brethren were strong men,) Elihu and Semachiah.

8 All these of the sons of Obed-edom: they, and their sons, and their brethren, able men for strength for the service, were threescore and two of Obed-edom.

9 And [h]Meshelemiah had sons and brethren, strong men, eighteen.

10 Also [i]Hosah, of the children of Merari, had sons; Simri the chief, (for though he was not the first-born, yet his[k] father made him the chief,)

11 Hilkiah the second, Tebaliah the third, Zechariah the fourth: all the sons and brethren of Hosah were thirteen.

12 Among these were the divisions of the porters, even among the chief men, having [l]wards one against another, to minister in the house of the LORD.

13 ¶ And they cast lots, as[5] well the small as the great, according to the house of their fathers, for every gate.

14 And the lot eastward fell to [m]Shelemiah: then for [n]Zechariah his son (a wise counsellor) they cast lots; and his lot came out northward.

15 To Obed-edom southward; and to his sons the house of Asuppim.[1]

16 To Shuppim and [o]Hosah the lot came forth westward, with the gate Shallecheth,[2] by the [p]causeway of the going up, [q]ward against ward.

17 [r]Eastward were six[3] Levites, northward four a day, southward four a day, and toward Asuppim two and two.

18 At Parbar westward, four at the causeway, and two at Parbar.

19 These are the divisions of the porters[4] among the sons of [s]Kore, and among the sons of Merari.

20 ¶ And of the Levites, Ahijah was over the [t]treasures[5] of the house of God, and over the treasures of the dedicated[6] things.

21 As concerning the sons of [u]Laadan;[7] the sons of the Gershonite Laadan, chief fathers, even of Laadan the Gershonite, were [v]Jehieli.

22 The sons of Jehieli; Zetham, and Joel his brother, which were [w]over the treasures of the house of the LORD.

23 Of the [x]Amramites, and the Izharites, the Hebronites, and the Uzzielites:

24 And [y]Shebuel the son of Gershom, the son of Moses, was ruler of the treasures.

25 And his brethren by [z]Eliezer; [a]Rehabiah his son, and Jeshaiah his son, and Joram his son, and Zichri his son, and [b]Shelomith his son:

26 Which Shelomith and his brethren were [c]over all the treasures of the dedicated things, which David the king, and the chief fathers, the captains over thousands and hundreds, and the captains of the host, had dedicated.

27 Out of the spoils[8] won in battles did they dedicate [d]to maintain the house of the LORD.

28 And all that [e]Samuel the seer, and Saul the son of Kish, and [f]Abner the son of Ner, and [g]Joab the son of Zeruiah, had dedicated; and whosoever had dedicated any thing, it was under the hand of Shelomith, and of his brethren.

29 ¶ Of the [h]Izharites, Chenaniah and his sons were for [i]the [9]outward

CHAP. XXVI.

A.M.2989 B.C.1015

1 This chapter concludes the account of the careful organization of the great Levitical body established under the direction of David, and carried into effect after the erection of the temple by Solomon his son. The new distribution appears to have arisen partly out of the great increase in the number of the Levites, which must have rendered it difficult to give to a large proportion of them a share in their proper duties; and still more on account of the temple which was about to be erected, and the more extensive and varied duties connected with which rendered a modified arrangement necessary.

a ch. 9.17-27; 15.18, 23,24; 2Ch.23.19.

2 That these attended in their courses, is evident not only from their number, but from intimations elsewhere. Their particular departments of duty (as the gates to which they should attend and so on) were, at least in later times, determined by lot, like those of the general assistants. Their business was to open and shut the gates, and attend them by day as a kind of peace-officers, in order to prevent any tumult among the people; to keep strangers, or excommunicated, or unclean persons, from entering the courts; and in general, to prevent whatever might be prejudicial to the safety, peace, and purity of the holy place. They also kept guard about the temple and its courts by night. The number of these guards is said to have been twenty-four, who stood as sentinels at so many different places.

9 The word rendered officers in this verse, is that famous word shoterim, which is of indefinite and general application. In the present case it seems to denote a general superintending power, perhaps involving judicial functions; while the 'judges,' shophetim, may have been magistrates with more restricted power. Some reverse this order, and compare the judges to justices of the peace, and the shoterim to their clerks, the latter word being understood in the restricted signification which the Sept. here and elsewhere assigns to it of 'scribes.'

5 'The part of this chapter contained in verses 1-15, gives an account of the first establishment of a standing military force, or militia, in the Hebrew kingdom. It consisted of twelve legions, according to the number of the tribes, each legion containing 24,000 men, so that the entire body enrolled consisted of 288,000 men. Each legion did military duty for only one month in the year, when it gave place to another, so that the entire body was in service during the course of the year. But although only one of the legions of 24,000 was thus on duty for ordinary service, it appears that the whole of the twelve bodies, or any number of them, might be called into active service if a war broke out or any other emergency arose. The men of course attended to their private affairs during the eleven months in which their services were not required; but it is not very clear whether the men were enrolled individually and called repeatedly into service; or whether it was merely required that each tribe or each twelfth of the population should furnish the requisite number of men for one month in every year, without any reference to the individuals who had previously served.'—Kitto.

30 Over [l]the camels also was Obil the[m] Ishmaelite: and over the asses was Jehdeiah the Meronothite:

31 And over the flocks was Jaziz the Hagarite. All these were the rulers of the substance which was king David's.

32 Also Jonathan, David's [n]uncle, was a counsellor, a wise man, and a scribe:[6] and Jehiel the son[7] of Hachmoni was with the king's sons:

33 And [o]Ahithophel was the king's counsellor: and [p]Hushai the Archite was the king's [q]companion:

34 And after Ahithophel was Jehoiada the son of Benaiah, and Abiathar: and [r]the general of the king's army was Joab.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

David in a solemn assembly having declared God's especial favour to him, and the promises to his son Solomon, exhorteth them to fear God, 1—8, 20. He encourageth Solomon to build the temple, 9, 10. He giveth him patterns for the form, and gold and silver for the materials, 11—21.

AND David [a]assembled all the princes of Israel, [b]the princes[1] of the tribes, and the [c]captains of the companies that ministered to the king by course, and the captains over the thousands, and captains over the hundreds, and the[d] stewards over all the [2]substance and possession of the king, and[3] of his sons, with [e]the officers,[4] and with [f]the mighty men, and with all the valiant men, unto Jerusalem.

2 Then David the king [g]stood up upon his feet,[5] and said, Hear me, [h]my brethren, and my people: As for me, [i]I had in mine heart to build an house of [k]rest for the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and for [l]the footstool of our God, and [m]had made ready for the building:

3 But God said unto me, [n]Thou shalt not build an house for my name, because thou hast been a man of war, and hast shed blood.[6]

4 Howbeit the LORD God of Israel [o]chose me before all the house of my father to be king over Israel for [7]ever: for he hath [p]chosen Judah to be the ruler; and of [q]the house of Judah the house of my father; and [r]among the sons of my father he liked me, to make me king over all Israel:

5 And of [s]all my sons (for the LORD hath given me many sons) [t]he hath chosen Solomon my son [u]to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the LORD over Israel.

6 And he said unto me, Solomon thy son, [v]he shall build my house and my courts: for [w]I have chosen him to be my son, and I will be his father.

7 Moreover, [x]I will establish his kingdom for ever, [y]if he be [8]constant to do my commandments and my judgments, [z]as at this day.

8 Now therefore, [a]in the sight of all Israel, the congregation of the LORD,

2 It has been objected as an impossibility, that so small a country could support so large a population. This objection has little force now compared with what it was thought to have a hundred years since, when the laws which determine the increase and subsistence of a population had not been investigated, or were not suspected to exist. We are to consider that the Hebrew territory was really more extensive than is commonly stated; that Palestine was a remarkably fertile country; that every Israelite had a lot of land which he cultivated, and this state of things is now known to bring land into the highest state of cultivation, and to tend to increase the population; nearly all the land was applicable to cultivation, as it was not necessary to reserve pasture ground, the flocks and herds being principally sent to feed in the neighbouring deserts: that Palestine was, from these causes, highly cultivated throughout its occupied extent; and lastly, that the people feed much more simply and sparingly in warm than in cold climates, and consequently in the former the same extent of cultivated land will support a much larger population than the latter.

In the East, waste lands usually become the property of him by whom they were first fertilized.

1 The high priest is not particularly mentioned as having been called to this assembly, he being included among the princes of the tribes. It is indeed important to remark, that he was included in this rank as head not of the whole tribe of Levi, but only of the family of Aaron; the patriarchal chief of the tribe at large being Hashabiah, the son of Kemuel, ch. 27. 17. From this we gather, that altho' the tribe of Levi was ecclesiastically subject to the high priest, yet, that as a tribe, they had their own patriarchal prince, who doubtless possessed the same authority and influence as the princes of other tribes. But as it would have been incongruous that a person ecclesiastically subject to the priests should be patriarchally their prince, they were exempted from the general authority of the Levitical chief, and subject exclusively to that of the high priest, who, so far as they were concerned, exercised whatever authority and distinction belonged to the character of a prince of a tribe.—Kitto.

1 The word chariot does not uniformly signify, in scripture, a vehicle with wheels, but sometimes a movable litter or seat. It is applied here to the mercy-seat, which was no more a chariot, in the ordinary sense of the word, than a litter is. See Harmer. The Targum has: 'And the figure of the chariot like to the figure of the propitiatory, where are the figures of the golden cherubim extending their wings and covering the ark of the covenant of the Lord.'

4 The Vulgate translates Marmor Parium—Parian marble. Paros was one of the Cyclades islands—& produced the whitest marble—that of which the finest works of antiquity were made. And Josephus informs us that the temple was built of large blocks of white marble, beautifully polished, so as to produce a most splendid appearance. That the Hebrew word shaish means marble is probable from the Chaldee having so rendered it here. But David may have obtained it from Arabia, where marble was found of brilliant whiteness, and the finest polish.

and for the golden basons he gave gold by weight for every bason; and likewise silver by weight for every bason of silver:

18 And for [b]the altar of incense refined gold by weight; and gold for the pattern of [c]the chariot[1] of the cherubims, that spread out their wings, and covered the ark of the covenant of the LORD.

19 All this, said David, [d]the LORD made me understand in writing [e]by his hand upon me, even all the works of this pattern.

20 ¶ And David said to Solomon his son, [f]Be strong, and of good courage, and do it: [g]fear not, nor be dismayed; for the LORD God, even my God, will be with thee; [h]he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee, until thou hast finished all the work for the service of the house of the LORD.

21 And, behold, [i]the courses of the priests and the Levites, even they shall be with thee for all the service of the house of God: and there shall be with thee, for [k]all manner of workmanship, every [l]willing skilful man for any manner of service; [m]also the princes and all the people will be wholly at thy commandment.[2]

CHAPTER XXIX.

David, by his example and entreaty, 1—5, causeth the princes and people to offer willingly, 6—9. David's thanksgiving and prayer, 10—19. The people, having blessed God, and sacrificed, make Solomon king the second time, 20—25. David's reign and death, 26—30.

FURTHERMORE, David the king said [a]unto all the congregation, Solomon my son, [b]whom alone God hath chosen, is yet [c]young and tender, and the work is great: [d]for the palace is not for man, but for the LORD God.

2 Now, [e]I have prepared [f]with all my might for the house of my God, [g]the gold for things to be made of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and the brass for things of brass, the iron for things of iron, and wood for things of wood; [h]onyx-stones,[3] and stones to be set, glistering stones, and of divers colours, and all manner of precious stones, and marble-stones[4] in abundance.

3 Moreover, because [i]I have set my affection to the house of my God, [k]I have of mine own proper good, of gold and silver, which I have given to the house of my God, [l]over and above all that I have prepared for the holy house,

4 Even three thousand talents of gold, of the [m]gold of Ophir, and seven thousand talents of refined silver, to overlay the walls of the houses withal:

5 The gold for things of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and for all manner of work to be made by the hands of artificers. And [n]who then is willing to consecrate[1] his service this day unto the LORD?

6 ¶ Then [o]the chief of the fathers and princes of the tribes of Israel, and the captains of thousands and of hundreds, with the rulers over the king's work, offered willingly,

7 And gave, for the service of the house of God, of gold, five thousand talents and ten thousand drams;[2] and of silver, ten thousand talents; and of brass, eighteen thousand talents; and one hundred thousand talents of iron.

8 And they with whom precious stones were found gave them to the treasure of the house of the LORD, by the hand of [p]Jehiel the Gershonite.

9 Then the people rejoiced, for that they[q] offered willingly, because with perfect[r] heart they offered willingly to the LORD: and [s]David the king also rejoiced with great joy.

10 ¶ Wherefore [t]David blessed the LORD before all the congregation: and David said, [u]Blessed be thou, [v]LORD God of Israel [w]our father, for ever and ever.

11 Thine, O LORD, [x]is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and [y]the victory, and the [z]majesty: for all[a] that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; [b]thine is the kingdom, O LORD, and thou art [c]exalted as head above all.

12 Both [d]riches and honour come of thee, and thou [e]reignest over all; and in thine hand is [f]power and might; and in thine hand it is to make great, and to [g]give strength unto all.

13 Now therefore, our God, [h]we thank thee, and praise thy glorious name.

14 But [i]who am I, and what is my people, [k]that we should be[1] able to offer so [l]willingly after this sort? for [m]all things come of thee, and of[2] thine own have we given thee.

15 For [n]we are strangers[3] before thee, and sojourners, as were all our fathers: [o]our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding.[4]

16 O LORD our God, [p]all this store that we have prepared to build thee an house for thine holy name cometh of thine hand, and is all thine own.

17 I know also my God, that thou [q]triest the heart, and [r]hast pleasure in uprightness. As for me, [s]in the uprightness of mine heart I have willingly offered all these things: and now have I seen with [t]joy thy people, which are present[5] here, to offer willingly unto thee.

18 O [u]LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, our fathers, [v]keep this for ever [w]in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, and prepare[6] their heart unto thee:

19 And [x]give unto Solomon my son a perfect heart, to keep thy commandments, thy testimonies, and thy statutes, and to do all these things, and to build the palace, for [y]the which I have made provision.

20 ¶ And David said to all the congregation, [z]Now bless the LORD your God. And all the congregation blessed the LORD God of their fathers, and [a]bowed down their heads, and [b]worshipped the LORD, and the king.

21 And they [c]sacrificed sacrifices unto the LORD, and offered burnt-offerings unto the LORD, on the morrow after that day, even a thousand bullocks, a thousand rams, and a thousand lambs, with their [d]drink-offerings,[7] and sacrifices in abundance for all Israel;

22 And did [e]eat and drink before the LORD on that day with great gladness: and they made Solomon the son of David king [f]the second time, [g]and anointed him unto the LORD to be the chief governor, and [h]Zadok to be priest.

23 ¶ Then Solomon [i]sat on the throne of the LORD as king instead of David

2 'This word first occurs here. It is adarkon, but in Ezr. 2. 69, and Ne. 7. 70, 71, 72, it is darkemon. It is generally agreed that the word denotes the famous Persian coin called Daric, which is the most ancient of known coins. It is not necessary to suppose that it was known in the time of David; but that the books of Chronicles having been written after the captivity, the Jews, who had become accustomed to the coin and continued to use it, after their return employed it to denote value, even in retrospective estimates. Its name is commonly said to be taken from the name of "Darius the Mede" of scripture, or Darius son of Hystaspes. It was most probably the former, if either; but it is more than questionable whether its name does not come from the Persian word Dara, a king, or from daryah, royal court; and in that case it may have been earlier in its origin than even the time of Darius the Mede.' — Kitto.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE FIRST BOOK OF CHRONICLES.

'THE books of the Chronicles,' says St Jerome, 'are of such high moment and importance, that he who supposes himself to be acquainted with the sacred writings, and does not know them, only deceives himself.' Yet the perusal of these books is neglected by many, from the idea that they contain nothing but a repetition, or abridgment, of the former history—a supposition which will be found to be in many respects incorrect. Even in the commencing chapters of this first book, the attentive reader will be able to collect, from the seemingly dry list of names, a variety of curious and important facts, of which we possess no other record. It may be remarked in proof of this, that it is here alone, and not in the Pentateuch, that we obtain any information respecting the condition and affairs of the Israelites during their abode in Egypt, and especially regarding the precise position taken up in that country by the family of Joseph, after their father's death. 'Brought up in courts and palaces under an Egyptian mother, their pastoral relatives from Canaan must at first have been strangers and foreigners to Ephraim and Manasseh. It cannot be determined at what time, or under what circumstances, the family of Joseph threw aside their Egyptian character, and joined themselves to their pastoral brethren in Goshen. But we may be sure that Joseph taught his sons to regard the prospects which that connection opened up, as more truly glorious than any which Egypt could offer to them. Their intermediate position and parentage was probably made instrumental in confirming the advantages which the Hebrews for a time enjoyed in Egypt; but when circumstances arose which compelled them to take a more determined position as Hebrews or Egyptians, the result shows that they hesitated not to unite themselves to the sojourners in Goshen. All the positive information concerning them is contained in the genealogies with which the books of Chronicles open. There we learn that Manasseh had no children by his wife, but the son of a Syrian concubine was his heir, 1 Chron. vii. 14, and that a body of Ephraimites, headed by the sons of Zabad, the sixth in descent from Ephraim, undertook a kind of freebooting expedition into the land of the Philistines, with the view of driving off the cattle of the people of Gath; but, being resisted by the Philistines, they were repulsed with much slaughter, and Zabad lost all his sons,' 1 Chron. vii. 21, 22.—Kitto's Pict. Hist. of Palestine.

Another illustration may be found in the case of Jabez (ch. iv. 9, 10) whose beautiful and comprehensive prayer is one of the finest models of devotion to be found in the whole bible. And if there are other parts of these registers that appear barren both of incident and interest, let us bear in mind, that, as arid rocks and sandy deserts make integral and necessary parts of the globe; so do these genealogical tables make necessary parts of the history of providence and grace; and no one who fears God will either despise or lightly esteem them.

The rest of the book is occupied with an account of the reign of king David, respecting whose personal and public character we had occasion to offer some remarks at the close of the books of Samuel. We here subjoin the observations of an eminent living writer. 'David had succeeded to a kingdom distracted by civil dissension, environed on every side by powerful and victorious enemies, without a capital, almost without an army; without any bond of union between the tribes. He left a compact and united state, stretching from the frontier of Egypt to the foot of Lebanon, from the Euphrates to the sea. He had crushed the power of the Philistines, subdued or curbed all the adjacent kingdoms: he had formed a lasting and important alliance with the great city of Tyre. He had organized an immense disposable force: every month 24,000 men, furnished in rotation by the tribes, appeared in arms, and were trained as the standing militia of the country. At the head of his army were officers of consummate experience, and (what was more highly esteemed in the warfare of the time) extraordinary personal activity, strength, and valour. His heroes remind us of those of Arthur or Charlemagne, excepting that the armour of the feudal chieftains contributed to their superiority; here it was main strength of body, and dauntless fortitude of mind. The Hebrew nation owed the long peace of the son's reign, to the bravery and wisdom of the father. If the rapidity with which a kingdom rises to unexampled prosperity, and the permanence (as far as human wisdom can provide) of that prosperity be a fair criterion of the abilities and character of a sovereign, few kings in history can compete with David. His personal character has been often discussed; but both by his enemies, and even by some of his learned defenders, with an ignorance of, or inattention to his age and country as melancholy as surprising. Both parties have been content to take the expressions of the 'man after God's own heart,' in a strict and literal sense. Both have judged by modern, occidental, and Christian notions, the chieftain of an Eastern and comparatively barbarous people. If David in his exile became a freebooter, he assumed a profession like that of the pirate in ancient Greece, by no means dishonourable. If he employed craft, or even falsehood, in some of his enterprises, chivalrous or conscientious attachment to truth was probably not one of the virtues of his day. He had his harem like other eastern kings. He waged war and revenged himself on his foreign enemies with merciless cruelty, like other warriors of his age and country. His one great crime violated the immutable and universal laws of morality, and therefore admits of no excuse. On the other hand, his consummate personal bravery and military talent, his generosity to his enemies, his fidelity to his friends, his knowledge of, and stedfast attention to the true interests of his country—his exalted piety and gratitude towards his God, justify the zealous and fervent attachment of the Jewish people to the memory of their great monarch.'

THE SECOND BOOK

OF THE

CHRONICLES.

THIS book continues the history from the close of David's reign to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans; for the last two verses of the 36th chapter seem to belong to the book of Ezra. The details relate chiefly to the affairs of the kingdom of Judah; of those of the kingdom of Israel no farther notice is taken than is connection with the former country rendered necessary. That is the chief point of difference between this book and the books of Kings, where the histories of both nations are carried on together, though many things which were there omitted, or only incidentally referred to, are here narrated at full length. If we meet with apparent variations and discrepancies in this, as in the former book, we are to bear in mind, that the Hebrew language was now altered from what it had been; that persons and places were better known to the returned Jews by new and modernised names; and that, from the materials in his hands, (which were different from those employed for the books of Kings,) the compiler selected those passages which seemed best adapted for a supplemental history, and most suitable to the times in which he wrote.

CHAPTER I.

The solemn offering of Solomon at Gibeon, 1—6. Solomon's choice of wisdom is blessed by God, 7—12. Solomon's forces and opulence, 13—17.

AND Solomon the son of David [a]was strengthened in his kingdom, and the[b] LORD his God was with him, and magnified[c] him exceedingly.

2 Then Solomon spake unto all Israel, [d]to the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and to the judges, and to every governor in all Israel, [e]the chief of the fathers.

3 So Solomon, and all the congregation with him, went to the high place[1] that was at [f]Gibeon; for there was the[g] tabernacle of the congregation of God, which Moses, [h]the servant of the LORD, had made in the wilderness.

4 But [i]the ark[2] of God had David brought up from Kirjath-jearim[3] to the place which David had prepared for it: for [k]he had pitched a tent for it at Jerusalem.

5 Moreover, [l]the brasen altar, that Bezaleel[m] the son of Uri, the son of Hur, had made, he[4] put before the tabernacle of the LORD; and Solomon and the congregation sought unto it.

6 And Solomon went up thither to the brasen altar before the LORD, which was at the tabernacle of the congregation, and offered [n]a thousand burnt-offerings upon it.

7 ¶ [o]In that night did God appear unto Solomon, and said unto him, [p]Ask what I shall give thee.

8 And Solomon said unto God, [q]Thou hast shewed great mercy unto David my father, and hast made me [r]to reign in his stead.

9 Now, O LORD God, [s]let thy promise unto David my father be established: for thou hast made me king over a people like[1] the dust of the earth in multitude.

10 [t]Give me now wisdom and knowledge, that I may [u]go out and come in before this people: [v]for who can judge this thy people, that is so great?

11 And God said to Solomon, Because [w]this was in thine heart,[2] and thou hast not asked riches,[3] wealth, or honour, nor the life of thine enemies, neither yet hast asked long life; but hast asked wisdom and knowledge for thyself, [x]that thou mayest judge my people, over whom I have made thee king:

12 Wisdom and knowledge is granted unto thee; and [y]I will give thee riches, and wealth, and honour,[4] [z]such

13 ¶ Then Solomon came from his journey to the high place that was [a]at Gibeon to Jerusalem, from before the tabernacle of the congregation, and reigned[b] over Israel.[1]

14 And [c]Solomon gathered chariots and horsemen: and he had a thousand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, which he placed in the chariot cities,[2] and with the king at Jerusalem.

15 And [d]the king made[3] silver and gold at Jerusalem as plenteous as stones,[4] and cedar-trees made he as the sycamore-trees[e] that are in the vale[5] for abundance.

17 And they fetched up, and brought forth out of Egypt, a chariot for six hundred shekels of silver, and an horse for an hundred and fifty: and so brought they out horses for all [f]the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, by their means.[9]

16 And [g]we will cut wood out of Lebanon, as much[1] as thou shalt need; and we will bring it to thee in floats by sea to Joppa,[2] and thou shalt carry it up to Jerusalem.[3]

17 ¶ And Solomon [h]numbered all the strangers[4] that were in the land of Israel, [i]after the numbering wherewith David his father had numbered them; and they were found an hundred and fifty thousand, and three thousand and six hundred.

18 And he set [k]threescore and ten thousand of them to be bearers of burdens, and fourscore thousand to be hewers in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred overseers[5] to set the people a-work.

CHAPTER III.

The place, and time of building the temple, 1, 2. The dimensions and ornaments of the house, 3—10. The cherubims, 11—13. The vail and pillars, 14—17.

THEN [a]Solomon began to build the house of the LORD at Jerusalem [b]in mount Moriah,[6] where the[7] LORD appeared unto David his father, in the place that David had prepared in the thrashing-floor of [c]Ornan the Jebusite.

2 And he began to build [d]in the second day of the second month, in the fourth year of his reign.

3 ¶ Now these are the things wherein Solomon [e]was instructed[8] for the building of the house of God. [f]The length by cubits after the first measure[9] was threescore cubits, and the breadth twenty cubits.

4 And the porch that was in the front of the house, the length of it was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, and the height was an hundred[10] and twenty: and he overlaid it within with pure gold.

5 And [g]the greater house he ceiled with fir-tree, which he overlaid with fine gold, and set thereon palm-trees[11] and chains.

6 And he garnished[12] the house with [h]precious stones for beauty:[1] and the gold was gold of Parvaim.[2]

7 He [i]overlaid also the house, the beams, the posts, and the walls thereof, and the doors thereof, with gold; and [k]graved cherubims on the walls.

8 ¶ And he made [l]the most holy house, the length whereof was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits: and he overlaid it with fine gold, amounting to six hundred talents.

9 And the weight of the nails[3] was fifty shekels of gold. And he overlaid the upper chambers with gold.

10 And in the most holy house he made [m]two cherubims[4] of [5]image-work, and overlaid them with gold.

11 And the wings of the cherubims were twenty cubits long; one wing of the one cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the house; and the other wing was likewise five cubits, reaching to the wing of the other cherub.

12 And one wing of the other cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the house; and the other wing was five cubits also, joining to the wing of the other cherub.

13 The wings of these cherubims spread themselves forth twenty cubits: and they stood on their feet, and their faces were inward.[6]

14 ¶ And he made [n]the vail of blue, and purple, and crimson, and fine linen, and wrought[7] cherubims thereon.

15 ¶ Also he made before the house two[o] pillars[8] of thirty and five cubits high,[9] and the chapiter that was on the top of each of them was five cubits.

16 And he made [p]chains, as in the oracle, and put them on the heads of the pillars; and made [q]an hundred pomegranates, and put them on the chains.

17 And he [r]reared up the pillars before the temple, one on the right hand, and the other on the left; and called the name of that on the right hand Jachin,[10] and the name of that on the left Boaz.[11]

9 It is supposed that the first measure means the cubit used in the time of Moses, as contradistinguished from that used in Babylon, and which the Israelites used after their return from captivity; and as the books of Chronicles were written after the captivity, it was necessary for the writer to make this remark, lest it should be thought that the measurement was by the Babylonish cubit, which was a palm, or one-sixth shorter than the cubit of Moses. See the same distinction observed by Ezekiel, ch. 40. 5; 43. 13.
10 The Syriac, Arabic, & Septuagint, in the Cod. Alex. read twenty cubits. The difference between the word cubits and hundred consists in the transposition of two letters. But if the same building is spoken of as in 1 Ki. 6. 2, the height was thirty cubits.

11 These palm-trees may have formed a kind of pilasters, for that is the form in which a palm-tree, carved in relief, might be exhibited to most advantage. The word berosh, translated fir-tree, rather denotes the cypress, which, like the cedar, was peculiarly adapted for building, and was used by the ancients in their temples.

2 Some think this the name of a country, though it is difficult to fix on the locality. The Rabbins suppose it to mean 'highly coloured gold, which received a superior lustre from the matrices in which it was formed. Gesenius, in the Halle Encyclopædia, compares Parvaim with the Sanscrit purva, 'before,' i.e. to the east; so that gold of Parvaim would denote 'eastern gold.' Bochart conjectures that the name is identical with Ophir.

8 It seems to have been a general practice in remote antiquity, to erect isolated monuments, or obelisks, in front of their temples. Belzoni brought to light many of these colossal pillars connected with the stupendous structures of Egypt. Those mentioned here must have been of great value, since Nebuchadnezzar thought it worth while to transport them to Babylon, 2 Ki. 25. 17. In that passage the height of the chapiter is called only three cubits, while here it is five; the height may have been altered in the temple repairs.

They were probably the initial words of the inscriptions on the base of each pillar, and may mean, 'It shall stand — in strength.' In Hebrew it would read: Jachin — Boaz.

CHAPTER IV.

The altar of brass, 1. The molten sea supported by twelve oxen, 2—5. The ten lavers, candlesticks, and tables, 6—8. The courts, and the instruments of brass, 9—18. The instruments of gold, 19—22.

MOREOVER, he made [a]an altar[1] of brass, twenty cubits the length thereof, and twenty cubits the breadth thereof, and ten cubits the height thereof.

2 ¶ Also he made [b]a molten sea of ten cubits from brim to brim,[2] round in compass, and five cubits the height thereof; and a line of thirty cubits did compass it round about.

3 And under it was [c]the similitude of oxen,[3] which did compass it round about; ten in a cubit, compassing the sea round about. Two rows of oxen were cast, when it was cast.

4 It [d]stood upon twelve oxen, [e]three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east: and the sea was set above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward.

5 And the thickness of it was an hand-breadth, and the brim of it like the work of the brim of a cup, [4]with flowers of lilies; and it received and held [f]three thousand[5] baths.

6 ¶ He made also [g]ten lavers, and put five on the right hand, and five on the left, to wash in them: such[7] things as they offered for the burnt-offering they washed in them; [h]but the sea was for the priests to wash in.

7 ¶ And he made [i]ten candlesticks of gold [k]according to their form, and set them in the temple, five on the right hand, and five on the left.

8 He made also [l]ten tables, and placed them in the temple, five on the right side, and five on the left: and he made an hundred basons of gold.[8]

9 ¶ Furthermore, he made [m]the court of the priests, and the great court, and doors for the court,[9] and overlaid the doors of them with brass.

10 And [n]he set the sea on the right side of the east end, over against the south.

11 ¶ And Huram made [o]the pots, and the shovels, and the basons.[10] And Huram finished[11] the work that he was to make for king Solomon for the house of God;

12 To wit, [p]the two pillars, and [q]the pommels,[1] and the chapiters which were on the top of the two pillars; and the two wreaths to cover the two pommels of the chapiters which were on the top of the pillars;

13 And [r]four hundred pomegranates on the two wreaths; two rows of pomegranates on each wreath, to cover the two pommels of the chapiters which were upon the pillars.[2]

14 He made also [s]bases, and [3]lavers made he upon the bases;

15 [t]One sea, and twelve oxen under it.

16 The [u]pots also, and the shovels, and the [v]flesh-hooks, and all their instruments, did [w]Huram [x]his [4]father make to king Solomon, for the house of the LORD, of bright brass.[5]

17 In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in the [6]clay-ground between Succoth and [y]Zeredathah.[7]

18 Thus Solomon made all these vessels in great abundance: for [z]the weight of the brass could not be found out.

19 ¶ And Solomon made [a]all the vessels that were for the house of God, [b]the golden altar also, and [c]the tables whereon the shew-bread was set;

20 Moreover, [d]the candlesticks with their lamps, that they should [e]burn after the manner before [f]the oracle, of pure gold;[8]

21 And [g]the flowers,[9] and the lamps, and the tongs, made he of gold, and that perfect gold;[10]

22 And the [h]snuffers, and the basons,[11] and the spoons, and the censers, of pure gold: and [i]the entry[12] of the house, the inner doors thereof for the most holy place, and the doors of the house of the temple, were of gold.[13]

CHAPTER V.

2 ¶ [b]Then Solomon assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, [c]the chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto Jerusalem, to bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD [d]out of [e]the city of David, which is Zion.

3 Wherefore all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto the king, in[f] the feast which was in the seventh month.[1]

4 And all the elders of Israel came; and [g]the Levites took up the ark.

5 And they brought up the ark, and the[h] tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle; these did the priests and the Levites bring up.[2]

6 Also [i]king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel that were assembled unto him before the ark, sacrificed sheep and oxen, which could not be told nor numbered for multitude.

7 And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto his place, [k]to the oracle of the house, into the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims:

8 For the cherubims spread forth their wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and [l]the staves thereof above.

9 And they drew out the staves of the ark, that [m]the ends of the staves were seen from the ark before the oracle, but they were not seen without.[3] And there[4] it is unto this day.

10 There was nothing in the ark, save[n] the two tables which Moses put therein at Horeb, when[5] [o]the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of Egypt.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place; (for all the priests that were present[6] were [p]sanctified, and did not then [q]wait by course:

1 There was thus an interval of eleven months between the completion of the temple and its dedication. This interval may have been required for the finishing of the utensils, the drying of the walls, clearing away the rubbish, &c. Solomon also probably waited for the suitable opportunity which was offered in this month by the feast of tabernacles, when vast numbers of people resorted to Jerusalem from all parts of the kingdom. Indeed many think that the jubilee year now opened, and that the king waited for that most joyous and appropriate occasion. The seventh month of the ecclesiastical year was called Ethanim.

2 Probably the Levites of the family of Kohath carried the ark into the courts of the temple, and then the priests conveyed it into the holy place, because it was not lawful for the Levites to enter there. The ark had been carried by the priests three times before this, viz. when they went over Jordan, when they encompassed Jericho, and when David sent it back after flying from Absalom. The 'holy vessels' were probably those of the old Mosaic tabernacle, the various parts of which were now brought hither, and what were useful applied to the use of the temple, and kept with care, as proofs of past events concerning the nation.

CHAPTER VI.

Solomon, having blessed the people, blesseth God, 1—11. Solomon's prayer at the consecration of the temple, upon the brazen scaffold, 12—42.

THEN said Solomon, [a]The LORD hath said that he would dwell in the thick darkness.[3]

2 But [b]I have built an house of habitation for thee, and a place for thy dwelling for ever.

3 ¶ And the king [c]turned his face, and [d]blessed the whole congregation of Israel: (and [e]all the congregation of Israel stood:)

4 And he said, [f]Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, [g]who hath with his hands fulfilled that which he spake with his mouth to my father David, saying,

5 [h]Since the day that I brought forth my people out of the land of Egypt, I chose no city among all the tribes of Israel to build an house in, that [i]my name might be there; [k]neither chose I any man to be a ruler[4] over my people Israel:

7 It is no obscure hint that here is given of the spaciousness of the heavenly region, when it is said, that even heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain Him. How vast scope is given to our thinking minds to conceive heavens above heavens encircling one another till we have tired our faculties, and yet we know not how far short we are of the utmost verge; and when our Lord is said to have ascended above all heavens, (Ep. 4. 10,) whose arithmetic will suffice to tell how many theyare?'—John Howe.

30 Then hear thou from heaven thy dwelling-place, and forgive, and [u]render unto every man according unto all his ways, whose heart thou knowest; (for [v]thou only knowest the hearts of the children of men;)

31 That they may [w]fear thee, to walk in thy ways, so long[4] as they live in the land which thou gavest unto our fathers.

32 ¶ Moreover, concerning [x]the stranger, which is not of thy people Israel, but [y]is come from a far country for thy great name's sake,[5] and [z]thy mighty hand, and thy stretched-out arm; [a]if they come and pray in this house:

33 Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling-place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for; [b]that all people of the earth may know thy name, and fear thee, as doth thy people Israel; and may know that [6]this house, which I have built, is called by thy name.

34 ¶ If [c]thy people go out to war against their enemies [d]by the way that thou shalt send them, and [e]they pray unto thee [f]toward this city which thou hast chosen, and the house which I have built for thy name:

35 Then [g]hear thou from the heavens their prayer and their supplication, and [h]maintain their cause.[7]

36 ¶ If [i]they sin against thee, ([k]for there is no man which sinneth not,) and [l]thou be angry with them, and deliver them over before their enemies, and they[8] carry them away captives unto a land far off or near:

37 Yet [m]if they bethink[9] themselves in the land whither they are carried captive, and turn and pray unto thee in the land of their captivity, saying, [n]We have sinned, we have done amiss, and have dealt wickedly;

38 If they [o]return to thee with all their heart, and with all their soul, in the land of their captivity, whither they have carried them captives, and [p]pray toward their land, which thou gavest unto their fathers, and toward [q]the city which thou hast chosen, and toward the house which I have built for thy name:

39 Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling-place, their prayer and their supplications, and maintain their cause,[1] and [r]forgive thy people which have sinned against thee.

40 ¶ Now, [s]my God, let, I beseech thee, [t]thine eyes be open, and let [u]thine ears be attent unto the prayer that[2] is made in this place.

41 Now therefore [v]arise,[3] O LORD God, into [w]thy resting-place, thou, and [x]the ark of thy strength: let [y]thy priests, O LORD God, be clothed with salvation, and let [z]thy saints rejoice in goodness.

42 O LORD God, turn not away[4] the face of [a]thine anointed: [b]remember the mercies[5] of David thy servant.[6]

CHAPTER VII.

God having given testimony to Solomon's prayer by fire from heaven, and glory in the temple, the people worship him, 1—3. Solomon's solemn sacrifice, 4—7. Solomon having kept the feast of tabernacles, and the feast of the dedication of the altar, dismisseth the people, 8—11. God appearing to Solomon giveth him promises upon condition, 12—22.

NOW,[7] [a]when Solomon had made an end of praying, [b]the fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt-offering and the sacrifices; and [c]the glory of the LORD filled the house.

2 And [d]the priests could not enter into the house of the LORD, because the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD's house.

3 And when all the children of Israel saw how the fire came down, and the glory of the LORD upon the house, [e]they bowed themselves with their faces to the ground upon the pavement, and worshipped, and praised the LORD, saying, [f]For he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

Others, however, suppose that the 'locust' refers to the grasshoppers brought by wind from other countries, the 'caterpillar' to young locusts bred in the land.

4 ¶ Then the king and all the people offered sacrifices before the LORD.

5 And king Solomon offered [g] a sacrifice of twenty and two thousand oxen,[1] and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep. So the king and all the people [h] dedicated the house of God.

6 And [i] the priests waited on their offices; [k] the Levites also with instruments of musick of the LORD, [l] which David the king had made to praise the LORD, [m] because his mercy endureth for ever, when David praised by their ministry;[2] and [n] the priests sounded trumpets before them, and all Israel stood.

7 Moreover, Solomon [o] hallowed the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings, because [p] the brasen altar which Solomon had made was not able to receive the burnt-offerings, and the meat-offerings, and the fat.

8 Also at the same time Solomon kept [q] the feast seven days, and all Israel with him, [r] a very great congregation, from [s] the entering[3] in of Hamath unto the river of Egypt.

9 And in the eighth day they made a solemn[4] assembly; for they kept the dedication of the altar [t] seven days, and the feast seven days.

10 And on the [u] three and twentieth day of the seventh month he sent[5] the people away into their tents, [v] glad and merry in heart [w] for the goodness[6] that the LORD had shewed unto David, and to Solomon, and to Israel his people.

11 Thus [x] Solomon finished the house of the LORD, and the king's house: and [y] all that came into Solomon's heart to make in the house of the LORD, and in his own house, he prosperously effected.

12 ¶ And [z] the LORD appeared to Solomon by night, and said unto him, I [a] have heard thy prayer, and [b] have chosen this place to myself for [c] an house of sacrifice.

CHAPTER VIII.

A.M.3013. B.C.991.

5 Here we have Solomon diligent in business, building cities & fortifying them, engaging ships & trading with them. Thus he occupied himself usefully for his country, and employed many hands that would perhaps have otherwise been idle.

[a] 1 Ki. 9. 10.

14 If [g] my people, which[1] are called by my name, shall [h] humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and [i] turn from their wicked ways; then [k] will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will [l] heal their land.

15 Now [m] mine eyes shall be open, and mine ears attent unto the prayer that is made in this place.[2]

16 For now [n] have I chosen and sanctified this house, that [o] my name may be there for ever; and [p] mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.

17 And as for thee, [q] if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, and do according to all that I have commanded thee, and shalt [r] observe my statutes, and my judgments;

18 Then [s] will I establish the throne of thy kingdom, according [t] as I have covenanted with David thy father, saying, There [u] shall not fail[3] thee a man to be ruler in Israel.

19 But [v] if ye turn away, and forsake my statutes and my commandments, which I have set before you, and [w] shall go and serve other gods, and worship them;

20 Then [x] will I pluck them up by the roots out of my land which I have given them; and this house, which I have sanctified for my name, will I cast out of my sight, and will make it to be [y] a proverb and a by-word among all nations.

21 And [z] this house, which is high, shall be [a] an astonishment to every one that passeth by it; so that he shall say, [b] Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and unto this house?

22 And it shall be answered, [c] Because they forsook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, and laid hold on other gods, and worshipped them, and served them: [d] therefore hath he brought all this evil[4] upon them.

had built the house of the LORD, and his own house,

2 That [b]the cities which Huram had restored to Solomon, Solomon built them, and caused the children of Israel to dwell there.

3 And Solomon went to [c]Hamath-zobah, and prevailed against it.

4 And [d]he built Tadmor in the wilderness, and all the store-cities which he built in Hamath.

5 Also he built [e]Beth-horon[1] the upper, and Beth-horon the nether, fenced cities, with walls, gates, and bars;

6 And [f]Baalath,[2] and all [g]the store-cities that Solomon had, and all the chariot-cities,[h] and the cities of the horsemen, and all[3] that Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, [i]and in Lebanon, and throughout all the land of his dominion.

7 ¶ As for [k]all the people that were left of [l]the Hittites, and the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, which were not of Israel,

8 But of their children, who were left after them in the land,[4] [m]whom the children of Israel consumed not, them did Solomon make [n]to pay tribute until this day.

9 But [o]of the children of Israel did Solomon make no servants for his work; but [p]they were men of war, and chief of his captains, and captains of his chariots and horsemen.

10 And these were the chief of king Solomon's officers, even [q]two hundred and fifty, that bare rule over the people.

11 ¶ And Solomon [r]brought up the daughter of Pharaoh out of the city of David unto the house that he had built for her: for he said, My wife shall not dwell in the house of David king of Israel, because the places are holy,[5] whereunto the ark of the LORD hath come.

12 ¶ Then Solomon offered burnt-offerings unto the LORD [s]on the altar of the LORD, which he had built before the porch;

13 Even after a certain rate [t]every day, offering according to the commandment of Moses, on the sabbaths, and on the new-moons, and on the solemn feasts, [u]three times in the year, even in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles.

14 And he appointed, according to the order of David his father, [v]the courses of the priests to their service, and [w]the Levites to their charges, to praise and minister before [x]the priests, as the duty of every day required; [z]the porters also by their courses at every gate: for so[1] [y]had David [z]the man of God[2] commanded.

15 And [a]they departed not from the commandment of the king unto the priests and Levites, concerning any matter, or concerning [b]the treasures.

16 ¶ Now [c]all the work of Solomon was prepared unto the day of the foundation of the house of the LORD, and until it was finished: so the house of the LORD was perfected.

17 ¶ Then went Solomon to [d]Ezion-geber, and to [e]Eloth, at the sea-side[3] in the land of Edom.

18 And [f]Huram sent him, by the hands of his servants, ships, and servants that had knowledge of the sea; and they went with the servants of Solomon to Ophir,[4] and took thence four hundred and fifty talents[5] of gold, and brought them to king Solomon.

AND [a]when the queen of [6b]Sheba heard of [c]the fame of Solomon, she came to prove Solomon [d]with hard questions[7] at Jerusalem, with a very great company, and [e]camels that bare [f]spices, and gold in abundance, and precious stones: and when she was come to Solomon, [g]she communed with him of all that was in her heart.

2 And Solomon [h]told her all her questions: and [i]there was nothing hid from Solomon which he told her not.

3 And when the queen of Sheba had [k]seen the wisdom of Solomon, and [l]the house that he had built,

1 Eusebius says that the two Beth-horons were twelve miles from Jerusalem, towards Nicopolis or Emmaus; of which the one, called upper Beth-horon from its situation, was rebuilt by Solomon: and the other, called nether Beth-horon, was given to the Levites. Josephus places Beth-horon about 100 furlongs from Jerusalem. Dr Clarke mentions an Arab village, called Bethoor, about twelve miles from Jerusalem, between Rama and Jericho, which he supposes, from its situation on a hill, to be Beth-horon the upper. Robinson also identifies them with Beit Ur el-Tahta (the lower) and Beit Ur el Foka (the upper) which he describes in his Biblical Researches, vol. iii. p. 59-63. He found an ancient reservoir and old foundations of large stones.

There is the famous Trilithon, or three great stones, very similar to the supposed remains of Solomon's temple, in the mosque Es-Sachra, on mount Moriah. The inhabitants of the district ascribe the building of the town to Solomon.

7 'Besides what he gave her of his royal bounty,' 1 Ki. 10. 13. This reading is obviously the most correct, as it is not probable Solomon would insult her by returning her own presents. She had, no doubt, asked for several things which were peculiar to the land of Judea, and would be curiosities in her own country; and besides these, he gave her other valuable presents.

8 This influx of wealth tended to foster in Solomon a taste for gorgeous display. The targets and shields, for instance, (mentioned at ver. 15, 16,) were more for ornament than use, being designed to embellish his palaces, and to be carried before him in public processions. Ivory is not mentioned in scripture till the time of Solomon. The ivory-throne (ver. 17,) was not covered with gold, but only inlaid.

4 Tho' 'Tharshish' denotes the south-west part of the Spanish peninsula, the phrase, 'ships of Tharshish,' does not necessarily mean either ships that traded thither, or were built there, but simply, 'large sea ships fitted for a long voyage,' as distinguished from coasting-vessels, Tharshish being the most distant emporium of the Phœnician trade to the West. But it is here expressly said (what is not asserted in the book of Kings) that the ships went to Tarshish. There are four suppositions for the explanation of this account. 1st, That the voyage to Tarshish had no connection with that to Ophir, but the parallel passages identify them as the same. Or 2nd, That there was a locality called Tarshish in the East besides that in the West; but for this we have nothing but conjecture. Or 3d, That the fleet, sailing down the Red sea, circumnavigated Africa, and returned by the Mediterranean, which does not, for many reasons, seem very probable. Or 4th, That (by a natural transition of ideas among a people so ignorant as were the Jews of foreign geography) as ships which made long voyages were called 'ships of Tarshish,' the name was, in process of time, transferred to any distant country whither such ships traded, and hence while the book of Kings speaks of ships of Tarshish going to Ophir, the later writer in Chronicles speaks of ships going to Tarshish, i.e. on a foreign voyage.

30 And [c]Solomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel forty years.[3]

31 And Solomon [d]slept[4] with his fathers; and he was buried in the city of David his father: and Rehoboam his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER X.

The Israelites, assembled at Shechem to crown Rehoboam, by Jeroboam make a suit of relaxation unto him, 1—5. Rehoboam, refusing the old men's counsel, by the advice of young men answereth them roughly, 6—15. Ten tribes revolting, kill Hadoram, and make Rehoboam to flee, 16—19.

AND [a]Rehoboam went to Shechem:[5] for to [b]Shechem were [c]all Israel come to make him king.

2 And it came to pass, when [d]Jeroboam the son of Nebat (who was in Egypt, whither he had fled from the presence of Solomon the king) heard it, that Jeroboam returned out of Egypt.

3 And [e]they sent and called him: so Jeroboam and all Israel came and spake to Rehoboam, saying,

4 Thy [f]father made our yoke grievous: now therefore ease thou somewhat the [g]grievous[6] servitude of thy father, and his heavy yoke that he put upon us, and we will serve thee.

5 And he said unto them, [h]Come again unto me after three days. And the people departed.

6 ¶ And king Rehoboam [i]took counsel with the old men that had stood before Solomon his father while he yet lived, saying, [k]What counsel give ye me to return answer to this people?

7 And they spake unto him, saying, If[l] thou be kind to this people, and please them, and [m]speak good words to them, they will be thy servants for ever.

8 And [n]he forsook the counsel which the old men gave him, and took counsel with the young men[1] that were brought up with him, that stood before him.

9 And he said unto them, [o]What advice give ye that we may return answer to this people, which have spoken to me, saying, [p]Ease somewhat the yoke that thy father did put upon us?

10 And the young men that were brought up with him spake unto him, saying, [q]Thus shalt thou answer the people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it somewhat lighter for us; thus shalt thou say unto them, [r]My little finger[2] shall be thicker than my father's loins.

11 For whereas [s]my father put[3] a heavy yoke upon you, [t]I will put more to your yoke: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with [u]scorpions.

12 ¶ So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam on the third day, as the king bade, saying, [v]Come again to me on the third day.

13 And the king [w]answered them roughly: and king Rehoboam [x]forsook the counsel of the old men,[4]

14 And answered them after [y]the advice of the young men, saying, [z]My father made your yoke heavy, but I will add thereto: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

15 So the king hearkened not unto the people: for [a]the cause was of God, [b]that the LORD might perform his word, which he spake by the hand of [c]Ahijah the Shilonite to Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

16 And when all Israel saw that the king would not hearken unto them, the people answered the king, saying, [d]What portion have we in David? and we have none inheritance in [e]the son of Jesse; every man to your tents, O Israel: and now, [f]David, see to thine own house. [g]So all Israel went to their tents.

17 But [h]as for the children of Israel that dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent

1 Here was the beginning of Solomon's disobedience, and we see how one sin leads to another. He established a body of cavalry, which was forbidden, De. 17. 16, and horses were obtained from Egypt, with which the Israelites were forbidden to have intercourse. This connection with Egypt led to the marriage with Pharaoh's daughter; then followed marriages with other 'strange women.' These persuaded Solomon to build temples for their idolatrous worship, & afterwards for his own idolatry.

5 Shechem, also Sychar, now Nablous (a corruption of Neapolis) was situated in a narrow valley abounding with springs, between mounts Ebal and Gerizim. Robinson describes the modern city as long and narrow, stretching along the N.E. base of mount Gerizim, half an hour distant from the great eastern plain. The streets are narrow; the houses high and in general well built, with domes on the roofs, as at Jerusalem.

4 On this history Brown justly remarks, that 'men are readier to complain of the expense of government, than to acknowledge the benefit which they receive from it: & turbulent and ungrateful spirits will find fault where they can scarcely find the shadow of a reason. Young heads are ordinarily too hot to be wise counsellors: and many ruin their own interests by trampling on and provoking their inferiors. Moderate counsels are generally the most safe and prudent. Soft answers disarm men's passions, when harsh ones render them furious: and, when the affairs of church or state are in a ferment, rough proceedings do but make them worse and worse. Most men need no more to ruin them than to be given up to their own pride and passion. But O the wisdom and power of God, who can fulfil his counsels by men's folly and fury! Very uncertain are all earthly enjoyments: nor can the wisest secure them to his next heir. God often visits the iniquity of the fathers upon the children: but, amidst his anger, he never breaks his promise.'

adoram,[i] that was over the tribute;[1] d the children of Israel [k]stoned him th stones, that he died: but king hoboam made[2] speed to get him up his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem.
19 And [l]Israel rebelled[3] against the use of David [m]unto this day.

CHAPTER XI.

hoboam raising an army to subdue Israel, is forbidden by the iet Shemaiah, 1—4. He strengtheneth his kingdom with forts provision, 5—12. The priests and Levites, and such as feared forsaken by Jeroboam, strengthen the kingdom of Judah, 13— The wives and children of Rehoboam, 18—23.

ND [a]when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he gathered of the house Judah and Benjamin [b]an hundred l fourscore thousand chosen men, ich were warriors, to fight against ael, that he might bring the king- n again to Rehoboam.
2 But the word of the LORD came Shemaiah [d]the man of God, saying,
3 Speak unto Rehoboam the son of omon, king of Judah, and [e]to all iel in Judah and Benjamin, saying,
4 Thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not up, nor fight [f]against your bre- en: [g]return every man to his house; this thing is done of me. And y[i] obeyed the words of the LORD, returned from going against Jero- m.
5 ¶ And Rehoboam dwelt in Jeru- m, and [k]built cities for defence in ah.
6 He built even [l]Beth-lehem, and m,[m] and [n]Tekoa,
7 And [o]Beth-zur, and [p]Shoco, and ullam,[q]

9 And Adoraim, and [u]Lachish, and kah,
10 And [v]Zorah, and Aijalon, and ron,[w] which are in Judah and in jamin fenced cities.
11 And he fortified the strong- s, and put [x]captains in them, and e of victual, and of oil and wine.
12 And in every several city he [y]put lds and spears, and made them eding strong, [z]having Judah and jamin on his side.
13 ¶ And the priests and the Le- s that were in all Israel resorted[4] im out of all their coasts.

Rehoboam was a fool; and through his folly lost his kingdom. He is not the only example on record: the Stewarts lost the realm of England much in the same way; and, by a different mode of treatment, the house of Brunswick continues to fill the British throne. May the thread of its fortune, woven by the hand of God, never be undone! and may the current of its power glide on to the latest posterity!'—Clarke.

1 As they and the priests remained faithful to Jehovah, they were expelled from their offices by Jeroboam, lest they should turn the hearts of the people to the true God, & then they would revolt to Judah, 1 Ki. 12. 26. He then established a new worship, & made new gods, or at least idolatrous representations of the God of Israel. He himself offered incense, and he made priests of persons out of every tribe and class.

2 All the truly pious joined him out of every tribe; and the whole tribe of Levi, being deprived of their functions, joined him also. Thus he had Judah, Benjamin, and Levi, and probably a part of Simeon, for he had Etam (ver. 6) which was in that tribe, and the truly religious out of all the other tribes, for they would not bear Jeroboam's idolatry.

14 (For the Levites[1] left [a]their suburbs and [b]their possession, and came to Judah and Jerusalem; for [c]Jeroboam and his sons had cast them off from executing the priest's office unto the LORD:
15 And he ordained him priests for the high places, and [d]for the devils, and [e]for the calves which he had made.)
16 And [f]after them, out of all the tribes of Israel, such as [g]set their hearts to seek the LORD God of Israel, came to Jerusalem, [h]to sacrifice unto the LORD God of their fathers.
17 So they [i]strengthened the kingdom of Judah, and made Rehoboam the son of Solomon strong,[2] three years: for [k]three years they walked in the way of David and Solomon.[3]
18 ¶ And Rehoboam took him Mahalath, the daughter of Jerimoth the son of David, to wife, and Abihail, the daughter of [l]Eliab the son of Jesse;
19 Which bare him children; Jeush, and Shamariah, and Zaham.
20 And after her he took [m]Maachah the daughter of [n]Absalom; which bare him [o]Abijah, and Attai, and Ziza, and Shelomith.
21 And Rehoboam loved Maachah the daughter of Absalom above all his wives and his concubines; (for he took [p]eighteen wives, and threescore concubines; and begat twenty and eight sons, and threescore daughters.)
22 And Rehoboam [q]made Abijah the son of Maachah the chief, to be ruler among his brethren: for he thought to make him king.

fifth year of king Rehoboam, [d]Shishak[1] king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, [e]because they had transgressed against the LORD,

3 With [f]twelve hundred chariots, and threescore thousand horsemen: and the people were [g]without number that came with him out of Egypt; the Lubims,[h2] the Sukkiims, and the [i]Ethiopians.

4 And he took [k]the fenced cities which pertained to Judah, and [l]came to Jerusalem.

5 ¶ Then came [m]Shemaiah the prophet to Rehoboam, and to the princes of Judah that were gathered together to Jerusalem because of Shishak, and said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, Ye[n] have forsaken me, and therefore have I also [o]left you in the hand of Shishak.

6 Whereupon the princes of Israel and the king [p]humbled themselves; and they said, [q]The LORD is righteous.

7 And when [r]the LORD saw that they humbled themselves, the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah, saying, They have humbled themselves, therefore I will not destroy them, but I will grant them some[3] deliverance; [s]and my wrath shall not be poured out upon Jerusalem by the hand of Shishak.

8 Nevertheless [t]they shall be his servants;[4] that [u]they may know my service, and the service of the kingdoms of the countries.

9 So [v]Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, and [w]took away the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house; he took all: he carried away also [x]the shields[5] of gold which Solomon had made.

10 Instead of which king Rehoboam made [y]shields of brass, and committed them to the hands of [z]the chief of the guard, that kept the entrance of the king's house.

11 And when the king entered into the house of the LORD, the guard came and fetched them, and brought them again into the guard chamber.

12 And [a]when he humbled himself, the wrath of the LORD turned from him, that he would not destroy him altogether: and also[1] in Judah things went well.

13 ¶ So king Rehoboam strengthened himself in Jerusalem, and reigned; for [b]Rehoboam was one and forty[2] years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, [c]the city which the LORD had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, [d]to put his name there: and his mother's name was Naamah [e]an Ammonitess.

14 And he did evil, because [f]he prepared[3] not his heart [g]to seek the LORD.

15 Now the acts of Rehoboam, [h]first and last, are they not written in the book[4] of [i]Shemaiah the prophet, and of [k]Iddo the seer concerning genealogies?[5] And there were [l]wars between Rehoboam and Jeroboam continually.

16 And Rehoboam [m]slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David: and [n]Abijah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XIII.

Abijah succeeding maketh war against Jeroboam, 1—3. He declareth the right of his cause, 4—12. Trusting in God he overcometh Jeroboam, 13—20. The wives and children of Abijah, 21, 22.

NOW, [a]in the eighteenth[6] year of king Jeroboam began Abijah to reign over Judah.

2 He reigned three years in Jerusalem: (his mother's name also was [b]Michaiah,[7] the daughter of Uriel of [c]Gibeah:) [d]and there was war between Abijah and Jeroboam.

3 And Abijah set[8] the battle in array with an army of valiant men of war, even [e]four hundred thousand [g]chosen men: Jeroboam also set the battle in array against him with [f]eight hundred thousand chosen men, being mighty men of valour.

4 ¶ And Abijah stood up upon mount [g]Zemaraim, which is in mount Ephraim, and said, [h]Hear me, thou Jeroboam, and all Israel;

5 [i]Ought ye not to know that [k]the LORD God of Israel gave the kingdom over Israel [l]to David for ever, even to him and to his sons by [m]a covenant of salt?[10]

6 Yet Jeroboam the son of Nebat, the servant of Solomon the son of David, is risen up, and hath [n]rebelled against his lord.

6 Abijah is said to have begun his reign in the eighteenth year of Jeroboam's, and in the second year Asa began to reign, 1 Ki. 15. 9; and yet in ver. 2, it is said Abijah reigned three years. But the Hebrew writers often speak of a part of a year as the whole. Abijah began to reign in Jeroboam's eighteenth year and died during his twentieth.

7 And there are gathered unto him vain[o] men, [p]the children of Belial, and have strengthened themselves against Rehoboam the son of Solomon, when Rehoboam was [q]young and tender-hearted, and [r]could not withstand them.

8 And now ye think to withstand the[s] kingdom of the LORD in the hand of the sons of David; and ye be [t]a great multitude, and there are [u]with you golden calves, which Jeroboam made you for gods.

9 Have ye not [v]cast out the priests of the LORD, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites, and have [w]made you priests after the manner of the nations of other lands? so that whosoever cometh to consecrate[1] himself [x]with a young bullock[2] and seven rams, the same may be a priest of them that are [y]no gods.

10 But as for us, [z]the LORD is our God, and we have not forsaken[3] him; and [a]the priests, which minister unto the LORD, are the sons of Aaron, and the Levites wait upon their business:

11 And [b]they burn unto the LORD, every morning and every evening, burnt-sacrifices and [c]sweet incense: the [d]shew-bread also set they in order upon the pure table; and [e]the candlestick of gold, with the lamps thereof, to burn every evening: for [f]we keep the charge of the LORD our God; but ye have forsaken him.

12 And, behold, [g]God himself is with us [h]for our captain, and [i]his priests with sounding trumpets to cry alarm against you. O children of Israel, [k]fight ye not against the LORD God of your fathers; for [l]ye shall not prosper.

13 ¶ But Jeroboam caused [m]an ambushment[5] to come about behind them: so they were before Judah, and the ambushment was behind them.

14 And when Judah [n]looked back, behold, the battle was before and behind: and they [o]cried unto the LORD, and [p]the priests sounded with the trumpets.

15 Then the men of Judah gave a shout: and, [q]as the men of Judah shouted, it came to pass, that [r]God smote Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah.

16 And the children of Israel fled before Judah: and [s]God delivered them into their hand.

17 And Abijah and his people slew them with a great slaughter: so there fell down slain of Israel [t]five hundred thousand[1] chosen men.

18 Thus the children of Israel were brought under at that time, and the children of Judah prevailed, [u]because they relied upon the LORD God of their fathers.

19 And Abijah pursued after Jeroboam, and [v]took cities from him; Bethel with the towns thereof, and Jeshanah with the towns thereof, and [w]Ephraim with the towns thereof.

20 Neither did Jeroboam recover strength again in the days of Abijah: and [x]the LORD struck him, and [y]he died.[2]

21 ¶ But Abijah [z]waxed mighty, and married [a]fourteen wives, and [b]begat twenty and two sons, and sixteen daughters.

22 And the rest of the acts of Abijah, and his ways, and his sayings,[3] are written in the story[4] of the prophet [c]Iddo.

3 For [d]he took away the altars of the strange gods, and [e]the high places, and [f]brake down the images,[7] and [g]cut down the groves;

4 And [h]commanded Judah to [i]seek the LORD God of their fathers, and [k]to do the law and the commandment.

5 Also he took away out of all the cities of Judah the high places and the images:[8] and the kingdom was quiet before him.

Judah: [m]for the land had rest, and he had no war in those years; because the[n] LORD had given him rest.

7 Therefore [o]he said unto Judah, Let us build these cities, and make about them walls and towers, gates and bars, [p]while the land is yet before us; because we have sought the LORD our God, [q]we have sought him, and [r]he hath given us rest on every side: so they built and prospered.

8 ¶ And Asa had an army of men that bare targets and spears,[1] [s]out of Judah three hundred thousand, and out of Benjamin, that bare shields and drew bows, two hundred and fourscore thousand: all these were mighty men of valour.

9 ¶ And there came out against them [t]Zerah the Ethiopian, with an host of a thousand thousand,[2] and three hundred chariots; and came unto Mareshah. [u]

10 Then Asa went out against him, and they set the battle in array in the valley of [v]Zephathah[3] at Mareshah.

11 And Asa [w]cried unto the LORD his God, and said, LORD, it is [x]nothing with thee to help, whether with many, or with [y]them that have no power: help us, O LORD our God; for we [z]rest on thee, and [a]in thy name we go against this multitude. O LORD, thou art our God; [b]let not man[4] prevail against thee.

12 So [c]the LORD smote the Ethiopians before Asa, and before Judah; and the Ethiopians fled.

13 And Asa, and the people that were with him, pursued them unto Gerar: [d] and the Ethiopians were overthrown, that they could not recover themselves; for they were destroyed[5] before[e] the LORD, and before [f]his host: and they carried away very much spoil.

14 And they smote all the cities round about Gerar; for [g]the fear of the LORD came upon them: and they spoiled all the cities; for there was [h]exceeding much spoil in them.

15 They smote also [i]the tents of cattle, and [k]carried away sheep and camels in abundance, and returned to Jerusalem.

2 It is suspected that the number has been corrupted in some such way as the addition of a cypher would do in our way of stating numbers; or perhaps a large indefinite number is expressed by a larger definite one. The Syriac has only 30,000. Brucesays: 'twenty camels employed to carry couriers upon them might have procured that number of men to meet in a short space of time, and as Zerah was the aggressor he had time to choose when he should attack his enemy; every one of these shepherds carrying with them their provisions of flour and water, as is their invariable custom, might have fought with Asa in Gerar without eating a loaf of Zerah's bread, or drinking a pint of his water.'

CHAP. XV.

Asa with Judah and many of Israel, moved by the prophecy of Azariah the son of Oded, make a solemn covenant with God, 1—15. He putteth down Maachah his mother for her idolatry, 16, 17. He bringeth dedicated things into the house of God, and enjoyeth a long peace, 18, 19.

AND [a]the Spirit of God came upon Azariah the son of Oded:

2 And he went out to[1] meet Asa, and said unto him, [b]Hear ye me, Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin; [c]the LORD is with you, while ye be with him; and [d]if ye seek him, he will be found of you; but [e]if ye forsake him, he will forsake you.

3 Now for [f]a long season Israel hath been without the [g]true God, and without [h]a teaching priest, and [i]without law.[2]

4 But when they [k]in their trouble did turn unto the LORD God of Israel, and sought him, he was [l]found of them.

5 And in those times there was [m]no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in, but [n]great vexations were upon all the inhabitants of the countries.

6 And [o]nation was destroyed[3] of nation, and city of city: for [p]God did vex them with all adversity.

7 Be [q]ye strong therefore, and let not your hands be weak; for [r]your work shall be rewarded.

8 ¶ And when Asa heard these words, and the prophecy of [s]Oded[4] the prophet, he [t]took courage, and put away [u]the abominable[5] idols out of all the land of Judah and Benjamin, and out of [v]the cities which he had taken from mount Ephraim, and renewed [w]the altar of the LORD that was before the porch of the LORD.

9 And he gathered all Judah and Benjamin, and [x]the strangers with them out of Ephraim and Manasseh, and out of Simeon: (for [y]they fell to him out of Israel in abundance, when [z]they saw that the LORD his God was with him:)

10 So they gathered themselves together at Jerusalem in [a]the third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Asa.

11 And they [b]offered unto the LORD the[6] same time, of the spoil which they had brought, [c]seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep.

12 And [d]they entered into a covenant to [e]seek the LORD God of their fathers with all their heart, and with all their soul;

13 That [f]whosoever would not seek the LORD God of Israel should be put to death, [g]whether small or great, whether man or woman.

14 And [h]they sware unto the LORD with a loud voice, and with shouting, and [i]with trumpets, and with cornets.

15 And all Judah [k]rejoiced at the oath: for they had [l]sworn with all their heart, and [m]sought him with their whole desire; and [n]he was found of them: and [o]the LORD gave them rest round about.

16 ¶ And also concerning [p]Maachah, the[1] mother of Asa the king, [q]he removed her from being queen, because she had made an idol[2] in a grove: and Asa [r]cut down her idol, and stamped it, and burnt it at the brook Kidron.

17 But [s]the high places[3] were not taken away out of Israel: nevertheless the[t] heart of Asa was perfect all his days.

18 ¶ And he [u]brought into the house of God the things that his father had dedicated, and that he himself had dedicated, silver, and gold, and vessels.

19 And there was no more war unto the [v]five and thirtieth year[4] of the reign of Asa.

CHAPTER XVI.

Asa, by the aid of the Syrians, diverteth Baasha from building of Ramah, 1—6. Being reproved thereof by Hanani, he putteth him in prison, 7—10. Among his other acts in his disease he seeketh not to God, but to the physicians, 11, 12. His death and burial, 13, 14.

IN the six and thirtieth year[5] of the reign of Asa, [a]Baasha king of Israel came up against Judah, and built Ramah, [b]to the intent that he might let none go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

2 Then Asa [c]brought out silver and gold out of the treasures of the house of the LORD, and of the king's house, and sent to Ben-hadad king of Syria, that dwelt at Damascus,[6] saying,

3 There is [d]a league between me and thee, as there was between my father and thy father: behold, I have sent thee silver and gold; go, [e]break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may depart from me.

5 Compare 1 Ki. 15. 33, and 16. 8, from which we learn that Baasha began to reign in the third year of Asa, that he reigned 24 years, and that his son succeeded in the 26th year of Asa's reign. It is therefore probable that the present text is corrupted, being contradictory to three other dates which show that Baasha died ten years before the date here given to his enterprise.

2 All the places and districts here mentioned were in the north of Israel, on the borders of Syria, and consequently more exposed to the attacks of Ben-hadad's forces. Finding it necessary to protect his kingdom on the Syrian frontier, Baasha not only relinquished his attempt to fortify Ramah, but left it in the hands of the Judahites. This policy of inviting the neighbouring kings to assist them, proved at last the ruin of both kingdoms. Abel-Maim is in the parallel place called Abel-beth-maachah, as it belonged to the district of Maachah.

5 And it came to pass, when Baasha heard it, [k]that he left off building of Ramah, and let his work cease.

6 Then Asa the king took all Judah; and [l]they carried away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha was a building; and he built therewith [m]Geba and [n]Mizpah.

7 ¶ And at that time [o]Hanani the seer came to Asa king of Judah, and said unto him, [p]Because thou hast relied on the king of Syria, and not [q]relied on the LORD thy God, therefore is [r]the host of the king of Syria escaped out of thine hand.

8 Were not [s]the Ethiopians and the Lubims a[3] huge host, with very many chariots and horsemen? yet, [t]because thou didst rely on the LORD, he delivered them into thine hand.

CHAPTER XVII.

Jehoshaphat, succeeding Asa, reigneth well, and prospereth, 1—6. He sendeth Levites with his princes to teach Judah, 7—9. His enemies being terrified by God, some of them bring him presents and tribute, 10, 11. His greatness, captains, and armies, 12—19.

AND [a]Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his stead, [b]and strengthened himself against Israel.

2 And he [c]placed forces in all the fenced cities of Judah, and set garrisons in the land of Judah, and [d]in the cities of Ephraim, which Asa his father had taken.

3 And [e]the LORD was with Jehoshaphat, because [f]he walked in the first ways of his[2] father David,[3] and [g]sought not unto Baalim;

4 But sought to the LORD God of his father, and [h]walked in his commandments, and [i]not after the doings of Israel:

5 Therefore [k]the LORD established the kingdom in his hand; and all Judah brought[4] to Jehoshaphat [l]presents; and [m]he had riches and honour in abundance.

6 And [n]his heart was lifted[5] up [o]in the ways of the LORD: moreover, [p]he took away the high places and groves out of Judah.

7 ¶ Also in the third year of his reign [q]he sent to his princes, even to Ben-hail, and to Obadiah, and to Zechariah, and to Nethaneel, and to Micaiah, [r]to teach in the cities of Judah.

8 And with them he sent Levites, even Shemaiah, and Nethaniah, and Zebadiah, and Asahel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehonathan, and Adonijah, and Tobijah, and Tob-adonijah, Levites; and with them Elishama and Jehoram, [s]priests.

9 And they taught in Judah, and had [t]the book of the law of the LORD with them, and went about [u]throughout all the cities of Judah, and taught the people.[6]

10 ¶ And [v]the fear of the LORD fell[7] upon all the kingdoms of the lands that were round about Judah, so[w] that they made no war[8] against Jehoshaphat.

11 Also some of the Philistines brought[x] Jehoshaphat presents, and tribute-silver; and the Arabians brought him flocks, seven thousand and seven hundred rams, and seven thousand and seven hundred he-goats.

12 ¶ And Jehoshaphat[y] waxed great exceedingly; and he built [z]in Judah castles,[1] and cities of store.

13 And he had [a]much business in the cities of Judah: and the men of war, mighty men of valour, were in Jerusalem.

14 And these are [b]the numbers of them, according [c]to the house of their fathers: of Judah, the captains of thousands; Adnah the chief, and with him mighty men of valour [d]three hundred thousand.

15 And next[2] to him was Jehohanan the captain, and with him two hundred and fourscore thousand.

16 And next him was Amasiah the son of Zichri, who [e]willingly offered himself unto the LORD; and with him two hundred thousand mighty men of valour.[3]

17 And of Benjamin; Eliada, a mighty man of valour, and with him [f]armed men with bow and shield two hundred thousand.

18 And next him was Jehozabad, and with him an hundred and fourscore thousand ready prepared for the war.

19 These waited on the king, besides those whom the king [g]put in the fenced cities throughout all Judah.[4]

CHAPTER XVIII.

Jehoshaphat, joined in affinity with Ahab, is persuaded to go with him against Ramoth-gilead, 1—3. Ahab, seduced by false prophets according to the word of Micaiah, is slain there, 4—34.

NOW Jehoshaphat had [a]riches and honour in abundance, and [b]joined affinity[5] with Ahab.

2 And after[6] certain years [c]he went down to Ahab to Samaria: and [d]Ahab killed sheep and oxen for him in abundance, and for the people that he had with him, and [e]persuaded him to go up with him to [f]Ramoth-gilead.

3 And Ahab king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat king of Judah, Wilt thou go with me to Ramoth-gilead? And he answered him, [g]I am as thou art, and my people as thy people; and we will be with thee in the war.

4 'How glorious is it when remarkable piety & prosperity are so connected that they promote one another, and outward wealth and greatness lift up the heart to God! —when kings at the same time promote religion and advance the civil power of the nation!—when the personal piety of princes, and their zeal for reforming others, are equally conspicuous!— & when ministers & magistrates heartily concur in promoting the knowledge and fear of God! Religion is a reasonable service; and, in promoting reformation, we must begin with instruction in the truths of God, as laid down in his word. No dictates of men, but the lively oracles of God, must be produced as the ground of what we inculcate. What a powerful protection to nations is the terror of God impressed on their neighbours & enemies? No armed hosts are comparable to it. To what prodigious numbers had the Hebrews increased, had not their sin prevented it! and marvellous was the providence of God in maintaining such multitudes in so small a country as the lots of Judah and Benjamin.'—Brown.

4 ¶ And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, [h]Enquire, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to-day.

5 Therefore the king of Israel gathered together of [i]prophets four hundred men, and said unto them, [k]Shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, [l]Go up; for God[1] will deliver it into the king's hand.

6 ¶ But Jehoshaphat said, [m]Is there not here a prophet of the LORD besides,[2] that we might enquire of him?

7 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet [n]one man, by whom we may enquire of the LORD: but [o]I hate him; for he never prophesieth [p]good unto [q]me, but always evil: the same is Micaiah the son of Imla. And Jehoshaphat said, [r]Let not the king say so.

8 And the king of Israel called for one of his officers,[3] and said, Fetch[4] quickly Micaiah the son of Imla.

9 And the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat king of Judah, [s]sat either of them on his throne, [t]clothed in their robes, and they sat in a void[5] place at the entering in of the gate of Samaria; and [u]all the prophets prophesied before them.

10 And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah had made him [v]horns of iron, and said, [w]Thus saith the LORD, With these thou shalt push Syria until they be consumed.[6]

11 And [x]all the prophets prophesied so, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper; for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

12 And the messenger that went to call Micaiah spake to him, saying, [y]Behold, the words of the prophets declare good to the king with one assent:[7] let thy word therefore, I pray thee, be like one of theirs, and speak thou good.

13 And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, [z]even what my God saith, that will I speak.

14 And when he was come to the king, the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And he said, [a]Go ye up, and prosper, and they shall be delivered into your hand.[8]

Perhaps Jehoshaphat suspected their character from their using that word, which might apply to Baal, or any heathen god, and therefore in the rest of the interview, Zedekiah and the others employ the name Jehovah.

'In one of the halls of the Seraglio at Constantinople, the eunuch made us pass by several little chambers, with doors shut, like the cells of monks or nuns, as far as I could judge by one that another eunuch opened, which was the only one I saw, and by the outside of others.'—De la Motraye, v. 2, p. 170. This corresponds with the idea of a "chamber within a chamber;" and as the Harem was and is deemed inviolate, it might afford an excellent shelter to Zedekiah.

15 ¶ And the king said to him, How many times [b]shall I adjure thee that thou say nothing but the truth to me in the name of the LORD?

16 Then [c]he said, I did see all Israel scattered upon the mountains, [d]as sheep that have no shepherd: and the LORD said, These have no [e]master; let them return therefore every man to his house in peace.

17 And the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, [f]Did I not tell thee that he would not prophesy good unto me but[1] evil?

18 Again he said, Therefore [g]hear the word of the LORD; [h]I saw the LORD sitting upon his throne, and [i]all the host of heaven standing on his right hand and on his left.

19 And the LORD said, [k]Who shall entice Ahab king of Israel, that he may [l]go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one spake saying after this manner, and another saying after that manner.

20 Then [m]there came out a spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will entice him. And the LORD said unto him, Wherewith?

21 And he said, I will go out, and be [n]a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the LORD said, [o]Thou shalt entice him, and thou shalt also prevail: go out, and do even so.

22 Now therefore, behold, [p]the LORD hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of these thy prophets, [q]and the LORD hath spoken evil against thee.

23 ¶ Then [r]Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah came near, and smote Micaiah upon the cheek, and said, [s]Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee?

24 And Micaiah said, [t]Behold, thou shalt see on that day when thou shalt go into[2] an inner-chamber to hide thyself.[3]

25 Then the king of Israel said, Take ye Micaiah, [u]and carry him back to Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

26 And say, Thus saith the king, [v]Put [w]this fellow in the prison, and feed him with [x]bread of affliction, and with water of affliction, [y]until I return in peace.

27 And Micaiah said, [z]If thou certainly return in peace, then hath not the LORD spoken by me.[1] And he said, Hearken,[a] all ye people.[2]

28 ¶ So [b]the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, went up to Ramoth-gilead.

29 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, [c]I will disguise[3] myself, and will go to the battle; but [d]put thou on thy robes.[4] So [e]the king of Israel disguised himself; and they went to the battle.

30 Now the king of Syria had commanded the captains of the chariots that were with him, saying, [f]Fight ye not with [g]small or great, save only with the king of Israel.

31 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, It is the king of Israel; therefore they compassed about him to fight: but [h]Jehoshaphat cried out, and [i]the LORD helped him; and God[k] moved them to depart from him.

32 For it came to pass, that, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, they turned back again from[5] pursuing him.

33 ¶ And [l]a certain man[6] drew a bow at[7] a venture, and smote the king of Israel between[8] the joints of the harness: therefore he said to his chariot-man, Turn thine hand, that thou mayest carry me out of the host; for I am wounded.[9]

34 And the battle increased that day: howbeit the king of Israel stayed himself up in his chariot against the Syrians until the even; and about the time of the sun going down [m]he died.[10]

AND Jehoshaphat the king of Judah returned to his house [a]in peace to Jerusalem.

2 And [b]Jehu the son of [c]Hanani the [d]seer went out to meet him, and said to king Jehoshaphat, [e]Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and love them that [f]hate the LORD? therefore [g]is wrath upon thee from before the LORD.

3 Nevertheless there are [h]good things found in thee, in that thou hast taken away the groves out of the land, and hast [i]prepared thine heart to seek God.

4 ¶ And Jehoshaphat dwelt at Jerusalem: and he went[1] out again through the people, from [k]Beer-sheba to [l]mount Ephraim, and [m]brought them back unto the LORD God of their fathers.

5 ¶ And [n]he set judges in the land, throughout all the fenced cities of Judah, city by city;

6 And said to the judges, [o]Take heed what ye do: for [p]ye judge not for man, but for the LORD, who is with you in the judgment.[2]

7 Wherefore now, [q]let the fear of the LORD be upon you; take heed and do it: for there is [r]no iniquity with the LORD our God, nor [s]respect of persons, nor [t]taking of gifts.

8 ¶ Moreover, in Jerusalem did Jehoshaphat set [u]of the Levites, and of the priests, and of the chief of the fathers of Israel, for [v]the judgment of the LORD, and for controversies, when they returned[3] to Jerusalem.

9 And he charged them, saying, Thus shall ye do [w]in the fear of the LORD, faithfully, and with a perfect heart.

10 And what cause soever shall come to you of your brethren that dwell in their cities, [x]between blood and blood, between law and commandment, statutes and judgments, ye shall even [y]warn them that they trespass not against the LORD, and so [z]wrath come upon you, and upon your brethren: this do, and ye shall not trespass.

11 And, behold, [a]Amariah the chief priest is over you in [b]all matters of the LORD; and Zebadiah the son of Ishmael, the ruler of the house of Judah, for all the king's matters:[4] also the Levites shall be officers before you. 3 This clause does not correspond with the opening of the verse, for it relates to the appointment of judges in Jerusalem, and how can it be said that they returned thither? The Syriac has, 'he returned to Jerusalem,' and connects the clause with ver. 9, 'And charged them, saying.' But it is now generally admitted that the true reading is that of the Greek & Latin versions, which implies that the object of the appointment was to dispense justice 'to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.'

The written law is administered by ecclesiastical persons; the unwritten by secular magistrates, with the king at their head.

dren of Ammon, and with them other besides the Ammonites,[1] [c]came against Jehoshaphat to battle.

2 Then there came some that told Jehoshaphat, saying, There cometh a great multitude against thee from [d]beyond the sea on this side Syria; and, behold, they be in [e]Hazazon-tamar, which is [f]En-gedi.[2]

3 And Jehoshaphat [g]feared, and set himself[3] to [h]seek the LORD, and proclaimed[i] a fast throughout all Judah.

4 And Judah gathered themselves together, to [k]ask help of the LORD; even out of all [l]the cities of Judah they came to seek the LORD.

5 ¶ And [m]Jehoshaphat stood in the congregation of Judah and Jerusalem, in the house of the LORD, before the new court,

6 And said, [n]O LORD God of our fathers, art not thou [o]God in heaven? and [p]rulest not thou over all the kingdoms of the heathen? and [q]in thine hand is there not power and might, so that [r]none is able to withstand thee?

7 Art not thou [s]our God, who[4] didst drive[t] out the inhabitants of this land before thy people Israel, and [u]gavest it to the seed of Abraham [v]thy friend for ever?

8 And they dwelt therein, and have built[w] thee a sanctuary therein for thy name, saying,

9 [x]If, when evil cometh upon us, as the sword, judgment, or pestilence, or famine, we stand before this house, and in thy presence, (for [y]thy name is in this house,) and cry unto thee in our affliction, then thou wilt hear and help.

10 And now, behold, the children of Ammon, and Moab, and mount Seir, whom[z] thou wouldest not let Israel invade, when they came out of the land of Egypt, but they turned from them, and destroyed them not;

11 Behold, I say, [a]how they reward us, to come [b]to cast us out of thy possession, which thou hast given us to inherit.

12 O our God, [c]wilt thou not judge them? for [d]we have no might against this great company that cometh against us; [e]neither know we what to do: but [f]our eyes are upon thee.

A.M.3108. B.C.896.

1 Literally, 'and with them, some of the Ammonites,' which does not yield a congruous sense; more especially as at ver. 10, 22, and 23, a third nation is mentioned, viz. 'they of mount Seir.' The Chaldee then seems to have hit the meaning by rendering, 'and some of the Edomites,' for mount Seir was part of their possessions. So Houbigant, Geddes, &c.

2 Professor Robinson says: 'From Carmel our course lay directly east, to Ain-Jiddi, the ancient Engedi, on the western shore of the Dead sea. The way was a continual descent, sometimes by steep passes, and again crossing deep wadys. As we approached the sea, the region became more desert and desolate than ever. At every moment we expected to arrive at the shore of the sea, and on the level of its waters; but the way at every step seemed longer and longer. At length, after a ride of seven hours, we came to the brow of the pass of Engedi.'

13 And [g]all Judah stood before the LORD, with their little ones,[1] their wives, and their children.

14 ¶ [h]Then upon Jahaziel the son of Zechariah, the son of Benaiah, the son of Jeiel, the son of Mattaniah, a Levite of the sons of Asaph, [i]came the Spirit of the LORD in the midst of the congregation;

15 And he said, Hearken ye, all Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, and thou king Jehoshaphat; Thus saith the LORD unto you, [k]Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for [l]the battle is not yours, but God's.

16 To-morrow go ye down against them: behold, they come up by the cliff of Ziz;[2] and ye shall find them at the end of the brook,[3] before the wilderness of Jeruel.

17 Ye shall [m]not need to fight in this battle; set yourselves, [n]stand ye still, and see the salvation of the LORD with you, O Judah and Jerusalem: fear not, nor be dismayed; to-morrow go out against them: [o]for the LORD will be with you.[4]

18 And Jehoshaphat [p]bowed his head with his face to the ground; and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell before the LORD, worshipping the LORD.

19 And [q]the Levites, of the children of the Kohathites, and of the children of the [r]Korhites, stood up to praise the LORD God of Israel with [s]a loud voice on high.

20 And they rose early in the morning, and went forth into the wilderness of [t]Tekoah: and as they went forth, Jehoshaphat stood and said, [u]Hear me, O Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem; [v]Believe in the LORD your God, so shall ye be established; [w]believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper.

21 And when he had [x]consulted with the people, he [y]appointed[5] singers unto the LORD, and that[6] should praise [z]the beauty of holiness, as they went out before the army, and to say, [a]Praise the LORD; for his mercy endureth for ever.

Moab, and mount Seir,[1] which were come against Judah; and they were smitten.[2]

23 For the children of Ammon and Moab stood up against the inhabitants of [c]mount Seir, utterly to slay and destroy them: and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped to destroy[3] another.

24 And when Judah came toward the watch-tower in the wilderness, they looked unto the multitude, and, behold, they[d] were dead bodies fallen to the earth, and none escaped.[4]

25 And when Jehoshaphat and his people came to take away the spoil of them, [e]they found among them in abundance both riches with the dead bodies,[5] and [f]precious jewels, (which they stripped off for themselves,) more than they could carry away: and they were three days in gathering of the spoil, it was so much.

26 ¶ And on the fourth day they assembled themselves in the valley of Berachah;[6] for there they [g]blessed the LORD: therefore [h]the name of the same place was called The valley of Berachah [i]unto this day.

27 Then they returned, every man of Judah and Jerusalem, and Jehoshaphat in the fore-front[7] of them, to go again to Jerusalem with joy: for [k]the LORD had made them to rejoice over their enemies.

28 And they came to Jerusalem with[l] psalteries, and harps, and trumpets, unto the house of the LORD.[8]

29 And [m]the fear of God was on all the kingdoms of those countries, when they[n] had heard that the LORD fought against the enemies of Israel.

30 So the realm of Jehoshaphat was quiet; for [o]his God gave him rest round about.

31 ¶ And [p]Jehoshaphat reigned over Judah.[9] He was thirty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty and five years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Azubah, the daughter of Shilhi.

32 And [q]he walked in [r]the way of Asa his father, and [s]departed not from it, doing that which was right in the sight of the LORD.

1 Houbigant translates the place thus; 'The Lord set against the children of Ammon & Moab, ambushments of those who came from mount Seir, against Judah; and the children of Ammon and Moab were smitten; but they afterwards rose up against the inhabitants of mount Seir and utterly destroyed them, who being destroyed, they rose up one against another & mutually destroyed each other.' NOW [a]Jehoshaphat slept with his fathers, and [b]was buried with his fathers in the city of David: and [c]Jehoram his son reigned in his stead.

2 And he had brethren, the sons of Jehoshaphat, Azariah, and Jehiel, and Zechariah, and Azariah, and Michael, and Shephatiah: all these were the sons of Jehoshaphat king of Israel.[6]

3 And their father [d]gave them great gifts of silver, and of gold, and of precious things, with fenced cities in Judah: but the kingdom[7] gave he to Jehoram, because he was the first-born.

4 Now, when Jehoram was risen up to the kingdom of his father, he strengthened himself, and [e]slew[8] all his brethren with the sword, and divers also of the princes of Israel.

5 ¶ Jehoram was thirty and two years old when he began to reign; and [f]he reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

6 And he walked [g]in the way of the kings of Israel, like as did the house of Ahab; for [h]he had the daughter of Ahab[9] to wife: and he wrought that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD

7 Howbeit [i]the LORD would not destroy the house of David, [k]because of the covenant that he had made with David, and [l]as he promised to give a light[1] to him and to his sons for ever.

8 ¶ In his days [m]the Edomites revolted from under the dominion[2] of Judah, [n]and made themselves a king.

9 Then Jehoram went forth with his princes, and all his chariots with him: and he rose up by night, and smote the Edomites which compassed him in, and the captains of the chariots.

10 So the Edomites revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. The same time also did [o]Libnah revolt from under his hand; [p]because he had forsaken the LORD God of his fathers.

12 ¶ And there came [u]a writing[3] to him from [v]Elijah the prophet, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of David thy father, Because thou hast not walked [w]in the ways of Jehoshaphat thy father, nor [x]in the ways of Asa king of Judah,

13 But hast walked [y]in the way of the kings of Israel, and hast made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to go a [z]whoring, like to the whoredoms of the house of Ahab, and also [a]hast slain thy brethren of thy father's house, which were better than thyself:

14 Behold, with a great plague[4] will the LORD smite [b]thy people, and [c]thy children, and thy wives, and all thy goods;

15 And thou shalt have great sickness [d]by disease of thy bowels,[5] until thy[e] bowels fall out by reason of [f]the sickness day by day.

16 ¶ Moreover, [g]the LORD stirred up against Jehoram the spirit of the Philistines,[h] and of the Arabians, that were near the Ethiopians;

17 And they came up into Judah, and brake into it, and carried[6] away all the substance that was found in the king's house, and [i]his sons also, and his wives; so that there was never a son left him, save [k]Jehoahaz, the youngest of his sons.

18 ¶ And after all this the LORD smote him in his bowels with [l]an incurable disease.

19 And it came to pass, that, in process of time, after the end of two years, his bowels fell out by reason of his sickness: so he died of sore diseases: and his people [m]made no burning for him, like the burning of his fathers.

20 [n]Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned in Jerusalem eight years, and departed without[1] being desired:[2] howbeit they buried him in the city of David, but not in the sepulchres of the kings.

CHAPTER XXII.

Ahaziah succeeding, reigneth wickedly, 1—4. In his confederacy with Joram the son of Ahab, he is slain by Jehu, 5—9. Athaliah, destroying all the seed royal, save Joash, whom Jehoshabeath his aunt hid, usurpeth the kingdom, 10—12.

AND [a]the inhabitants of Jerusalem made [b]Ahaziah his youngest son king in his stead: for the band of men that came with the Arabians[3] to the camp had [c]slain all the eldest. So Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah reigned.

2 [d]Forty and two[4] years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign; and he reigned one year in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was [e]Athaliah, the daughter of Omri.

3 He also walked in the ways of the house of Ahab:[5] for [f]his mother was [g]his counsellor to do wickedly.

4 Wherefore he did evil in the sight of the LORD, like the house of Ahab; for [h]they were his counsellors, after the death of his father, to his destruction.

5 ¶ He [i]walked also after their counsel,[6] and [k]went with Jehoram the son of Ahab king of Israel to war against Hazael king of Syria at [l]Ramoth-gilead: and the Syrians smote Joram.

6 And he returned to be healed in Jezreel, because of the wounds [7]which were given him at Ramah, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria. And [m]Azariah[8] the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down [n]to see Jehoram the

We might adopt this conjecture, were not every Hebrew MS. and all the ancient versions against it. There is nothing improbable in the supposition, that Elijah had been led to utter and record this prophecy before his removal. 'It was a new mode of appeal to the princes and people. son of Ahab at Jezreel, because he was sick.

7 And the destruction[1] of Ahaziah was[o] of God, by coming to Joram: for, when he was come, [p]he went out with Jehoram against Jehu the son of Nimshi, whom [q]the LORD had anointed to cut off the house of Ahab.

8 And it came to pass, that, [r]when Jehu was executing judgment upon the house of Ahab, and found the princes of Judah, and the sons of the brethren of Ahaziah, that ministered to Ahaziah, he slew them.

9 And [s]he sought Ahaziah: and they caught him, (for he was hid [t]in Samaria,) and brought him to Jehu; and when they had slain him,[2] they buried him: [u]Because (said they) he is [v]the son of Jehoshaphat, who sought the LORD with all his heart. So [w]the house of Ahaziah had no power to keep still the kingdom.

10 ¶ But when [x]Athaliah,[3] the mother of Ahaziah, saw that her son was dead, she arose and destroyed all the seed-royal of the house of Judah.

11 But [y]Jehoshabeath, the daughter of the king, took Joash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons that were slain, and put him and his nurse in a [z]bed-chamber. So Jehoshabeath, the daughter of king Jehoram, the wife of [a]Jehoiada the priest, (for she was the sister of Ahaziah,) hid him from Athaliah, so that [b]she slew him not.

12 And he was with them [c]hid in the house of God six years: and [d]Athaliah reigned over the land.

CHAPTER XXIII

Jehoiada, having taken measures for his security, maketh Joash king, 1—11. Athaliah is slain, 12—15. Jehoiada restoreth the worship of God, 16—21.

AND in the [a]seventh year Jehoiada strengthened himself, and took the captains of hundreds, Azariah the son of Jeroham, and Ishmael the son of Jehohanan, and Azariah the son of Obed, and Maaseiah the son of Adaiah, and Elishaphat the son of Zichri, into covenant[b] with him.

2 And they [c]went about in Judah, and gathered the Levites out of all the cities of Judah, and [d]the chief of the fathers of Israel, and they came to Jerusalem.

3 And all the congregation [e]made a covenant with the king in the house of God. And he said unto them, Behold, the king's son shall reign, [f]as the LORD hath said of the sons of David.

4 This is the thing that ye shall do; A third part of you [g]entering on the sabbath, of the priests and of the Levites,[1] shall be [h]porters of the doors;[2]

5 And a third part shall be at [i]the king's house; and a third part at [k]the gate of the foundation: and all the people shall be in the courts of the house of the LORD.

6 But let none come into the house of the LORD, save the priests, and [l]they that minister of the Levites; they shall go in, for they are holy: but all the people shall keep the watch of the LORD.

7 And [m]the Levites shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand; and [n]whosoever else cometh into the house, he shall be put to death: but be ye with the king when he cometh in, and when he goeth out.

8 [o]So the Levites, and all Judah, did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest had commanded, and took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that were to go out on the sabbath: for Jehoiada the priest dismissed not [p]the courses.[3]

9 Moreover, Jehoiada the priest delivered to the captains of hundreds [q]spears, and bucklers, and shields, that had been king David's, which were in the house of God.[4]

10 And he set all the people, every man having his weapon in his hand, from the right side[5] of the temple to the left side of the temple, [r]along by the altar and the temple, by the king round about.

11 Then [s]they brought out the king's son, and [t]put upon him the crown, and gave him [u]the testimony, and made him king:[6] and Jehoiada and his sons [v]anointed him, and said, God save the king.[7]

2 The order of events attending the death of Ahaziah is thought by Lightfoot to be as follows: Ahaziah after the death of Joram escaped to Samaria, Jehu proceeded thither after destroying the kindred of Ahab and Ahaziah. On arriving at Samaria he caused search to be made for Ahaziah, who again attempted to escape. In so doing Jehu saw him and gave the order, 'Smite him in the chariot,' Jehu's soldiers pursued Ahaziah and smote him at the ascent of Gur.' After he was mortally wounded, his charioteer escaped with him to Megiddo, where he died. Compare 2 Ki. 9. 27.

3 She had long been the virtual possessor of the supreme power in Judah, but now she disdained an authority so precarious and indirect, and would reign alone. As even the most wicked persons seldom shed blood from absolute wantonness or cruelty, her spirit may have been rendered unusually savage at this time by the sanguinary proceedings of Jehu in Israel against the house to which she herself belonged, and in which she had lost 'at one fell swoop' a mother, a brother, and a son, with many other of her near relatives. It must also have appeared to her that the sort of authority she had hitherto exercised, first as queen-consort, and then as queen-mother, was now in very great danger, as it might be expected that whichever of her grandsons succeeded to the throne, he would prefer the counsels and guidance of his own mother to her's. Here then were two powerful motives, dread of losing her power & jealousy of being superceeded by another woman, bringing her to the atrocious resolution of destroying all the children of her own son Ahaziah.

1 The Levites had their turns or courses, in the service of the temple; so that a certain number went out every sabbath, to make room for another course. Jehoiada, having gained over the centurions and guards, or at least, some of them, to his party, and having all the Levites at his command, took occasion at that time when the courses were to be changed, at day-break, to arm both those that were coming out, and those who were coming in; and thus effected the revolution he had so wisely planned.

It is probable, therefore, that David when he resigned the commands of his armies to his generals, laid up his arms in the tabernacle, & there is reason to believe his conduct in this respect was followed by many of his companions in arms. ESTHER PLEADS BEFORE THE KING.

Esther Chronicles XVII. 15-19.

Digitized by Google

12 ¶ Now, [w]when Athaliah heard the noise of the people running and praising the king, [x]she came to the people into the house of the LORD.

13 And she looked, and, behold, the[y] king stood at his pillar[1] at the entering in, [z]and the princes and the trumpets by the king: and [a]all the people of the land rejoiced, and [b]sounded with trumpets; also [c]the singers with instruments of music, and such as taught to sing praise. Then Athaliah rent her clothes, and said, Treason,[2] Treason!

14 Then Jehoiada the priest brought out the captains of hundreds that were set over the host, and said unto them, Have her forth of the ranges;[3] and whoso[d] followeth her, let him be slain with the sword. For the priest said, [e]Slay her not in the house of the LORD.

15 So they laid hands on her: and when she was come to the entering of[f] the horse-gate,[4] by the king's house, they[g] slew her there.

16 ¶ And Jehoiada [h]made a covenant between him,[5] and between all the people, and between the king, [i]that they should be the LORD's people.

17 Then all the people went to [k]the house of Baal, and brake it down, and brake[l] his altars and his images in pieces, and [m]slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars.

18 Also Jehoiada appointed the offices of the house of the LORD by the hand of the priests the Levites, whom[n] David had distributed in the house of the LORD, to offer the burnt-offerings of the LORD, [o]as it is written in the law of Moses, with rejoicing and with singing, as it was ordained by[6] David.

19 And he set the [p]porters at the gates of the house of the LORD, that none which was unclean in any thing should enter in.

20 And he took [q]the captains of hundreds, and the nobles, and the governors of the people, and all the people of the land, and brought down the king[7] from the house of the LORD: and they came through the high gate into the king's house, and set the king upon the throne of the kingdom.

21 And [r]all the people of the land rejoiced: and the city was quiet, after that they had slain Athaliah with the sword.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Joash reigneth well all the days of Jehoiada, 1—3. He giveth order for the repair of the temple, 4—14. Jehoiada's death and honourable burial, 15, 16. Joash, falling to idolatry, slayeth Zechariah the son of Jehoiada, 17—22. Joash is spoiled by the Syrians, and slain by Zabad and Jehozabad, 23—26. Amaziah succeedeth him, 27.

JOASH[a1] was seven years old when he began to reign; and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was Zibiah of Beer-sheba.

2 And [b]Joash did that which was right in the sight of the LORD [c]all the days of Jehoiada the priest.[2]

3 And Jehoiada [d]took for him[3] [e]two wives; and he begat sons and daughters.

4 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that Joash was minded to repair[4] the house of the LORD.[5]

5 And he gathered together the priests and the Levites, and said to them, Go out unto the cities of Judah, and [f]gather of all Israel money to repair the house of your God from year to year, and see that ye hasten the matter: [g]howbeit the Levites hastened it not.

6 And the king called for Jehoiada the chief, and said unto him, [h]Why hast thou not required of the Levites to bring in, out of Judah, and out of Jerusalem, [i]the collection,[6] according to the commandment of Moses, the servant of the LORD, and of the congregation of Israel, for the [k]tabernacle of witness?

7 For the [l]sons of Athaliah,[7] [m]that wicked woman, had broken up the house of God; and also all the dedicated things of the house of the LORD [n]did they bestow upon Baalim.

8 And [o]at the king's commandment they made a chest, and set it without at the gate of the house of the LORD.

9 And they made a [8]proclamation through Judah and Jerusalem, to bring in to the LORD the [p]collection that Moses, the servant of God, laid upon Israel in the wilderness.

10 And all the princes, and all the 4 Professor Robinson has an investigation into the probable position of the ancient gates of Jerusalem in his 'Biblical Researches in Palestine,' &c. vol. i. p. 472. The notices respecting most of them, he thinks, are too indefinite to enable us to determine any thing more than that some of them probably did not belong to the external city-wall. Thus the horse-gate, says he, evidently lay between the temple and the royal palace, and in proof of this he refers to the present passage.

5 In 2 Ki. 11. 17, it is 'between the Lord,' &c., but the phrase here is equivalent; for Jehoiada, as high priest, was the representative of Jehovah. Though without any formal appointment, he appears to have been recognised with one consent as the guardian of the king, and the regent of the kingdom. He availed himself of the favourable dispositions which now existed, to induce the people to renew their ancient covenant with Jehovah. This precaution had become necessary, from the long continuance of an idolatrous government.

3 The Rabbins say this was for himself, and they censure such conduct in the high-priest. But the words may as naturally be understood to refer to the wives he successively selected for Joash. His advanced age renders the Rabbinical supposition highly improbable; for, having been born in the days of Solomon, and having lived during six successive reigns, he must, on the lowest computation, have been a hundred years old at the accession of Joash. He lived to the age of 130, (ver. 15.)

people [q]rejoiced, and brought in, and cast into the chest, until they had made an end.

11 Now it came to pass, that [r]at what time the chest was brought unto the king's office by the hand of the Levites, and when they saw that there was much money, the king's scribe and the high priest's officer came and emptied the chest, and took it, and carried it to his place again. Thus they did day by day, and gathered money in abundance.

12 And the king and Jehoiada [s]gave it to such as did the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and hired [t]masons and carpenters to repair the house of the LORD, and also such as wrought iron and brass to mend the house of the LORD.

13 So the workmen wrought, and the[1] work was perfected by them, and they set the house of God [u]in his state, and strengthened it.

14 And when they had finished it, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Jehoiada, whereof were made [v]vessels for the house of the LORD, even [w]vessels to minister, and to offer[2] withal, and spoons, and vessels of gold and silver: and they offered[x3] burnt-offerings in the house of the LORD continually [y]all the days of Jehoiada.

15 ¶ But Jehoiada waxed old, and was [z]full of days when he died; [a]an hundred and thirty years old was he when he died.[4]

16 And they buried him [b]in the city of David[5] among the kings,[6] [c]because he had done good in Israel, both toward God, and toward his house.

17 ¶ Now [d]after the death of Jehoiada came [e]the princes of Judah, and made obeisance to the king: then the king hearkened unto them.

18 And [f]they left the house of the LORD[7] God of their fathers, and served groves and idols; and [g]wrath came upon Judah and Jerusalem for this their trespass.

19 Yet [h]he sent prophets to them, to bring them again unto the LORD; and they testified against them: but they would not [i]give ear.

Professor Robinson mentions that they lie about 175 rods north of the Damascus gate, on the east side of the road to Naplous, just as it begins to descend towards the valley of Jehosaphat. He gives a detailed description of them (Bib. Researches, vol. ii. p. 528,) and is inclined to adopt the conjecture of Pococke, that they are identical with the sepulchre of Helena, queen of Adiabene, mentioned by Josephus.

21 And they [o]conspired against him, and [p]stoned him with stones at the commandment of the king, in the court of the house of the LORD.[3]

22 Thus Joash the king [q]remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but slew his son: and when he died, he said, [r]The LORD look upon it, and require it.

23 ¶ And it came to pass at [4]the end of the year, that [s]the host of Syria came up against him: and they came to Judah and Jerusalem, and destroyed [t]all the princes of the people from among the people, and sent all the spoil of them unto the king of Damascus.[5]

24 For the army of the Syrians came[u] with a small company of men, and the LORD [v]delivered a very great host into their hand, because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers: [w]So they executed judgment against Joash.

25 And when they were departed from him, (for they left him in [x]great diseases,) [y]his own servants conspired against him [z]for the blood of the sons of Jehoiada[6] the priest, and slew him on his bed, and he died; and they buried him in the city of David, but they buried him [a]not in the sepulchres of the kings.[7]

26 And these are they that conspired against him; Zabad[8] the son of Shimeath an Ammonitess, and Jehozabad the son of Shimrith[9] a Moabitess.

27 ¶ Now concerning his sons, and the greatness of the [b]burdens laid upon him, and the repairing[10] of the house of God, behold, they are written in the story[11] of the book of the Kings: and [c]Amaziah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXV.

Amaziah beginneth to reign well, 1, 2. He executeth justice on the murderers of his father, 3, 4. Having hired an army of Israelites against the Edomites, at the word of a prophet he loseth an hundred talents, and dismisseth them, 5—10. He overthroweth the Edomites, 11. The Israelites, discontented with their dismission, spoil as they return home, 10, 13. Amaziah, proud of his victory, serveth the gods of Edom, and despiseth the admonitions of the prophet, 14—16. He provoketh Joash to his overthrow, 17—24. His reign, 25, 26. He is slain by a conspiracy at Lachish, 27, 28.

A. M. 3165-3194. B. C. 839-810.

AMAZIAH was [a]twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, [b]but not with a perfect heart.

3 ¶ Now it came to pass, when the kingdom was established[1] to him, that he[c] slew his servants[2] that had killed the king his father:

4 But he slew not their children, but did [d]as it is written in the law in the book of Moses, where the LORD commanded, saying, the fathers shall not die for the children, neither shall the children die for the fathers, but every man shall die for his own sin.

5 ¶ Moreover, Amaziah gathered Judah together, and made them [e]captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, according to the houses of their fathers, throughout all Judah and Benjamin: and he numbered them from[f] twenty years old and above, and found them [g]three hundred thousand[3] choice men, able to go forth to war, that could handle spear and shield.

6 He hired also an hundred thousand mighty men of valour out of Israel for an hundred talents[4] of silver.

7 But there came [h]a man of God to him, saying, O king, let not the army of Israel go with thee; [i]for the LORD is not with Israel, to wit, with all the children of Ephraim.

8 But if thou wilt go, do it, [k]be strong for the battle; God shall make thee fall before the enemy: for [l]God hath power to help, and to cast down.

9 And Amaziah said to the man of God, But what shall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the army[5] of Israel? And the man of God answered, [m]The LORD is able to give thee much more than this.[6]

3 Nearly four times as many soldiers had been numbered in the days of Jehoshaphat. But perhaps many were unwilling to enlist under Amaziah; and he did not attempt to force them, or they found means to evade his inquiries.

4 'If Amaziah had previously consulted God, all the painful consequences of the measure which he adopted would have been prevented. — As a hundred talents would not divide above eight shillings a piece, among one hundred thousand men, we may suppose that it was only an earnest of their pay, or that they expected to be enriched with the plunder of the Edomites. —Perhaps the army which Amaziah had hired was chiefly of the tribe of Ephraim; or that tribe, being the most considerable in Israel, is put for the whole. —As the Lord was not with the men of Ephraim, he declared by his prophet that he would not prosper Amaziah, if he employed them; and if, after this prohibition, he would persist in taking them with him, he was warned that God would make him fall before the enemy; for he could help him without the aid of idolators; and he could cast him down, though he thus made himself 'strong for the battle:'—Scott.

10 Then [n]Amaziah separated them, to wit, the army that was come to him out of Ephraim, to go home[1] again: wherefore their anger was greatly kindled against Judah, and they returned home in great anger.[2]

11 ¶ And Amaziah strengthened himself, and led forth his people, and went to the [o]valley of Salt,[3] and smote of the children of Seir ten thousand.

12 And other ten thousand left alive did the children of Judah carry away captive, and brought them unto the top of the rock, and [p]cast them down from the top of the rock,[4] that they all were [q]broken in pieces.

13 ¶ But the soldiers[5] of the army which Amaziah sent back, that they should not go with him to battle, fell upon the cities of Judah, from [r]Samaria even unto [s]Beth-horon, and smote three thousand of them, and took much spoil.

14 ¶ Now it came to pass, after that Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, that [t]he brought the gods of the children of Seir, and set them up to be [u]his gods, and bowed down himself before them, and burned incense unto them.

15 Wherefore the anger of the LORD was kindled against Amaziah, and he sent unto him [v]a prophet, which said unto him, [w]Why hast thou sought after [x]the gods of the people, [y]which could not deliver their own people out of thine hand?

4 'The area or valley in which the town of Petra stands, is surrounded by steep mountains and rocky cliffs, from many of which no one could be precipitated without being all 'broken in pieces.' To the south of the town there is one very steep & high mountain, the ascent of which is assisted by steps; and the summit of which affords a commanding view over the neighbouring masses of rock. Remains of a fortification of stone attest the importance which the ancient inhabitants attached to this post. If it were necessary to point to a particular place, one might perhaps venture to point to this mountain as possibly the rock in question, but we rather think this designation does not refer to any one particular rock, but to any of the cliffs in this region of precipices, adapted to such an execution.'—Kitto. This mode of punishment was practised by the Greeks & Romans as well as the Jews. In Greece, according to the Delphian law, such as were guilty of sacrilege were led to a rock, and cast down headlong. The Romans also inflicted it on certain malefactors, by casting them down from the Tarpeian rock. 'In Turkey,' says Mr Pitts, 'at a place called Constantine, a town situated at the top of a great rock, the usual way of executing great criminals is by pushing them off the cliff.'

25 ¶ And Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah lived after the death of [q]Joash, son of Jehoahaz king of Israel, fifteen years.

26 Now the [r]rest of the acts of Amaziah,[8] first and last, behold, are they not written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

27 ¶ Now, after the time that Amaziah did turn away from[9] following the LORD, they made a conspiracy[10] against him in Jerusalem; and he fled to Lachish:[s] but they sent to Lachish after him, and slew him there.

28 And they brought him upon horses, and buried him with his fathers in [t]the city of Judah.

No similitude could better describe Amaziah than the thistle; a low, useless, neglected weed, but which having chanced to draw blood from some passing traveller, began to affect an equality with the cedar, the glory of Lebanon.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Uzziah succeeding, and reigning well in the days of Zechariah, prospereth, 1—15. Waxing proud, he invadeth the priest's office, and is smitten with leprosy by God, 16—21. He dieth, and Jotham succeedeth him, 22, 23.

THEN [a]all the people of Judah took [b]Uzziah,[1] who was sixteen years old, and made him king in the room of his father Amaziah.

2 He built [c]Eloth,[2] and [d]restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers.

3 Sixteen years old was [e]Uzziah when he began to reign; and he reigned fifty and two years in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was [f]Jecoliah of Jerusalem.

4 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, [g]according to all that his father Amaziah did.

5 And [h]he sought God in the days of Zechariah, who [i]had understanding in the visions[3] of God: and [k]as long as he sought the LORD, God made him to prosper.

6 And he went forth and [l]warred against the Philistines, and brake down [m]the wall of Gath, and the wall of Jabneh,[4] and the wall of Ashdod, and built cities about[5] Ashdod, and among the Philistines.

7 And [n]God helped him against the Philistines, and against [o]the Arabians that dwelt in Gur-baal, and the Mehunims.[6]

8 And [p]the Ammonites gave gifts to Uzziah: and [q]his name [7]spread abroad even to the entering in of Egypt; for he strengthened himself exceedingly.

9 ¶ Moreover, Uzziah built towers in Jerusalem, at [r]the corner-gate, and at [s]the valley-gate, and at [t]the turning of the wall,[8] and fortified[9] them.

10 Also he built towers in the desert, and digged[10] many wells: for [u]he had much cattle, both in the low country, and in the plains; husbandmen also, and vine-dressers in the mountains, and in Carmel:[11] for he loved husbandry.[12]

11 ¶ Moreover, Uzziah had an host of fighting men, that [v]went out to war by bands, according to the number of their account by the hand of Jeiel the scribe, and Maaseiah the ruler, under e hand of Hananiah, one of the king's ptains.

12 The whole number of the chief the fathers of the mighty men of our were two thousand and six ndred.
13 And under their hand was an[1] ny, [w]three hundred thousand, and en thousand and five hundred, that de war with mighty power, to help king against the enemy.
14 And Uzziah prepared for them, oughout all the host, shields, and ars, and helmets, and habergeons,[2] bows, and slings[3] to cast stones.
15 And he made in Jerusalem ines,[4] invented by [x]cunning men, e on the towers, and upon the bulks, to shoot arrows and great es withal: and his name [5]spread abroad; for he was marvellously ed, till he was strong.
16 ¶ But [y]when he was strong, his rt was lifted up to his destruction:
he transgressed against the LORD
God, and [z]went into the temple of LORD [a]to burn incense[6] upon the r of incense.
17 And [b]Azariah the priest went fter him, and with him fourscore sts of the LORD, that were [c]valiant
18 And they [d]withstood Uzziah the g, and said unto him, It appertain-
[e]not unto thee, Uzziah, to burn nse unto the LORD, but [f]to the sts the sons of Aaron, that are conated to burn incense: go out of the tuary; for thou hast trespassed:
her[g] shall it be for thine honour
the LORD God.
19 Then Uzziah was wroth, and a censer in his hand to burn ine; and, while [h]he was wroth with priests, [i]the leprosy even rose up is forehead before the priests in ouse of the LORD, from beside the nse altar.
20 And Azariah the chief priest, and he priests, looked upon him, and, old, he was leprous[7] in his forehead, they thrust him out from thence;
himself [k]hasted also to go out,
use [l]the LORD had smitten him.
21 And [m]Uzziah the king was a leper unto the day of his death, and [n]dwelt in a several[1] house,[2] being a leper; for he was cut off from the house of the LORD: and Jotham his son was over the king's house, judging the people of the land.
22 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Uzziah, [o]first and last, did [p]Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, write.
23 So Uzziah [q]slept with his fathers, and [r]they buried him[3] with his fathers in the field of the burial which belonged to the kings; for they said, He is a leper: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Jotham reigning well, prospereth, 1—4. He subdueth the Ammonites, 5, 6. His acts, reign, and death, 7, 8. Ahaz succeedeth him, 9.

JOTHAM was [a]twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was Jerushah, the daughter of Zadok.
2 And [b]he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Uzziah did: howbeit [c]he entered not into the [4]temple of the LORD. And [d]the people did yet corruptly.
3 ¶ He built the [e]high gate of the house of the LORD, and on the wall of Ophel[5] he built much.
4 Moreover, [f]he built cities in [g]the mountains of Judah, and in the forests he built castles and towers.[6]
5 ¶ He fought also with [h]the king of the Ammonites,[7] and prevailed against them. And the children of Ammon gave him the same year an hundred talents of silver, and ten thousand measures of wheat, and ten thousand of barley. So[8] much did the children of Ammon pay unto him, both the second year and the third.
6 So Jotham became mighty, because he prepared[9] his ways before the LORD his God.
7 ¶ Now [i]the rest of the acts of Jotham, and all his wars, and his ways,[10] lo, they are written in the [11]book of the kings of Israel and Judah.
8 He was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem.

11 This must refer to a larger history which is lost, for in our book of Kings there is less concerning Jotham's reign than here in Chronicles. His was probably the last politically prosperous reign among the Jews, though Hezekiah and Josiah did much to promote the cause of true religion.

9 ¶ And [k]Jotham slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Ahaz reigning very wickedly is greatly afflicted by the Syrians, 1—7. Judah being captivated by the Israelites is sent home by the counsel of Oded the prophet, 8—15. Ahaz sending for aid to Assyria is not helped thereby, 16—21. In his distress he becometh still more idolatrous, 22—25. He dying, Hezekiah succeedeth him. 26, 27.

AHAZ[a] was twenty years old[1] when he began to reign; and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: but he did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD, [b]like David his father:

2 For [c]he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and made also [d]molten images for [e]Baalim.

3 Moreover, he burnt[2] incense in [f]the valley of the son of Hinnom,[3] and burnt[g] his children in the fire, [h]after the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

4 He [i]sacrificed also and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

5 Wherefore the LORD [k]his God [l]delivered him into the hand of the king of Syria; and they smote him, and carried away a great multitude of them captives, and brought them to Damascus:[4] and he was also delivered into the hand of the king of Israel, who smote him with a great slaughter.

6 For [m]Pekah the son of Remaliah slew in Judah [n]an hundred and twenty thousand[5] in one day, which were all valiant[6] men; [o]because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers.

7 And Zichri, a mighty man of Ephraim, slew Maaseiah the king's son, and Azrikam the governor of the house, and Elkanah that was next[7] to the king.

8 ¶ And the children of Israel [p]carried away captive of their [q]brethren two hundred thousand, women, sons, and daughters, and took also away much spoil from them, and brought the spoil to Samaria.

9 But a prophet of the LORD was there, whose name was Oded: and [r]he went out before the host that came to Samaria, and said unto them, Behold,[8] because[s] the LORD God of your fathers was wroth with Judah, he hath delivered them into your hand, and ye have slain them in a rage that [t]reacheth up unto heaven.

10 And now ye purpose to [u]keep under the children of Judah and Jerusalem for bond-men and bond-women unto you: but are there [v]not with you, even with you, sins against [w]the LORD your God?

11 Now hear me therefore, and [x]deliver the captives[1] again, which ye have taken captive of your brethren; for [y]the fierce wrath of the LORD is upon you.

12 Then certain of [z]the heads of the children of Ephraim, Azariah the son of Johanan, Berechiah the son of Meshillemoth, and Jehizkiah the son of Shallum, and Amasa the son of Hadlai, [a]stood up against them that came from the war,

13 And said unto them, Ye shall not bring in the captives hither: for whereas we have offended against the LORD already, ye intend to [b]add more to our sins and to our trespass; for our trespass is great, and there is fierce wrath against Israel.

14 So the armed men left the captives and the spoil before the princes and all the congregation.

15 And the men which were [c]expressed by name rose up, and took the captives, and with the spoil [d]clothed all that were naked among them, and arrayed them, and shod them, and [e]gave them to eat and to drink, and anointed them, and carried all the feeble of them upon asses, and brought them to Jericho, [f]the city of palm-trees, to their brethren: then they returned to Samaria.

16 ¶ At that time [g]did king Ahaz send unto the kings[2] of Assyria to help him.

17 For again [h]the Edomites had come and smitten Judah, and carried away captives.[3]

18 The [i]Philistines also had invaded the cities of the low country, and of the south of Judah, and had taken [k]Beth-shemesh, and [l]Ajalon, and [m]Gederoth,[4] and [n]Shocho[5] with the villages thereof, and [o]Timnah with the villages

8 To this beautiful speech nothing can be added by the best comment: it is simple, humane, pious, and overwhelmingly convincing; no wonder it produced the effect mentioned here. That there was much of humanity in the heads of the children of Ephraim, who joined with the prophet on this occasion, ver. 15 sufficiently proves. They did not barely dismiss these most unfortunate captives, but they took that very spoil which their victorious army had brought away; and they clothed, fed, shod, and anointed these distressed people, set the feeblest of them upon asses, and escorted them safely to Jericho! We can find no parallel to this in the history of the wars which savage man has carried on against his fellows from the foundation of the world.—Clarke.

5 The Socoh of Jos. 15. 35, or Jos. 15. 48. Jerome says there were two villages of this name nine miles from Eleutheropolis, towards Jerusalem; one in the mountain, the other in the plain. When Robinson was at Main (the Maon of Nabal) he saw a number of places of unquestionable antiquity. Among others he mentions a small ruin, Shuweikeh, bearing N. 85° W. of Main. The name is the diminutive form of Shaukeh, and in that he recognizes the Socoh of the mountains of Judah. Again, when on his way from Jerusalem to Gaza, he saw on the left, near Wady es-Sŭmt (the ancient Terebinth - Vale) the ruins of another Shuweikeh, which he took for the Socoh of the plain.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Hezekiah's good reign, 1, 2. He restoreth religion, 3, 4. He calleth the Levites to cleanse the house of God, 5—11. They sanctify themselves, and cleanse the house of God, 12—19. Hezekiah and the congregation offer sacrifices, wherein the Levites were more forward than the priests, 20—36.

HEZEKIAH[a] began to reign when he was five and twenty years old; he reigned nine and twenty years erusalem: and his mother's name Abijah, the daughter of [b]Zechariah.

The Hebrews honoured the memory of those kings who had reigned well, by depositing their remains in the royal cemetry; but wicked kings were denied that honour, and buried in some other place in Jerusalem.

1 The public worship at the temple was entirely suppressed during the latter years of king Ahaz. The only reason advanced for a contrary opinion is this: it is not said that the sacred fire on the altar of burnt - offering was extinguished, or that it was rekindled by fire from heaven as at the dedication of the temple. If, however, the service was not entirely put a stop to, the people in general were shut outfromattending.

3 ¶ He, [d]in the first year of his reign, in the first month, [e]opened the doors[1] of the house of the LORD, and repaired them.
4 And he brought in the priests and the Levites, and gathered them together into the [f]east street,
5 And said unto them, Hear me, ye Levites; [g]Sanctify now yourselves, and [h]sanctify[2] the house of the LORD God of your fathers, and carry forth the filthiness out of the holy place.
6 For [i]our fathers have trespassed, and done that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD our God, and [k]have forsaken him, and have [l]turned away their faces from the habitation of the LORD, and turned[3] their backs.
7 Also [m]they have shut up the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burnt incense, nor offered burnt-offerings in the holy place unto the God of Israel.

15 And they gathered their brethren, and [b]sanctified themselves, and came, according to the commandment of the king, by[1] the words of the LORD, to[c] cleanse the house of the LORD.

16 And the priests went into [d]the inner part[2] of the house of the LORD, to cleanse it, and brought out [e]all the uncleanness that they found in the temple of the LORD into the court of the house of the LORD. And the Levites took it, to carry it out abroad into the brook [f]Kidron.

17 Now they began on the first day of the first month to sanctify, and on the eighth day of the month came they to [g]the porch of the LORD: so they sanctified the house of the LORD in eight days; and in [h]the sixteenth day of the first month they made an end.

18 Then they went in to Hezekiah the king, and said, We have cleansed all the house of the LORD, and [i]the altar of burnt-offering, with all the vessels thereof, and [k]the shew-bread table, with all the vessels thereof.

19 Moreover, [l]all the vessels, which king Ahaz in his reign did cast away[3] in his transgression, have we prepared and sanctified, and, behold, they are before the altar of the LORD.

20 ¶ Then Hezekiah the king [m]rose early, and gathered the rulers of the city, and went up to the house of the LORD.

21 And they brought [n]seven bullocks,[4] and seven rams, and seven lambs, and seven he-goats, for [o]a sin-offering for the kingdom, and for the sanctuary, and for Judah: and he commanded the priests, the sons of Aaron, to offer them on the altar of the LORD.

22 So they killed the bullocks, and the priests received the blood, and sprinkled[p] it on the altar: likewise, when they had killed the rams, they sprinkled the blood upon the altar: they killed also the lambs, and they sprinkled the blood upon the altar.

23 And they brought forth[5] the he-goats for the sin-offering before the king and the congregation; and [q]they laid their hands upon them.[1]

24 And the priests killed them, and they made [r]reconciliation with their blood upon the altar, to make an atonement for all Israel; for the king commanded that the burnt-offering and [s]the sin-offering should be made for all Israel.

25 And [t]he set the Levites in the house of the LORD with cymbals, with psalteries, and with harps, [u]according to the commandment of David, and of [v]Gad the king's seer, and [w]Nathan the prophet: [x]for so was the commandment of[2] the LORD by his prophets.[3]

26 And the Levites stood with [y]the instruments of David, and [z]the priests with the trumpets.

27 And Hezekiah commanded to offer the burnt-offering upon the altar: and when[4] the burnt-offering began, [a]the song of the LORD began also with the trumpets, and with the[5] instruments ordained by David king of Israel.

28 And [b]all the congregation worshipped, and the[6] singers sang, and the trumpeters sounded; and all this continued until the burnt-offering was finished.

29 And when they had made an end of offering, the king, and all that were present[7] with him, [c]bowed themselves, and worshipped.

30 Moreover, Hezekiah the king and the princes commanded the Levites to sing praise unto the LORD [d]with the words of David, and of Asaph the seer: and [e]they sang praises with gladness, and they bowed their heads and worshipped.

31 Then Hezekiah answered and said, Now ye have consecrated[8] yourselves unto the LORD, come near, and bring [f]sacrifices and [g]thank-offerings into the house of the LORD. And the congregation brought in sacrifices and thank-offerings; and [h]as many as were of a free heart, burnt-offerings.

4 This was more than the law required; see Le. 4. 13, &c. It ordered one calf, or ox, for the sins of the people, and one he-goat for the sins of the prince; but Hezekiah here offers many more, and the reason appears sufficiently evident: the law speaks only of sins of ignorance; but here there were sins of every kind and every die—idolatry, apostacy, profanation of the temple, &c. The sin-offerings were offered, first, for the kingdom—for the transgressions of the king and his family; secondly, for the sanctuary, which had been defiled and polluted; and for the priests, who had been profane, negligent, & unholy; and finally, for Judah—for the whole mass of the people, who had been led away into every kind of abomination by the above examples.

1 That is, they confessed their sin; and as they had by their transgression forfeited their lives, they now offer these animals to die as vicarious offerings, their life being taken for the life of the owners. It is not however said that the prescribed rules, respecting the sin-offerings, as to carrying the blood into the most holy place, and burning the bodies without the camp, were observed. Perhaps this was not done: and in that case, these sin-offerings must be considered as in some respects different from those prescribed in that part of the law contained in the book of Leviticus. The word here rendered he-goats (ver. 21) is not used in scripture till after the captivity, and learned men think that this is one proof that Ezra compiled these books. The burnt-offering and the sin-offerings were presented, not only in behalf of the kingdom of Judah, but for all Israel, even the ten tribes, which were at this time governed by Hoshea. Hezekiah seems in this to have had respect to the plan which he afterwards proposed, and which is recorded in the ensuing chapter; namely, of uniting the whole nation of Israel in celebrating the passover, and in the worship of God.

34 But [l]the priests were too few, so that they could not flay all the burnt-offerings:[1] wherefore [m]their brethren the Levites did help them,[2] till the work was ended, and until the other priests had sanctified themselves; [n]for the Levites were more [o]upright in heart to sanctify themselves than the priests.

35 And also [p]the burnt-offerings were in abundance, with [q]the fat of the peace-offerings, and [r]the drink-offerings for every burnt-offering. [s]So the service of the house of the LORD was set in order.

36 And [t]Hezekiah rejoiced,[3] and all the people, that [u]God had prepared the people: for [v]the thing was done suddenly.

CHAPTER XXX.

Hezekiah proclaimeth a solemn passover on the second month for Judah and Israel, 1—12. The assembly, having destroyed the altars of idolatry in Jerusalem, keep the feast fourteen days, 13—26. The priests and Levites bless the people, 27.

AND Hezekiah sent [a]to all Israel[4] and Judah, and wrote letters [b]also to Ephraim and Manasseh, that they should come [c]to the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, [d]to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel.

2 For [e]the king had taken counsel, and his princes, and all the congregation in Jerusalem, to keep the passover [f]in the second month.[5]

3 For they could not keep it [g]at that time,[6] [h]because the priests had not sanctified themselves sufficiently, neither had the people gathered themselves together to Jerusalem.

4 And the thing pleased[7] the king and all the congregation.

5 So they [i]established a decree [k]to make proclamation throughout all Israel, [l]from Beer-sheba even to Dan, that they should come to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel at Jerusalem: [m]for they had not done it of a long time in such sort as it was written.

6 So [n]the posts went with the letters from the[8] king and his princes throughout all Israel[1] and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, saying, Ye children of Israel, [o]turn again unto the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and he will return to the remnant of you that are [p]escaped out of the hand of the kings of Assyria.

7 And be not ye [q]like your fathers, and like your brethren, which trespassed against the LORD God of their fathers, who therefore gave them up to desolation, [r]as ye see.

8 Now, be ye not stiff-necked,[2] as your fathers were, but yield[3] yourselves unto the LORD, and [s]enter into his sanctuary, [t]which he hath sanctified for ever; and [u]serve the LORD your God, that [v]the fierceness of his wrath may turn away from you.

9 For [w]if ye turn again unto the LORD, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, [x]so that they shall come again into this land: for [y]the LORD your God is gracious and merciful, and [z]will not [a]turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him.

10 So [b]the posts passed from city to city, through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh, even unto Zebulun: but [c]they laughed them to scorn,[4] and mocked them.

11 Nevertheless [d]divers of Asher, and Manasseh, and of Zebulun, [e]humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem.

12 Also in Judah [f]the hand of God was to give them one heart to do [g]the commandment of the king and of the princes, [h]by the word of the LORD.[5]

13 ¶ And there assembled at Jerusalem much people to keep the feast of unleavened bread in [i]the second month, a very great congregation.

14 And they arose, and took away the [k]altars that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into [l]the brook Kidron.

15 Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month: and the priests and the Levites [m]were ashamed, [n]and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt-offerings into the house of the LORD.

3 Both he and the people rejoiced that God had prepared their hearts, to bring about so great a reformation, in so short a time; for. it is added, the thing was done suddenly. The king's example and influence were here, under God, the grand spring of all these mighty & effectual movements. Kings, on this very ground, are no indifferent beings; they must be either a great curse or a great blessing to the people whom they govern.

16 And [o]they stood in their place,[1] after[p] their manner, according to the law of [q]Moses, the man of God: [r]the priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites:

17 For there were many in the congregation that were not sanctified; therefore [s]the Levites had the charge of [t]the killing of the passovers for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto the LORD.

18 For a multitude of the people, even [u]many of Ephraim, and Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, [v]had not cleansed themselves, yet did they eat [w]the passover otherwise than it was written: but Hezekiah [x]prayed for them, saying, [y]The good LORD pardon every one

19 That [z]prepareth his heart[2] to seek God, the LORD God of his fathers, though[a] he be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary.

20 And the LORD hearkened to Hezekiah, and [b]healed[3] the people.

21 And the children of Israel, that were present[4] at Jerusalem, kept [c]the feast of unleavened bread seven days with [d]great gladness: and the Levites and [e]the priests praised the LORD day by day, singing with loud [5]instruments unto the LORD.

22 And Hezekiah spake [6]comfortably unto all the Levites [f]that taught the[g] good knowledge of the LORD: and they did eat[7] throughout the feast seven days, offering peace-offerings, [h]and making confession to the LORD God of their fathers.

23 And the whole assembly [i]took counsel [k]to keep other seven days: and they kept other seven days with gladness.[8]

24 For Hezekiah king of Judah [9]did give[l] to the congregation a thousand bullocks, and seven thousand sheep; and the princes gave to the congregation a thousand bullocks, and ten thousand sheep: and [m]a great number of priests sanctified themselves.

2 The great thing required in our attendance upon God, in solemn ordinances, is that we make heart-work of it; but even where that exists, there may yet be many defects, short of the purification of the sanctuary. Faith may not be so operative, affections not so lively, thoughts not so fixed as they ought to be, and might be. 26 So there was great joy in Jerusalem: for [p]since the time of Solomon, the son of David king of Israel, there was not the like in Jerusalem.[1]

27 ¶ Then [q]the priests the Levites arose and blessed the people: and their voice was heard, and [r]their prayer came up to his holy[2] dwelling-place, even unto heaven.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The people's zeal in destroying idolatry, 1. Hezekiah ordereth the courses of the priests and Levites, and provideth for their work and maintenance, 2—4. The people's forwardness in bringing in first-fruits and tithes, 5—10. Hezekiah appointeth officers to dispose of those offerings, 11—19. The sincerity of Hezekiah, 20, 21.

NOW, [a]when all this was finished, [b]all Israel that were present[3] went out to the cities of Judah, and [c]brake the images[4] in pieces, and cut down the groves, and threw down the high places and the altars out of all Judah and Benjamin, [d]in Ephraim also and Manasseh, until[5] they had utterly destroyed them all.[6] Then all the children of Israel returned, every man to his possession, into their own cities.

2 ¶ And Hezekiah appointed [e]the courses of the priests, and the Levites after their courses, every man according to his service, the priests and Levites for burnt-offerings, and for peace-offerings, to minister, and [f]to give thanks, and to praise in the gates of the tents of the LORD.

4 Moreover, he commanded the people that dwelt in Jerusalem to give [m]the portion of the priests and the Levites, [n]that they might be encouraged in [o]the law of the LORD.

5 ¶ And [p]as soon as the commandment[8] came abroad,[9] the children of Israel brought in abundance [q]the first-fruits of corn, wine, and oil, and honey,[10] and of all the increase of the field; and the tithe of all things brought they in abundantly.

9 Then Hezekiah questioned with the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps.

10 And [w] Azariah the chief priest, of the house of Zadok, answered him, and said, [x] Since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the LORD, [y] we have had enough to eat, and have left plenty: for [z] the LORD hath blessed his people; and that which is left is this great store.[5]

11 ¶ Then Hezekiah commanded to prepare chambers[6] in the house of the LORD; and they prepared them,

12 And brought in the offerings, and the tithes, and the dedicated things, faithfully: [a] over which Cononiah the Levite was ruler, and Shimei his brother was the next.

14 And Kore, the son of Imnah the Levite, [d] the porter toward the east, was over [e] the free-will-offerings of God, to distribute the oblations of the LORD, and [f] the most holy things.

15 And next[8] him were Eden, and Miniamin,[9] and Jeshua, and Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah, in [g] the cities of the priests, in their set office,[10] to give to their brethren by courses, [h] as well to the great as to the small;

5 The disinterestedness of the priests was highly commendable, for they might easily have enriched themselves without being suspected. The whole transaction enlarges our idea of the blessing which had attended the solemnity: for before this the priests were generally careless and ungodly.

20 ¶ And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and [q] wrought that which was good, and right, and truth,[4] before the LORD his God.

21 And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the law,[5] and in the commandments, to seek his God, [r] he did it with all his heart, and [s] prospered.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Sennacherib invading Judah, Hezekiah fortifieth himself, and encourageth the people, 1—8. Against the blasphemies of Sennacherib, by message and letters, Hezekiah and Isaiah pray, 9—20. An angel destroyeth the host of the Assyrians, to the glory of Hezekiah, 21—23. Hezekiah praying in his sickness, God giveth him a sign of recovery, 24. He waxing proud is humbled by God, 25, 26. His riches and works, 27—30. His error in relation to the Babylonish ambassadors, 31. He dying, Manasseh succeedeth him, 32, 33.

AFTER [a] these things, and the establishment thereof, Sennacherib [b] king of Assyria came, and entered into Judah, and encamped against the fenced cities, and thought to [6] win them for himself.

2 And when Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was come, and that [7] he was purposed to fight against Jerusalem,

3 He [c] took counsel with his princes and his mighty men [d] to stop the waters of the fountains which were without the city; and they did help him.

4 So there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains,[8] and [e] the brook that [9] ran through the midst of the land, saying, Why should the [f] kings of Assyria come, and [g] find much water?

5 Also [h] he strengthened himself, and built up all the wall [i]that was broken, and raised it up to the towers,[1] and [k]another wall without, and repaired Millo[l] in the city of David, and made darts[2] and shields in abundance.

6 And [m]he set captains of war over the people, and gathered them together to him [n]in the street of the gate of the city,[3] and spake comfortably to them,[4] saying,

7 Be [o]strong and courageous, [p]be not afraid nor dismayed for the king of Assyria, nor for all the multitude that is with him: [q]for there be more with us than with him.[5]

8 With him is [r]an arm of flesh; but [s]with us is the LORD our God, to help us, and [t]to fight our battles. And the people rested[6] themselves upon the words of Hezekiah king of Judah.

9 ¶ After this did [u]Sennacherib[7] king of Assyria send his servants to Jerusalem, (but he himself laid siege against [v]Lachish, and all his power[8] with him,) unto Hezekiah king of Judah, and unto all Judah that were at Jerusalem, saying,

10 [w]Thus saith Sennacherib king of Assyria, Whereon do ye trust, that ye abide in the siege[9] in Jerusalem?

11 Doth not Hezekiah persuade you to[x] give over yourselves to die by famine and by thirst, saying, [y]The LORD our God shall deliver us out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

12 [z]Hath not the same Hezekiah taken away[10] his high places and his altars, and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, saying, [a]Ye shall worship before [b]one altar, and burn incense upon it?

13 Know ye not what [c]I and my fathers have done unto all the people of other lands? [d]were the gods of the nations of those lands any ways able to deliver their lands out of mine hand?

14 Who was there [e]among all the gods of those nations that my fathers utterly destroyed, that could deliver his people out of mine hand, that your[f] God should be able to deliver you out of mine hand?

15 Now therefore let not Hezekiah deceive[g][11] you, nor [h]persuade you on this manner, neither yet believe him: for no god of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people out of mine hand, and out of the hand of my fathers; how [i]much less shall your God deliver you out of mine hand?

16 And his servants spake [k]yet more against the LORD God, and [l]against his servant Hezekiah.

17 He [m]wrote also letters to rail on the LORD God of Israel, and to speak against him, saying, [o]As the gods of the nations of other lands have not delivered their people out of mine hand, so shall not the God of Hezekiah deliver his people out of mine hand.

18 Then [p]they cried with a loud voice, in the Jews' speech, unto the people of Jerusalem that were on the wall, [q]to affright them, and to trouble them, that they might take the city.

19 And they [r]spake against [s]the God of Jerusalem, as against the gods of the people of the earth, which were [t]the work of the hands of man.

20 ¶ And for this cause [u]Hezekiah the king, [v]and the prophet Isaiah, the son of Amoz, [w]prayed and cried to heaven.

21 And [x]the LORD sent an [y]angel, which [z]cut off all the mighty men of valour, and [a]the leaders[1] and captains, in the camp of the king of Assyria: so he returned [b]with shame of face to his own land. And when [c]he was come into the house of his god, they that came forth of his own bowels slew[2] him there with the sword.

22 Thus [d]the LORD saved Hezekiah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Assyria, and from the hand of all other, and [e]guided them on every side.

23 And many brought [f]gifts unto the LORD to Jerusalem, [g]and [3]presents to Hezekiah king of Judah; so that [h]he was magnified in the sight of all nations from thenceforth.

24 ¶ In those days [i]Hezekiah was sick to the death, and prayed unto the LORD: and he spake unto him, and he gave[4] him a sign.

25 But Hezekiah [k]rendered not again according to the benefit done unto him; for [l]his heart was lifted up;

1 In 2 Ki.19. 35, and Is.37.36, the number said to have been destroyed is 185,000, but here there is mention only of the Assyrian commanders; whence some have concluded, that the word elsewhere rendered thousands should be translated, chiefs, and the passages would then harmonize. As to the agent employed, Usher adopts the opinion of the Rabbis, that it was Tirhakah, but the language of Isaiah (ch.30. 30; 31.9,) is inconsistent with that notion. Vitringa thinks of the agency of lightning; Boothroyd, of the plague; Dr Johnson and many others, of the pestilential Samûm. The miraculous destruction of the Assyrian host is related by Herodotus, as if it had been effected by the instrumentality of field-mice rendering their armour useless; but the scene is laid in Egypt.

therefore[m] there was wrath upon him, and upon Judah and Jerusalem.

26 Notwithstanding[n] Hezekiah humbled himself for the pride[1] of his heart, (both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem,) so that the wrath of the LORD came not upon them [o]in the days of Hezekiah.

27 ¶ And Hezekiah had [p]exceeding much riches and honour: and he made himself [q]treasuries for silver, and for gold, and for precious stones, and for spices, and for shields, and for all manner of pleasant jewels;[2]

28 [r]Storehouses also for the increase of corn, and wine, and oil; and [s]stalls for all manner of beasts, and [t]cotes for flocks.

29 Moreover he provided him cities, and [u]possessions of flocks and herds in abundance; for [v]God had given him substance very much.

30 This same Hezekiah also [w]stopped the upper water-course of [x]Gihon,[3] and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David. [y]And Hezekiah prospered in all his works.

31 ¶ Howbeit [z]in the business of the ambassadors[4] of the princes of Babylon, who sent unto him to enquire of the[a] wonder that was done in the land, God [b]left him, [c]to try him, [d]that he might know all that was in his heart.

32 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and his goodness,[5] behold, they are written [e]in the vision[6] of Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, and [f]in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

33 And Hezekiah [g]slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the chiefest[7] of the sepulchres of the sons of David; and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem [h]did him honour at his death: [i]and Manasseh his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Manasseh's wicked reign, 1, 2. He setteth up idolatry, and would not be admonished, 3—10. He is carried captive to Babylon, 11. Upon his prayer to God he is released, and putteth down idolatry, 12—17. His acts and prayer, 18, 19. He dying, Amon succeedeth him, 20. Amon reigning wickedly is slain by his servants, 21—24. The murderers being slain, Josiah succeedeth him, 25.

MANASSEH[a] was [b]twelve years old[8] when he began to reign; and he reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem:

2 But did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, [c]like unto the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

3 ¶ For [d]he built[1] again the high places [e]which Hezekiah his father had broken down, and [f]he reared up altars for Baalim,[2] and [g]made groves, and worshipped all [h]the host of heaven, and served them.

4 Also [i]he built altars in the house of the LORD, whereof the LORD had said, [k]In Jerusalem shall my name be for ever.

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven [l]in the two courts of the house of the LORD.

6 And he [m]caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom: also [n]he observed times, and used enchantments, and used witchcraft, and [o]dealt with a familiar spirit, and with wizards: he wrought much evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

7 And he set a carved image,[3] the idol which he had made, [p]in the house of God, of which [q]God had said to David, and to Solomon his son, In this house, and in Jerusalem, [r]which I have chosen before all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:

8 Neither [s]will I any more remove the foot of Israel from out of the land which I have appointed for your fathers; [t]so that they will take heed [u]to do all that I have commanded them, according to the whole law, and the statutes, and the ordinances, [v]by the hand of Moses.

9 So Manasseh [w]made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err, and [x]to do worse than [y]the [4]heathen, whom the LORD had destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 ¶ And [z]the LORD spake to Manasseh, and to his people; but they would not hearken.

11 Wherefore [a]the LORD brought upon them [b]the captains of the host of[5] [c]the king of Assyria, which took Manasseh [d]among the thorns,[6] and 3 From comparing this passage with ver. 3,4; ch. 33.14, and the language of Ecclesiasticus, (ch. 48. 17,) and Josephus, (Anti. vii. 14. 5). Professor Robinson concludes, that there existed anciently a fountain Gihon on the west of the city, which was 'stopped,' or covered over by Hezekiah, and its waters brought down by subterranean channels into the city. In this way the waters of Gihon would be withdrawn from the enemy&preserved to the city, in which they would seem to have been distributed among various reservoirs and fountains. The present Pool of Hezekiah, was probably one of them. Dr Richardson says it is evidently of Jewish workmanship.

bound[e] him with fetters,[1] and carried him to Babylon.

12 And [f]when he was in affliction,[2] he[g] besought [h]the LORD his God, [i]and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers, 13 And prayed unto him: and [k]he was entreated of him, and heard his supplication, and [l]brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh [m]knew that the LORD he was God.

14 ¶ Now after this [n]he built a wall[3] without the city of David, on the west side of [o]Gihon, in the valley, even to the entering in at [p]the fish-gate, and compassed about Ophel,[4] and raised it up a very great height, and [q]put captains of war in all the fenced cities of Judah.

15 And [r]he took away the strange gods, and the idol out of the house of the LORD, and all the altars that he had built in the mount of the house of the LORD, and in Jerusalem, and cast them out of the city.

16 And he [s]repaired[5] the altar of the LORD, and sacrificed thereon [t]peace-offerings and [u]thank-offerings, and commanded[v] Judah to serve the LORD God of Israel.

17 Nevertheless [w]the people did sacrifice still in the high places, yet unto the LORD their God only.

18 ¶ Now [x]the rest of the acts of Manasseh, and [y]his prayer unto his God, and the words of [z]the seers that spake to him in the name of the LORD God of Israel, behold, they are written in[a] the book of the kings of Israel:

19 [b]His prayer[6] also, and how God was entreated of him, and [c]all his sins, and his trespass, and the places wherein he built high places, and set up groves and graven images, [d]before he was humbled, behold, they are written among the sayings of the seers.[7]

20 ¶ So [e]Manasseh slept with his fathers, and they buried him in his own house: and [f]Amon his son reigned in his stead.

21 ¶ Amon was two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned [g]two years in Jerusalem.

22 But he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, [h]as did Manasseh his father: for Amon sacrificed unto all the carved images[1] which Manasseh his father had made, and served them;

23 And [i]humbled not himself before the LORD, as Manasseh his father had humbled himself; but Amon [2]trespassed more and more.

24 And [k]his servants conspired against him, and slew him in his own house.

25 ¶ But the people of the land [l]slew all them[3] that had conspired against king Amon: and [m]the people of the land made [n]Josiah his son king in his stead.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Josiah's good reign, 1, 2. He destroyeth idolatry, 3—7. He provideth for the repairs of the temple, 8—13. Hilkiah having found the book of the law, Josiah sendeth to Huldah to enquire of the Lord, 14—22. Huldah prophesieth the destruction of Jerusalem, but respite thereof in Josiah's time, 23—28. Josiah, causing it to be read in a solemn assembly, reneweth the covenant with God, 29—33.

JOSIAH[a] was [b]eight years old when he began to reign; and he reigned in Jerusalem one and thirty years.

2 And he did that which was [c]right in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the ways of David his father, and [d]declined neither to the right hand nor to the left.[4]

3 ¶ For in the eighth year of his reign, [e]while he was yet young, he began [f]to seek after the God of David his father; and in the twelfth year [g]he began to purge Judah and Jerusalem from [h]the high places, and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images.

4 And they [i]brake down the altars of Baalim in his presence; and the images[5] that were on high above them he cut down; and the groves,[6] and the carved images, and the molten images, he brake in pieces, and [k]made dust of them, and strowed it upon the [7]graves of them that had sacrificed unto them.

5 And [l]he burnt[8] the bones of the priests upon their altars, and [m]cleansed Judah and Jerusalem.

6 And so did he [n]in the cities of Manasseh, and Ephraim, and Simeon, even unto Naphtali, with their mattocks[9] round about.

7 And when he had broken down

After the truth was known & acknowledged, the axe & spade were employed to complete the reformation. Happy the nation whose sovereign sets before them the best example; zealously purges his dominion from temptations to destructive impieties; reforms the church; trembles at the words of the God of Israel; and, under the apprehensions of his denounced wrath, humbles himself; and labours to have all his subjects taught divine truths, & preserved from wickedness. And it is pleasant, after great prevailing impiety, to behold kings, ministers, and people, harmoniously and heartily zealous for the instituted purity of God's worship, and solemnly devoting themselves upon a new-covenant footing, to his service.'—Brown.

16 And [i]Shaphan carried the book to the king, and brought the king word back again, saying, All that was committed to thy[1] servants, they do it.

17 And [k]they have gathered [2]together the money that was found in the house of the LORD, and have delivered it into the hand of the overseers, and to the hand of the workmen.

18 Then Shaphan[3] the scribe told the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath given me a book. [l]And Shaphan read it[4] before the king.

19 And it came to pass, when the king had heard [m]the words of the law, that[n] he rent his clothes.

20 And the king commanded Hilkiah, and [o]Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and [p]Abdon the son of Micah, and Shaphan the scribe, and [q]Asaiah a servant of the king's, saying,

21 Go, [r]enquire of the LORD for me, and for them [s]that are left in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found: [t]for great is the wrath of the LORD that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of the LORD, to do after all that is written in this book.[5]

22 And Hilkiah, and they that the king had appointed, went to Huldah the [u]prophetess, the wife of Shallum the son of Tikvah, the son of [v]Hasrah, keeper of the wardrobe;[6] (now she dwelt in Jerusalem in the [7]college;) and they spake to her to that effect.

23 ¶ And she answered them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [w]Tell ye the man that sent you to me,

24 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, [x]I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even [y]all the curses[8] that are written in the book which they have read before the king of Judah:

25 Because [z]they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; therefore [a]my wrath shall be poured out upon this place, and [b]shall not be quenched.

26 And [c]as for the king of Judah, who sent you to enquire of the LORD, so shall ye say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel concerning the words which thou hast heard, 27 Because [b]thine heart was tender,[1] and thou didst [c]humble thyself before God, when thou heardest his words against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, and humblest thyself before me, and [d]didst rend thy clothes, and weep before me; I have even heard thee also, saith the LORD.

28 Behold, [e]I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered to thy grave [f]in peace,[2] [g]neither shall thine eyes see all the evil that I will bring upon this place, and upon the inhabitants of the same. So they brought the king word again.

29 ¶ Then [h]the king sent and gathered[i] together all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem.

30 And the king went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the priests and the Levites, and all the people, great and small;[3] and [k]he read in their ears all the words of [l]the book of the covenant that was found in the house of the LORD.

31 And the king stood [m]in his place,[4] and [n]made a covenant before the LORD, to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, [o]with all his heart, and with all his soul, to perform the words of the covenant which are written in this book.

32 And [p]he caused all that were present[5] in Jerusalem and Benjamin to stand to it.[6] And the inhabitants of Jerusalem [q]did according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers.

33 And Josiah [r]took away all [s]the abominations out of all the countries that pertained to the children of Israel, and made all that were present in Israel to serve, even to serve the LORD their God. And [t]all his days they departed[7] not from following[8] the LORD, the God of their fathers.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Josiah keepeth a most solemn passover, 1—19. He, provoking Pharaoh-necho, is slain at Megiddo, 20—24. Lamentations for Josiah, 25. His acts, 26, 27.

MOREOVER, [a]Josiah kept a passover unto the LORD in Jerusalem: and they killed the passover on [b]the fourteenth day of the first month.

2 And he set the priests in their [c]charges, and [d]encouraged them to the service of the house of the LORD;

3 And said unto [e]the Levites that taught all Israel, which were holy unto the LORD, [f]Put the holy ark [g]in the house[1] which Solomon, the son of David king of Israel, did build; it shall [h]not be a burden upon your shoulders: [i]serve now the LORD your God, and his people Israel.

4 And prepare yourselves by [k]the houses of your fathers, [l]after your courses, according to the writing of David king of Israel, and [m]according to the writing of Solomon his son.

5 And [n]stand in the holy place, according to the divisions of the families[2] of the fathers of your brethren the people,[3] and after the division of the families of the Levites.

6 So [o]kill the passover, and [p]sanctify yourselves,[4] and prepare your brethren, that they may do according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

7 And [q]Josiah gave[5] to the people, of the flock, lambs and kids, all for the passover-offerings, for all that were present, to the number of thirty thousand, and three thousand bullocks: these were of [r]the king's substance.[6]

8 And [s]his princes gave[7] [t]willingly unto the people, to the priests, and to the Levites: [u]Hilkiah, and Zechariah, and Jehiel, [v]rulers of the house of God, gave unto the priests for the passover-offerings two thousand and six hundred small cattle,[8] and three hundred oxen.

9 Conaniah also, and Shemaiah, and Nethaneel, his brethren, and Hashabiah, and Jeiel, and Jozabad, chief of the Levites, gave[9] unto the Levites for passover-offerings five thousand small cattle, and five hundred oxen.[10]

10 So the service was prepared, and [w]the priests stood in their place, and the Levites in their courses, according to the king's commandment.

11 And they killed the [11]passover, and [x]the priests sprinkled the blood from their hands, and the Levites [y]flayed them.

12 And they removed the burnt-offerings, that they might give according to the divisions of the families of the people, to offer unto the LORD, [y]as it is written in the book of Moses: and so did they with the oxen.

13 And they [z]roasted the passover with fire, according to the ordinance: but the other holy offerings [a]sod they in pots, and in caldrons, and in pans, and divided[1] them speedily among all the people.

14 And afterward they made ready for themselves, and for the priests: because[b] the priests the sons of Aaron were busied in offering of burnt-offerings and the fat until night; therefore the Levites prepared for themselves, and for the priests the sons of Aaron.

15 And the singers, the sons of Asaph, were in their place,[2] [c]according to the commandment of David, and Asaph, and Heman, and Jeduthun the king's seer;[3] and [d]the porters waited at every gate: they might not depart from their service; for their brethren the Levites prepared for them.

16 So all the service of the LORD was prepared the same day, to keep the passover, and to offer burnt-offerings upon the altar of the LORD, according to the commandment of king Josiah.

17 And the children of Israel that were present[4] kept the passover at that time, and [e]the feast of unleavened bread seven days.

18 And [f]there was no passover[5] like to that kept in Israel, from the days of Samuel the prophet; [g]neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept, and the priests, and the Levites, and all Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

19 In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah was this passover kept.

20 ¶ After all this, when Josiah had prepared the temple,[6] [h]Necho king of Egypt came up to fight against Carchemish[i] by Euphrates: and Josiah went out against him.[8]

21 But he sent ambassadors to him, saying, [k]What have I to do with thee, thou king of Judah? I come not against thee this day, but against the house wherewith I have war;[1] for [l]God commanded me to make haste: [m]forbear thee from meddling with God,[2] who is with me, that he destroy thee not.

22 Nevertheless Josiah would not turn his face from him, [n]but disguised himself, that he might fight with him, and hearkened not unto the words of Necho from [o]the mouth of God, and came to fight in the valley of [p3]Megiddo.

23 And [q]the archers shot at king Josiah: and the king said to his servants, Have me away; for I am sore wounded.[4]

24 His servants therefore took him out of that chariot, and put him in [r]the second chariot that he had; and [s]they brought him to Jerusalem, and [t]he died,[5] and was buried in[6] one of the sepulchres of his fathers: and [u]all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah.

25 ¶ And [v]Jeremiah lamented for Josiah; and [w]all the singing-men and the singing-women spake of Josiah in their lamentations[7] to this day, and made them an ordinance in Israel: and, behold, they are written in the Lamentations.

26 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Josiah, and his goodness,[8] according to that which was written in the law of the LORD, 27 And [x]his deeds, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah.

5 There was a very great passover in the time of Hezekiah, but it was attended with much irregularity, in consequence of the unpurified state of a large proportion of the people. But Josiah's was also positively a far greater celebration, as may be seen from a comparison of the number of animals offered on the two occasions. There had not been a passover kept on purer principles, more heartily joined in, more literally or exactly consecrated according to the law, or more religiously observed. The words do not refer to the number present, but to the manner and spirit. But that which distinguished this passover from all the former, was, (says Calmet,) the great liberality of Josiah, who distributed to his people a greater number of victims than David or Solomon had done.

8 As Judah was now the great frontier barrier between the rival kingdoms of Babylon and Egypt, Josiah was compelled to take a decided part with one or the other power; and it is highly probable that his grandfather, Manasseh, was not restored to his throne (when a captive at Babylon,) but on condition of he and his successors being bound to preserve their country as a barrier against Egypt. Josiah's conduct, therefore, in opposing the vast host of Pharaoh-Necho, instead of being blame-worthy, was noble and heroic, and was prompted by his fidelity to solemn covenant engagements.

11 ¶ Zedekiah was [n]one and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned eleven years in Jerusalem.

12 And he did that which was evil[7] in the sight of the LORD his God, and humbled[o] not himself [p]before Jeremiah the prophet, speaking from [q]the mouth of the LORD.

13 And he also [r]rebelled against king Nebuchadnezzar, [s]who had made him swear by God: but [t]he stiffened his neck, [u]and hardened his heart from turning unto the LORD God of Israel.

14 ¶ Moreover, [v]all the chief of the priests and the people transgressed very much, [w]after all the abominations of the heathen; and [x]polluted the house of the LORD, which he had hallowed in Jerusalem.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE SECOND BOOK OF CHRONICLES.

It is remarked by Jahn, that the annals of Judah and Israel, contained in this book, ought to be viewed as the history of a real theocracy; and therefore, as exhibiting a continued execution of the purpose of God, that the true religion should be preserved on the earth, it certainly deserves our most attentive study.

We every where see in the history of the chosen people, that their God and King uniformly governed them according to the promises and threatenings of the covenant he had made with their ancestors at Sinai. A deviation from his worship as the only true God, was held to be in its guilt and consequences a rebellion against Him as their lawful sovereign; and whenever they thus forsook his worship, and revolted from his government, he brought them by suitable chastisements to reflect upon their obligations and responsibilities, and to return to him again as to Jehovah their God.

This is very strikingly exemplified in that portion of the history of the Hebrews which is embraced in this book, both during the reign of Solomon, and after the revolt of the ten tribes at his death. That great revolution, by which David's empire was rent in twain, had been clearly traceable to the idolatrous creed, the corrupt practices, and the oppressive exactions, of the court of Solomon. It was doubtless intended as a warning to the kings both of Judah and Israel, to maintain in both nations the great fundamental law of subjection to the Lord of Hosts; and had they so viewed it, the kingdoms, though politically separate, might have lasted for ages as independent states. Even Jeroboam, though he certainly had no promise, like the house of David, of an everlasting kingdom, yet received from God the assurance: (1 Ki. xi. 38,) 'It shall be, if thou wilt hearken unto all that I command thee, and wilt walk in my ways and do that which is right in my sight, to keep my statutes and my commandments, as David my servant did, that I will be with thee, and build thee a sure house as I built for David, and will give Israel unto thee.' But as he and most of the kings of both kingdoms rebelled against their divine Sovereign by idolatry, God raised up among both nations a succession of inspired prophets, who, by impressive denouncements, and expressive symbols, reminded both rulers and subjects of their duties to Jehovah, and denounced against them judgments in the event of continued disobedience.

As the greatest declension from the law of God was from the first practised in the kingdom of Israel, it was destroyed about a hundred and thirty-four years before that of Judah. Its founder, Jeroboam, little confiding in the promises made to him by God, adopted such schemes of human policy as tended to establish his kingdom, by more completely separating it from that of the Jews. He feared that if his people continued to repair to Jerusalem, to attend the solemn yearly feasts, it might gradually weaken their allegiance to his government, and, in course of time, re-unite the twelve tribes under the rule of the house of David. Under pretence, therefore, that the Jewish metropolis was too distant for the resort of his subjects, he established two places of worship at the opposite extremities of his kingdom; one at Dan, in the north, the other at Bethel, in the south. Both of these had once been places deemed sacred:—Bethel, as the scene of frequent patriarchal worship; and Dan, on account of the ephod and teraphim, which (as we read in the book of Judges) the Danites had taken from Micah the Ephraimite, and set up there. To give these places of resort some defined object, Jeroboam there established golden calves, which are supposed to have been in imitation of the Apis and Mnevis, deities of Egypt, the country where he had spent the years of his banishment. He did not intend them, however, as new gods, but only as images symbolical of Jehovah. But on account of the great danger of idolatry, the use of all such symbols had been expressly forbidden in the second commandment of the law; and the worship of this very figure of a golden calf (to which, from the influence of Egyptian tradition, the Israelites seem to have been most attached), had once before brought upon them God's signal judgments. But not only did Jeroboam 'make Israel to sin,' by introducing an insidious and dangerous form of idolatry, he changed the seasons of the sacred festivals, (making them a month later), built altars and temples for his images, established a new priesthood for his new worship out of all the tribes without distinction, and annexed the office of high-priest to the crown, as was the case in Egypt and other heathen countries. These daring innovations became indeed so interwoven with the constitution of the kingdom, that even his more pious successors did not venture to interfere with them.

Yet even those rebellious backslidings from Jehovah did not prevent him from continuing to govern Israel according to the sanctions of his law. We see in the history how he exterminated one after another those royal families, who not only retained the institutions of Jeroboam, but tolerated and patronised idolatry in its worst forms, and even established and protected it by their own authority. We may also perceive that the worse the corruptions became, so much the more decisive and striking were the declarations made, and the signs given, to the Israelites, that the God of the universe was their Lord and King. Even Naaman, the Syrian, acknowledged (as the Syrians and other neighbours of Israel found to their cost), that the God of the Hebrews was not merely a local, tutelary, national deity, but one who ruled over all the nations. In short, this entire history represents a contest between Jehovah and his idolatrous and rebellious people Israel; and every thing is seen to be ordered in his providence with a view to preserve in their minds a regard to his sovereign authority. Yet all the means employed proved, through their unbelief and perverseness, utterly abortive, till at length, after milder punishments had failed in reclaiming them, national guilt brought on the destruction of the kingdom, and the captivity of the people, according to the threatening that had been denounced.

In this history we also find divine providence favourable or adverse to Judah, according as her people obeyed or transgressed the Divine commandment; only that here the royal dynasty remained unchanged, in fulfilment of the promise made to David. After the foolish reign of Rehoboam, we have the short but busy reign of Abijah, the long and happy reign of Asa, the pious and prosperous reign of Jehoshaphat, the infamous reigns of Jehoram and Ahaziah, the unsteady reigns of Joash and Amaziah, the long fortunate, but ill-ended reign of Uzziah, the peaceful and triumphant reign of Jotham, the profane and miserable reign of Ahaz, the glorious reign of Hezekiah, the wicked reigns of Manasseh and Amon; the reforming age of Josiah, and the short but wretched reigns of the four last kings, Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim, Jehoiachin, and Zedekiah, which proved destructive to the nation. Among these we perceive many idolatrous monarchs, but their reigns were generally short, and they were commonly succeeded by kings of better character, whose reigns (according to the promise of Moses,) were long and prosperous. These put a stop to idolatry, restored the pure worship of God, re-established the theocracy, both in the government of the state and in the hearts of their subjects, and with the aid of prophets and priests, revived, from time to time, the knowledge and worship of Jehovah. Judah, therefore, though a much smaller country in point of extent, was allowed to preserve its independent national existence for more than a century longer than Israel; but at last, as no durable reformation was effected, she experienced the same fate as her sister kingdom—a fate which, in both cases, had been clearly predicted. Among the prophets who flourished during the latter part of the period embraced by this book, the most eminent was Jeremiah, who survived to behold the sad accomplishment of all his earliest predictions. 'He witnessed all the horrors of the famine, and, when that had done its work, the triumph of the enemy. He saw the strong-holds of the city cast down, the palace of Solomon, the temple of God with all its courts, its roofs of cedar and of gold, levelled to the earth, or committed to the flames; the sacred vessels, the ark of the covenant itself, with the cherubim, pillaged by profane hands. What were the feelings of a patriotic and religious Jew at this tremendous crisis, he has left on record in his unrivalled elegies. Never did city suffer a more miserable fate, never was ruined city lamented in language so exquisitely pathetic. Jerusalem is, as it were, personified, and bewailed with the passionate sorrow of private and domestic attachment; while the more general pictures of the famine, the common misery of every rank, and age, and sex; all the desolation, the carnage, the violation, the dragging away into captivity, the remembrance of former glories, of the gorgeous ceremonies and the glad festivals, the awful sense of the divine wrath heightening the present calamities, are successively drawn with all the life and reality of an eye-witness. They combine the truth of history with the deepest pathos of poetry.'

E Z R A.

It is almost universally admitted that the author of this book was Ezra, the person whose name it bears. By the Jews the memory of this eminent man has ever been most highly venerated, as of one richly endowed with the spirit of inspiration; and to him they ascribe the honour of having been called to the work of revising the preceding portions of scripture, and of correcting such errors as, in the lapse of years, and through the negligence or mistakes of transcribers, had crept into the sacred text.

This book, which contains the history of about eighty years, presents us with an account of those who first returned to their own country from Babylon, by the permission of king Cyrus, and under the guidance of Zerubbabel; of the building of the temple; of Ezra's coming to Jerusalem with authority from Artaxerxes Longimanus; and of the reformation by him effected.

The Jews are here presented to us as emancipated from the bondage of their long captivity, and, by the good hand of God upon them, permitted again to set up the worship of Jehovah in the place which he had chosen. God's faithfulness we behold manifested in the fulfilment of the promises which, by the lips of his prophets, he had made to his suffering people. But the traces of their degradation are far from being wholly effaced. For their aggravated sins a blow had been inflicted from which they never altogether recovered. 'The crown had fallen from their heads;' and, instead of an independent kingdom, the land, given of old unto the fathers, appears as the tributary province of a foreign power. Let us behold the goodness and the severity of God.

NOW, [a]in the first[1] year of Cyrus king of Persia, (that the word of the LORD [b]by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled,[2]) the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, [c]that he made[3] a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,

2 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The [d]LORD God of heaven [e]hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth;[4] and he[f] hath charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah:

3 Who is there among you of all his people? [g]his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the LORD God of Israel ([h]he is the God) which is in Jerusalem.

1 Many of the Jews were not in circumstances to return, and multitudes had no wish to do so. The principal heads that returned were of the two tribes here mentioned. Some of the others, however, accompanied them (1 Ch. 9. 3); and Josephus remarks that the edict of Cyrus was sent into Media to the rest of the ten tribes, Israel as well as the Jews being under the sway of Cyrus.

5 In the book of Nehemiah we have another copy of the catalogue which follows in the succeeding verses. The sum total of those who returned from captivity is the same in both, but it exceeds the particulars added together here, by 10,777; and besides, there are several other variations for which it is difficult to account. Some, among whom are Alting & Calmet, have conjectured that there might be numbers who could not produce their genealogy, and whose names might therefore be omitted. Lightfoot supposes that the number whose names were omitted were the posterity of the ten tribes, and, for this reason, not mentioned in the list. It is possible that several who had their names inserted in the register, altered their minds, or died before the company arrived at Jerusalem.

6 The number of priests who returned was great in proportion to the rest of the people, and yet, of the twenty-four courses that were carried to Babylon, only four returned, the rest either remaining behind, or having become extinct. The old number, however, of the courses, as established by David, was still kept up, for each of the four that returned subdivided itself into six, and the new courses taking the names of those that were awanting, still kept up the old titles. It is hence that after this Mattathias is said to have been of the course of Joarib, and Zecharias of the course of Abia, though neither of these courses were of the number of those that returned.

1 These are generally believed to have been of the race of the Gibeonites, who were spared in the time of Joshua. Some, however, are of a different opinion, as Patrick, Michaelis, &c. The latter contends that they were some of the captives taken in war, who were devoted to the service of the temple.

3 These were a distinct people among the Jews; but it is uncertain who they were. Some take them to have been originally descended from slaves, whom Solomon took in war, & who afterwards became proselytes. But there was no war in his days; therefore, others think, they were such of other nations as came to serve Solomon in servile work, during the building of the temple; and who being proselyted, he deputed them to the perpetual conservation and reparation of it; as Joshua had done the Gibeonites, to be hewers of wood & drawers of water there. Or, they were some of the relics of the Canaanites, who delivered themselves up to Solomon, 1 Ki. 9. 20, 21. Whosoever they were, it appears from ver. 58 of this chapter that they had the same employment with the Nethinims about the temple, or something like it; for they were numbered together with them.—Patrick.

5 This precluded them from any certain possession. From ver. 63 it appears that they were very strict respecting the priests' families. 4 Though the total number, both here and in Nehemiah, is equal, viz. 42,360; yet the particulars reckoned up in Ezra make only 29,818, and in Nehemiah 31,080. Besides, we find that Nehemiah mentions 1,765 persons who are not in Ezra; and Ezra has 494 not mentioned by Nehemiah. M. Alting thinks that this circumstance, which at first sight seems to render all hope of reconciling them impossible, is precisely the very point by which they can be reconciled; for, if we add Ezra's surplus here, viz. 494 to the sum total in Nehemiah, or Nehemiah's surplus to the sum total in Ezra, in either case they will make precisely the same number, 31,583, which, subtracted from 42,360, leaves 10,777, which are not named because they were not of Judah and Benjamin, nor of the priests, the tribes particularly concerned.

and his brethren, and builded the altar of the God of Israel, to offer burnt-offerings thereon, [e]as it is written in the law of Moses, the man of God.

3 And they set [f]the altar upon his bases;[1] ([g]for[2] fear was upon them because of the people of those countries;) and they offered burnt-offerings thereon unto the LORD, even [h]burnt-offerings morning and evening.

4 ¶ They kept also [i]the feast of tabernacles, as it is written, and offered the [k]daily burnt-offerings by number, according to the custom,[3] as[4] the duty of every day required;

5 And afterward offered [l]the continual burnt-offering, both of the new moons, and of all the set feasts of the LORD that were consecrated, and of every one that [m]willingly offered a free-will-offering unto the LORD.

6 From the first day of the seventh month began[5] they to offer burnt-offerings unto the LORD: but the foundation[6] of the temple of the LORD was not yet laid.

7 ¶ They [n]gave money also unto the masons, and to the carpenters;[7] and meat,[o] and drink, and oil, unto them of Zidon, and to them of Tyre, to bring cedar-trees from Lebanon to the sea of Joppa,[p8] [q]according to the grant that they had of Cyrus king of Persia.

8 ¶ Now, in the second year of their coming unto the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began Zerubbabel[r] the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and the remnant of their brethren the priests and the Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jerusalem; and appointed the Levites, from twenty[s] years old and upward, to set forward the work[9] of the house of the LORD.

9 Then stood Jeshua with his sons and his brethren, Kadmiel and his sons, the sons of [t]Judah, together,[10] to set forward the workmen in the house of God; the sons of Henadad, with their sons and their brethren the Levites.

10 And when the builders laid the foundation of the temple of the LORD, they [u]set the priests in their apparel with [v]trumpets, and the Levites, [w]the sons of Asaph, with cymbals, to praise the LORD, [x]after the ordinance of David king of Israel.

11 And [y]they sang together by course, in praising and giving thanks unto the LORD; [z]because he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever toward Israel. And all the people [a]shouted with a great shout, when they praised the LORD, [b]because the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid.

12 But [c]many of the priests and Levites, and chief of the fathers, who were ancient men, that had seen the first house, [d]when the foundation of this house was laid before their eyes, wept[1] with a loud voice; and many shouted aloud for joy:

13 So that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping of the people: for the people [e]shouted with a loud shout, and [f]the noise was heard afar off.

CHAPTER IV.

NOW, when [a]the adversaries[2] of Judah and Benjamin heard that the children[3] of the captivity builded the temple unto the LORD God of Israel;

2 Then they came to [b]Zerubbabel, and to the chief of the fathers, and said unto them, [c]Let us build with you: for we seek your God, as ye do; and [d]we do sacrifice unto him since the days of [e]Esar-haddon king of [f]Assur, which brought us up hither.

3 But Zerubbabel, and Jeshua, and the rest of the chief of the fathers of Israel, said unto them, [g]Ye have nothing[4] to do with us to build an house unto our God; but we ourselves together will build unto the LORD God of Israel, as [h]king Cyrus the king of Persia hath commanded us.

1 This is an affecting circumstance. The laying of the foundation of the new temple vividly recalled to the minds of these ancient men the holy associations connected with the old. They saw that the glory was departed from Israel, for they were not in circumstances to build such an house unto the Lord as the former temple had been; & although, perhaps, they did not yet know that this temple was not to be honoured with the Shekina, nor the heavenly fire—they knew that they had lost the ark of the covenant, the mercy-seat, the manna, & Aaron's budding rod, with which the former house had been enriched.

until the reign of [m]Darius king of Persia.

6 And in the reign of Ahasuerus,[1] in the beginning of his reign, [n]wrote they unto him an accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem.

7 ¶ And in the days of Artaxerxes wrote Bishlam,[2] Mithredath, Tabeel, and the rest of their companions,[3] unto Artaxerxes[4] king of Persia; and the writing of the letter was written in the[o] Syrian[5] tongue, and interpreted in the Syrian tongue.

8 Rehum the chancellor, and Shimshai the scribe,[6] wrote a letter against Jerusalem to Artaxerxes the king in this sort:

9 Then wrote Rehum the chancellor, and Shimshai the scribe, and the rest of their companions;[7] [p]the Dinaites,[8] the [q]Apharsathchites, the Tarpelites, the Apharsites, the Archevites, the Babylonians, [r]the Susanchites, the Dehavites, and the [s]Elamites,

10 And [t]the rest of the nations whom the great and noble Asnapper brought over, and set in the cities of Samaria, and the rest that are on this side the river, [u]and at such a time.[9]

11 ¶ This is the copy of the letter that they sent unto him, even unto Artaxerxes the king; Thy servants the men on this side the river, and at such a time.

12 Be it known unto the king, that the Jews, which came up from thee to us are come unto Jerusalem, building the[v] rebellious[10] and the [w]bad city, and have set[11] up the walls thereof, and joined[12] the foundations.

13 Be it known now unto the king, that [x]if this city be builded, and the walls set up again, then will they not pay[13] [y]toll, tribute, and custom, and so thou shalt endamage the revenue[14] of the kings.

14 Now, because we have maintenance[15] from the king's palace, [z]and it was not meet for us to see the king's dishonour, therefore have we sent and certified the king,

15 That search may be made in the book of the records of thy fathers: so shalt thou find in the book of the records, and know, that [a]this city is a rebellious city, and hurtful unto kings and provinces; and that they have moved[1] sedition within[2] the same of old time: [b]for which cause was this city destroyed.

16 We certify the king, that if this city be builded again, and the walls thereof set up, by this means [c]thou shalt have no portion on this side the river.

17 ¶ Then sent the king an answer unto Rehum the chancellor, and to Shimshai the scribe, and to the rest of their companions[3] that dwell in Samaria, and unto the rest beyond the river, [d]Peace, and [e]at such a time.

18 The letter which ye sent unto us hath been plainly read before me.

19 And I commanded,[4] and [f]search hath been made, [g]and it is found, that this city of old time hath made[5] insurrection[6] against kings, and that rebellion and sedition have been made therein.

20 There have been [h]mighty kings also over Jerusalem, which have ruled over all countries [i]beyond the [7]river; [k]and toll, tribute, and custom, was paid unto them.

21 Give[8] ye now commandment to cause these men to cease, and that this city be not builded, until another commandment shall be given from me.

22 Take heed now that ye fail not to do this: [l]why should damage grow to the hurt of the kings?

23 ¶ Now, when the copy of king Artaxerxes' letter was read before Rehum[m], and Shimshai the scribe, and their companions, [n]they went up in haste to Jerusalem unto the Jews,[9] and made them to cease by force[10] and power.

24 Then ceased the work of the house of God which is at Jerusalem. [o]So it ceased unto the second year of the reign of [p]Darius[11] king of Persia.

10 As is generally the case, with the representations of enemies, these charges contained a mixture of truth and of falsehood. It was true, that after the subjection of Judah to the kings of Babylon, the Jews had often manifested a very rebellious and treacherous spirit, but, so far as appears, it was not true that as yet they had begun to build the walls of the city. The Samaritans allude not to the real ground of the offence which they had themselves taken, but affect to be concerned solely for their sovereign's interest. The enemies of the church are always skilful in seeking plausible pretexts.

A commission therefore was sent back, in which the temple was not mentioned; (for tho' that created jealousy in the minds of the Samaritans, it was little regarded by the king of Persia:) but they were ordered 'to cause them to cease;' this was sufficient for their purpose; and without delay they forcibly put a stop to the work.—Scott.

were in Judah and Jerusalem [c]in the name of the God of Israel, even unto them.

2 Then [d]rose up Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and [e]Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and began to build the house of God which is at Jerusalem: and with them were [f]the prophets of God helping them.

3 ¶ At the same time came to them Tatnai,[g][1] governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and their companions, and said thus unto them, Who[h] hath commanded you to build this house, and to make up this wall?

4 Then said we unto them after this manner, [i]What[2] are the names of the men that make[3] this building?

5 But [k]the eye of their God was upon the elders of the Jews, that they could not cause them to cease, till the matter came to Darius: and [l]then they returned answer by letter concerning this matter.

6 ¶ The [m]copy of the letter that Tatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and his companions the [n]Apharsachites, which were on this side the river, sent unto Darius the king:

7 They sent a letter[4] unto him, wherein[5] was written thus; Unto Darius the king, [o]all peace.

8 Be it known unto the king, that we went into [p]the province of Judea, to the house of [q]the great God, which is builded with great[6] stones, and timber is laid in the walls, and this work goeth fast on, and prospereth in their hands.

9 Then asked we those elders, and said unto them thus, [r]Who commanded you to build this house, and to make up these walls?

10 We [s]asked their names also, to certify thee, that we might write the names of the men that were the chief of them.

11 And thus they returned us answer, saying, [t]We are the servants [7]of the God of heaven and earth, and build the house that was builded these many years ago, [u]which a great king of Israel builded and set up.

12 But [v]after that our fathers had provoked the God of heaven unto wrath, [w]he gave them [x]into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, the Chaldean, who destroyed this house, and carried the people away into Babylon.

13 But [y]in the first year of Cyrus the king of Babylon, the same king Cyrus made a decree to build this house of God.

14 And [z]the vessels also of gold and silver of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took out of the temple that was in Jerusalem, and brought them into the temple of Babylon, those did Cyrus [a]the king take out of the temple of Babylon, and they were delivered unto one, whose name was [b]Sheshbazzar,[1] [c]whom he had made governor;[2]

15 And said unto him, Take these vessels, go, carry them into the temple that is in Jerusalem, and [d]let the house of God be builded in his place.

16 Then came the same [e]Sheshbazzar, and [f]laid the foundation of the house of God which is in Jerusalem: and since that time even until now hath it been in building,[3] and yet [g]it is not finished.

17 Now therefore, if it seem good to the king, [h]let there be search made in the king's treasure-house, which is there at Babylon, whether it be so, that [i]a decree was made of Cyrus the king to build this house of God at Jerusalem, and let the king send his pleasure to us concerning this matter.

CHAPTER VI.

Darius, finding the decree of Cyrus, maketh a new decree for the advancement of the building, 1—12. By the help of the enemies, and the directions of the prophets, the temple is finished, 13—15. The feast of the dedication is kept, 16—18; and the passover, 19—22.

THEN Darius the king made a decree, [a]and search was made in the house of the rolls,[4] where the treasures were laid[5] up in Babylon.

2 And there was found at[6] Achmetha,[7] in the palace that is in the province of the Medes, a roll, and therein was a record thus written:

3 In [b]the first year of Cyrus the king, the same Cyrus the king made a decree concerning the house of God at Jerusalem, Let the house be builded, [c]the place where they offered sacrifices,

1 The former governors were either by this time dead, or had been removed from office upon the accession of the new monarch. Tatnai & his companions seem to have been men much superior to their predecessors. Probably, upon a representation being made to him by the Samaritans, the governor had come to investigate the matter on the spot. He seems to have discharged his duty with diligence and impartiality. However, in these last verses the Jews gave Tatnai a faithful account of the whole matter; and he very worthily represented it to the king as they informed him, without any addition or diminution of his own. For he did not accuse them of building the walls of Jerusalem; which shows that he and his companions were not like their enemies, but impartially wrote what they affirmed to be true.—Patrick.

15 And this house was finished on the third day of the month [g]Adar, which was in the sixth year of the reign of Darius the king.

16 ¶ And [h]the children of Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the rest of the children[4] of the captivity, kept [i]the dedication of this house of God [k]with joy,[5]

17 And [l]offered at the dedication of this house of God an hundred bullocks, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs; and for a [m]sin-offering for all Israel, twelve he-goats, [n]according to the number of the tribes of Israel.

18 And they set [o]the priests in their divisions, and the Levites in their courses, for the service of God, which is at Jerusalem; as[8] it is written in the book of Moses.

19 And [p]the children of the captivity [q]kept the passover upon the fourteenth day of the first month.

20 For the priests and the Levites were [r]purified together, all of them were pure, and [s]killed the passover for all the children of the captivity, and for their brethren the priests, and for themselves.

21 And the children of Israel, which were come again out of captivity, and [t]all such as had separated themselves unto them from the filthiness of the heathen of the land, to seek the LORD God of Israel, [u]did eat,

22 And kept [v]the feast of unleavened bread seven days with joy: for the LORD had made them joyful, and [w]turned the heart of [x]the king of As-

7 The terms occurring throughout the decree of Darius, imply his conviction that the God of the Jews was the true Jehovah. He did not, indeed, relinquish the worship of his idols, but he clearly believed Jehovah to be superior to them all. He seems to have acknowledged him to be the supreme. He makes provision for the daily sacrifices, the morning and evening burnt-offerings, which, according to the law, were to be made day by day continually; and he desires an interest for himself and for his sons, in the prayers of Jehovah's worshippers.

The Artaxerxes here mentioned, cannot be he of whom we read in the 4th chapter. CHAPTER VII.

Ezra's pedigree from Aaron; he goeth up to Jerusalem. 1—10. The gracious commission of Artaxerxes to him, 11—26. Ezra blesseth God for this favour, 27, 28.

NOW after these things, in the reign of [a]Artaxerxes[1] king of Persia, Ezra[b] the son of [c]Seraiah,[2] the son of Azariah, the son of [d]Hilkiah.

2 The son of Shallum, the son of Zadok,[e] the son of Ahitub,

3 The son of Amariah, the son of Azariah, the son of Meraioth,

4 The son of Zerahiah, the son of Uzzi, the son of Bukki,

5 The son of Abishua, the son of Phinehas,[f] the son of [g]Eleazar, the son of Aaron the [h]chief priest:

6 This Ezra went up from Babylon; and he was [i]a ready [k]scribe in [l]the law of Moses, which the LORD God of Israel had given: and the king [m]granted him all his request, [n]according to the hand of the LORD his God upon him.

7 And there went[3] up some of [o]the children of Israel, and of the priests, and [p]the Levites, and the [q]singers, and the [r]porters, and the [s]Nethinims, unto Jerusalem, in the seventh year of [t]Artaxerxes the king.

8 And he came to Jerusalem in the fifth month, which was in the seventh year of the king.

9 For upon the first day of the first month began[4] he to go up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month came he to Jerusalem, [u]according to the good hand of his God upon him.

10 For Ezra had [v]prepared his heart to seek [w]the law of the LORD, and [x]to do it, [y]and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments.

11 ¶ Now this is [z]the copy of the letter that the king Artaxerxes gave unto Ezra the priest, the scribe, even a[a] scribe of the words of the commandments of the LORD, and of his statutes to Israel.

12 Artaxerxes, [b]king of kings, unto Ezra the priest, a[5] scribe of the law of the God of heaven, perfect peace, [c]and at such a time.

2 Ezra was not the immediate descendant of Seraiah, but probably his grandson or great grandson. Seraiah perished at the taking of Jerusalem by the Babylonians (2 Ki. 25. 18,21.) which took place 121 years before this period. In this genealogical list there is the omission of several generations, as is obvious from comparing 1 Ch. 6. 7, &c. Kimchi supposes this omission to have been for the sake of brevity, Ezra, as he remarks, being the author of both books, and deeming it unnecessary here to repeat at length the genealogy given in the former book.

The liberality of the king's decree seems to have induced these chief men, who still remained in Babylon, to resolve to accompany Ezra to Jerusalem. The reflections contained in these two concluding verses of the chapter are characterized by a most amiable spirit of piety. Ezra simply states the case; shows what the king had resolved, and tells what he said; & then points out the grand agent in the whole business—it was the Lord God of his fathers.

6 There is no certain information concerning this river or the town which appears to have given it its name. We have here a curious instance of the delusive conclusions formed from the evidence of names; for most commentators, not being able to find a name like this nearer than Adiabene, in Assyria, which took its name from the river Adiava, conjecture that this may be here intended; that is, that Ezra appointed as a rendezvous for his party, before starting on a journey from Babylon to Jerusalem, a point about 250 miles distant, in a different direction, and altogether 500 miles out of his way.—*Pict. 19 And [e]Hashabiah, and with him Jeshaiah of the sons of [f]Merari, his brethren, and their sons, twenty;

20 Also of the [g]Nethinims, whom David and the princes had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinims: all of them were expressed by name.

21 ¶ Then [h]I proclaimed[1] a fast there, at the river of Ahava, that we might [i]afflict ourselves before our God, to [k]seek of him a right way for us, and [l]for our little ones, and for all our substance.

22 For [m]I was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen[2] to help us against the enemy in the way: because we had spoken unto the king, saying, [n]The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him; but [o]his power and his wrath is against all them that forsake him.

23 So [p]we fasted, and [q]besought our God for this; [r]and he was entreated of us.

24 ¶ Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, [s]Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them,

25 And [t]weighed unto them [u]the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God, which the king, and his counsellors, and his lords, and all Israel there present, had offered;

26 I even weighed unto their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents;

27 Also twenty basons of gold of a thousand drams, and two vessels of fine[3] copper, precious[4] as gold.

28 And I said unto them, [v]Ye are holy unto the LORD; [w]the vessels are holy also; and the silver and the gold are a free-will-offering unto the LORD God of your fathers:

29 [x]Watch[5] ye, and keep them, [y]until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Israel, at Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the LORD.

30 So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem, unto [z]the house of our God.

31 ¶ Then we departed from [a]the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem: and [b]the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of such as lay in wait[1] by the way.

32 And [c]we came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days.

33 ¶ Now, on the fourth day was the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, [d]weighed in the house of our God by the hand of [e]Meremoth the son of [f]Uriah the priest; and with him was Eliezar the son of Phinehas; and with them was [g]Jozabad the son of Jeshua, and Noadiah the son of [h]Binnui, Levites;

34 By number and by weight of every one: and all the weight was written[2] at that time.

35 Also the children of those that had been carried away, which were come out of the captivity, [i]offered burnt-offerings unto the God of Israel, [k]twelve bullocks[3] for all Israel, ninety and six rams, seventy and seven lambs, twelve he-goats for a sin-offering: all this was a burnt-offering unto the LORD.

36 ¶ And they delivered [l]the king's commissions unto the king's [m]lieutenants, and to the governors on this side the river; and [n]they furthered the people, and the house of God.

2 It was a perilous journey which they were about to undertake. In addition to their dangers from other quarters, they would be exposed to the attacks of the Arab robbers which infested the desert through which they were to pass. In these circumstances a strong guard of soldiers might have seemed indispensable, and had he asked such protection from the king, doubtless it would have beengranted. But he had regard to the glory of his God; and, having stated to the king the sufficiency of Jehovah's safeguard, he was ashamed to ask the protection of soldiers. Such a request might have led the king to question the power, faithfulness, and goodness of Israel's God, or the sincerity of Ezra's dependence on him.

CHAPTER IX.

Ezra mourneth for the intermarriages of the people with strangers, 1—4. He prayeth unto God with confession of sins, 5—15.

NOW, when these things were [a]done, the princes came to me, saying, The people of Israel, and the priests, and the Levites, [b]have not separated themselves from the people of the lands, [c]doing according to their abominations, even [d]of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, [e]the Ammonites, the [f]Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites.

2 For they have [g]taken of their daughters for themselves, and for their sons; so that [h]the holy[4] seed have mingled[i] themselves with the people of those lands: yea, [k]the hand of the princes and rulers hath been chief in this trespass.

3 And when I heard this thing, I rent[l] my garment and my mantle, and [m]plucked off the hair[1] of my head and of my beard, and [n]sat down astonied.

4 Then were assembled unto me every one that [o]trembled at the words of the God of Israel, because of the transgression of those that had been carried away; and I sat astonied [p]until the evening sacrifice.

5 ¶ And at the evening sacrifice I arose up from my heaviness;[2] and, having rent my garment and my mantle, [q]I fell[3] upon my knees, and [r]spread out my hands unto the LORD my God,

6 And said, O my God, [s]I am ashamed and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God: for [t]our iniquities are increased over our head, and our trespass[4] is [u]grown up unto the heavens.

7 [v]Since the days of our fathers have we been in a great trespass unto this day; and [w]for our iniquities have we, our kings, and our priests, been delivered [x]into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, and to a spoil, and [y]to confusion of face, [z]as it is this day.

8 And now for a little[5] space [a]grace hath been showed from the LORD our God, to leave us [b]a remnant[6] to escape, and to give us a[7] nail [c]in his holy place, that our God may [d]lighten our eyes, and give us a little [e]reviving in our bondage.

9 For [f]we were bond-men; [g]yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but hath extended mercy unto us [h]in the sight of the kings of Persia, to give us a reviving, [i]to set up the house of our God, and to repair[8] the desolations thereof, and to give us [k]a wall[9] in Judah and in Jerusalem.

10 And now, O our God, [l]what shall we say after this? for we have forsaken thy commandments,

11 Which thou hast commanded by[10] thy servants the prophets, saying, [m]The land, unto which ye go to possess it, is an unclean land with [n]the filthiness of the people of the lands, with their abominations, which have filled it from one[1] end to another with their uncleanness.

12 Now therefore [o]give not your daughters unto their sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, [p]nor seek their peace or their wealth for ever; [q]that ye may be strong, [r]and eat the good of the land, [s]and leave it for an inheritance to your children for ever.

13 And [t]after all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass, seeing that thou our God hast[2] punished us [u]less than our iniquities deserve, and [v]hast given us such deliverance as this;

14 Should [w]we again break thy commandments, and [x]join in affinity with the people of these abominations? [y]wouldest not thou be angry with us, till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be [z]no remnant nor escaping?

15 O LORD God of Israel, [a]thou art righteous;[3] for we remain yet escaped, as it is this day: behold, we are before thee [b]in our trespasses; for [c]we cannot stand before thee because of this.

CHAPTER X.

NOW, [a]when Ezra[4] had prayed, and [b]when he had confessed, [c]weeping and casting himself down [d]before the house of God, there assembled unto him out of Israel [e]a very great congregation of men, and women, and children: for the people wept [5]very sore.

2 And [f]Shechaniah the son of Jehiel, one of the sons of [g]Elam, answered and said unto Ezra, [h]We have trespassed against our God, and have taken strange wives of the people of the land; [i]yet now there is hope in Israel concerning this thing.

3 Now therefore [k]let us make a covenant with our God to put[6] away all the wives, and such as are born of them, [l]according to the counsel of my a Da. 9. 3, 4, 20; Ac. 10.30.

4 The sorrow and consternation of so eminent a person as Ezra, with his prayer and confession of deep criminality, were no doubt speedily reported all over the city; and the high esteem generally entertained of his piety and wisdom, induced the people seriously to reflect upon their conduct, and its consequences; so that numbers, of their own accord, gathered around the governor, and united with him in lamentations and humiliation before God. And the alarm becoming general, even the women and children joined the assembly in the court of the temple, probably fearing lest the wrath of God should immediately be poured out upon them.

7 Altho' Shechaniah had proposed the putting away both of the strange wives and of their children, yet from the circumstance that here, in the decree of Ezra, no mention is made of the latter, it seems probable that the children were detained and instructed in the knowledge of the law. We may also believe that if any of these strange women would have renounced their idolatry and embraced the Jewish religion, they might have been retained; nor can we doubt that those who were sent away had a proper provision made for them.

2 Perhaps this observation is intended to show, that only a few of them had children—so that the separation would be more easily effected. The names here given are supposed to be merely the principal persons, for all circumstances combine to induce an opinion that a far greater number were concerned than those here enumerated. It is no where said that the children were put away, altho' Shechaniah had proposed it. Perhaps they were kept & dedicated to God by the rite of circumcision. Ezra continued nearly 12 years after this at Jerusalem, and accordingly is introduced in the ensuing book, although he is superseded in his civil authority by Nehemiah.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF EZRA.

THE conclusion of the second book of Chronicles sets before us the wretched condition to which the kingdoms of Israel and Judah were reduced through their innumerable backslidings and rebellions. 'They transgressed very much, after all the abominations of the heathen; and polluted the house of the Lord, which he had hallowed in Jerusalem. They mocked the messengers of God, and despised his words, and misused his prophets, until the wrath of the Lord arose against his people, till there was no remedy.' The measure of their iniquities being filled up, the people of Israel were carried away by the Assyrians into captivity, from which they never returned; and the people of Judah having resolutely continued in their wickedness, though warned by the fate of their brethren, were also in their turn led captive by the Chaldeans to Babylon. It had been foretold, however, respecting the latter, that, at the expiration of seventy years, their captivity would cease, and they would be restored to their own land. The book of Ezra, and the two which immediately succeed, record the fulfilment of this gracious promise. 'In the beginning of the year 458, before the Christian era, Ezra obtained of king Artaxerxes and his seven counsellors, a very ample commission for his return to Jerusalem, with all of his nation that were willing to accompany him thither; giving him full authority there to restore and settle the state, and reform the church of the Jews, and to regulate and govern both according to their own laws. This extraordinary favour, not being likely to have been obtained but by some more than ordinary means, appears to have been granted by king Artaxerxes to the solicitations of Esther, who, though not at that time advanced to the dignity of his queen, was yet the best beloved of his concubines.'

The memory of Ezra, the author of this book, and the person who bore the chief part in the transactions which it records, is held in utmost veneration by the Jews. They look upon him as another Moses. By Moses, they say, the law was given; but by Ezra it was restored: and it is generally believed that he undertook and executed the important task of revising and arranging the books of Scripture.

The restoration of the Jews, as narrated in this book, beautifully evinces Jehovah's paternal care over the people whom he had chosen—his faithfulness in fulfilling his promises made by the lips of his accredited servants—his mercy to the penitent, and readiness to receive the backsliding when they turn from their evil ways—and the wonderful working of that Providence which overruleth all things for the accomplishment of his purposes. No sooner has the predicted period come than we find the Persian monarch issuing his decree permitting the captives to return. It is generally supposed, that, availing himself of this permission, Ezra went up with the first of the exiles who returned under Zerubbabel.

For a time we find the people, after their arrival, pursuing their work with alacrity, and without molestation. But a trial of their faith and patience awaited them. The jealousy of their adversaries is awakened; and, by means of plausible misrepresentations, they procure an edict forbidding the further prosecution of the work. Thus it has ever been. There is enmity between the seed of the woman and the serpent's seed. God's people, if faithful to their trust, must expect opposition. They must learn to 'endure hardness.' Trials are needful for them. God would have them ever to know that their sufficiency is in himself; and, if in him they do put their confidence, he will cause light to arise out of darkness, and bring to nought the counsels of their adversaries. In the beginning of the reign of Darius Hystaspes the adverse decree was nullified, the work advanced, and, in due time, the temple was dedicated.

Some time after this, Ezra, it would seem, proceeded to Babylon, probably on some affairs of his nation. By a train of wonderful providences, Jehovah had there been doing great things for his people. Ezra's way had been prepared before him. Esther was in favour with the reigning prince. She had been raised up to be the preserver of her nation in the provinces of Babylon; and, by her instrumentality, as is generally believed, Ezra returned to Jerusalem, accompanied by numbers of the Jews, to whom permission to return was granted anew, and with full power to settle the government of the people according to their own laws. This high duty he executed with the zeal of a patriot who preferred Jerusalem above his chief joy, and with the devotion and single-heartedness of a true servant of the Most High. He gave himself with ardour to the work of reformation; and success, to a great extent, crowned his efforts. While the conduct of this great and holy man presents an encouraging example to all who would devote their labours to the good of the church of God, the painful sacrifices which were required of the reforming people, remind us that they who will return to the Lord, must verily crucify the flesh. 'They have frequently to forsake their dearest idols, and to cut off right hands, and to pluck out right eyes. But if we would truly enjoy the privileges of God's people, we must give up our alliance with an ungodly world, for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God, as God hath said. "I will dwell in them, and walk in them; I will be their God, and they shall be my people."'

NEHEMIAH.

THIS book may be considered as a continuation of that of Ezra, and in several ancient versions is termed the second book of Ezra. There can be no doubt, however, e author of it was the person whose name, in our own version, it bears, and whose transactions it records. Of this the book itself presents the clearest internal ce, although some portions of it may have been added by a later hand, as the register with which we are furnished in chap. xii. Nehemiah was a man of great prudence, and fortitude; full of zeal for the glory of Jehovah, and animated with the spirit of devoted patriotism. It is not ascertained to which tribe he belonged, r to that of Levi, or, as some suppose, to the royal house of Judah; but doubtless, from the honourable and influential office which he held in the court of Persia, y infer that he was the member of an illustrious family. As Ezra had been chiefly occupied in collecting the sacred writings, and establishing the observance law, so Nehemiah devoted himself especially to the restoration of the civil polity of the Jews, and the fortifying of the holy city.

his book has been divided into four sections; the first narrating Nehemiah's departure from Shushan with the royal commission, and his arrival at Jerusalem, ii. 1—11. The second relates the building of the walls, notwithstanding the violent opposition of the enemies of the nation, chap. ii. 12—20; iii—vii. 4. The escribes the first reformation effected by Nehemiah, chap. vii. 5.—xii. 47. And the fourth relates the second reformation accomplished on his return to Jerusalem, considerable absence, and his correction of abuses which had crept in during his sojourn at the Persian court, chap. xiii. This is the last of the historical books ture; and, according to Prideaux, extends from the twentieth year of Artaxerxes to the fifteenth of Darius Nothus, embracing a period of about thirty-five years.

1 In this prayer he adores the greatness, & celebrates the goodness and faithfulness of the covenant-keeping Jehovah; and, making confession of sin, supplicates his mercy. A deep sense of our own unworthiness is a good qualification for the mercy we beg of God. This Nehemiah expresses very sensibly, both here and in the next verse.

thy people, [f]whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power, and by thy [g]strong hand.

11 O LORD, I beseech thee, [h]let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, [i]who desire to fear thy name; and prosper, I pray thee, thy servant this day, and [k]grant him mercy in the sight of this man. For [l]I was the king's cup-bearer.[1]

CHAPTER II.

Artaxerxes understanding the cause of Nehemiah's sadness, sendeth him with letters and a commission to build the walls of Jerusalem, 1—8. Nehemiah, to the grief of the enemies of the Jews, cometh to Jerusalem, 9—11. He vieweth secretly the ruins of the walls, 12—16. He encourageth the Jews to build in spite of the scorn of the enemies, 17—20.

AND it came to pass in the month [a]Nisan,[2] in [b]the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that wine was before him; and [c]I took up the wine, and gave it unto the king. Now I had not been beforetime sad in his presence.

2 Wherefore the king said unto me, Why[d] is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? this is nothing else but [e]sorrow of heart. Then I was very sore afraid,[3]

3 And said unto the king, [f]Let the king live for ever: why should not my countenance be sad, when [g]the city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres,[4] lieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?

4 Then the king said unto me, [h]For what dost thou make request? [i]So I prayed[5] to the God of heaven.

5 And I said unto the king, [k]If it please the king, and [l]if thy servant have found favour in thy sight, that thou wouldest send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may build it.

6 And the king said unto me, (the queen[6] also sitting by him,) For how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? [m]So it pleased the king to send me; and [n]I set him a time.

7 Moreover, I said unto the king, If it please the king, [o]let letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, that[p] they may convey me over, till I come into Judah;

8 And a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace[1] which appertained to the house, and [q]for the wall[2] of the city, and [r]for the house that I shall enter into. And [s]the king granted me, according to the good hand of my God upon me.

9 ¶ Then I came [t]to the governors beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. (Now [u]the king had sent captains of the army and horsemen with me.)

10 When [v]Sanballat the [w]3Horonite, and Tobiah [x]the servant,[4] [y]the Ammonite, heard of it, [z]it grieved them exceedingly that [a]there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel.

11 So [b]I came to Jerusalem, and was there three days.

12 ¶ And [c]I arose in the night, I and some few men with me; [d]neither told I any man what [e]my God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem: neither was there any beast with me, save the beast that I rode upon.

13 And I went out by night by [f]the gate of the valley, even before the dragon-well, and to [g]the dung-port, and viewed [h]the walls of Jerusalem, which were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire.

14 Then I went on to [i]the gate of the fountain, and to the king's [5]pool: but there was no place for the beast that was under me to pass.

15 Then went I up in the night by [k]the brook, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entered by [l]the gate of the valley, and so returned.[6]

16 And [m]the rulers knew not whither I went, or what I did; neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers, nor to the rest that did the work.

17 ¶ Then said I unto them, [n]Ye see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lieth waste, and the gates thereof are burned with fire: [o]come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more [p]a reproach.

18 Then I told them of [q]the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let

1 Many of the Jews, it appears, were advanced to offices of trust and authority in Babylon and Persia; a circumstance which might both contribute to the advantage of their brethren, and tend to diffuse the knowledge of God in the East. The office of cup-bearer was highly honourable, influential, and also lucrative, as appears from the fact that, from his own resources, Nehemiah was able to maintain the grandeur becoming his office as governor of Judea.

20 Then answered I them, and said unto them, [w]The God of heaven, he will prosper us; therefore we his servants will arise and build: but [x]ye have no portion, nor right, nor [y]memorial, in Jerusalem.

CHAPTER III.

The names and order of them that builded the wall.

THEN [a]Eliashib the high priest rose up, with his brethren the priests, and they builded [b]the sheep-gate;[2] they [c]sanctified it, and set up the doors of it; even unto the [d]tower of Meah they sanctified[3] it, unto the tower of Hananeel.

2 And next[4] unto him builded [e]the men of Jericho. And next to them builded [f]Zaccur the son of Imri.

3 But [g]the fish-gate did the sons of Hassenaah build, who also laid [h]the beams thereof, and set up [i]the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

4 And next unto them repaired [k]Meremoth the son of [l]Urijah, the son of Koz. And next unto them repaired Meshullam[m] the son of Berechiah, the son of Meshezabeel. And next unto them repaired Zadok the son of Baana.

5 And next unto them [n]the Tekoites repaired: but [o]their nobles [p]put not their necks to the work of their lord.

6 Moreover [q]the old gate repaired Jehoiada the son of Paseah, and Meshullam the son of Besodeiah: they laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

7 And next unto them repaired Melatiah [r]the Gibeonite, and Jadan the Meronothite, the men of Gibeon and of [s]Mizpeh, unto [t]the throne of the governor on this side the river.

8 Next unto him repaired Uzziel the son of Harhaiah, of [u]the goldsmiths.[1] Next unto him also repaired Hananiah the son of one [v]of the apothecaries; and they fortified[2] Jerusalem unto the [w]broad wall.

9 And next unto them repaired Rephaiah the son of Hur, [x]the ruler of the half part[3] of Jerusalem.

10 And next unto them repaired Jedaiah the son of Harumaph, even [y]over against his house. And next unto him repaired [z]Hattush the son of Hashabniah.

11 Malchijah the son of [a]Harim, and Hashub the son of [b]Pahath-moab, repaired the other[4] piece, and [c]the tower of the furnaces.

12 And next unto him repaired Shallum the son of Halohesh, [d]the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem, [e]he and his daughters.

13 [f]The valley-gate[5] repaired Hanun, and the inhabitants of [g]Zanoah; they built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and a thousand cubits on the wall unto the dung-gate.

14 But [h]the dung-gate repaired Malchiah the son of Rechab, [i]the ruler of part of [k]Beth-haccarem; he built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

15 But [l]the gate of the fountain repaired Shallum the son of Col-hozeh, [m]the ruler of part of [n]Mizpah; he built it, and covered it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and the wall of the pool of [o]Siloah[6] by the king's garden, and unto [p]the stairs that go down from the [7]city of David.

16 After him repaired Nehemiah the son of Azbuk, [q]the ruler of the half-part of [r]Beth-zur, unto the place over against [s]the sepulchres of David, and to [t]the pool that was made, and unto [u]the house[8] of the mighty.

17 And after him repaired the Levites, Rehum the son of Bani. Next unto him repaired Hashabiah, [v]the ruler of the half-part of [w]Keilah, in his part.

18 After him repaired their brethren, Bavai the son of Henadad, the ruler of the half-part of Keilah.

3 When they had completed it, they blessed it by solemn prayers, and perhaps by sacrifices, as the first-fruits of this pious work. For we do not read that any other part, but this which they built, was sanctified. Some think this was done, because of the relation that this gate had to sacred uses, but it was rather such a ceremony as was imitated by other nations, when they began their walls; which they commended to the protection of their gods. Some translate it, 'they made it an excellent structure;' others, 'they cleansed it' from the rubbish, and the profanation which the Babylonians had brought upon it, restoring it to its ancient splendour. But our translation, I think, is best: for it being the priests' work, it became them to bless and sanctify it.—Patrick.

4 That which had been left by Azariah, after he had repaired the wall by his own house. It is probable that some of the principal people were either obliged, or voluntarily offered to repair those parts of the wall which were opposite or adjacent to their own houses. 'No man,' observes Pellicanus, 'can think that the names of them that repaired the walls of Jerusalem were set down so diligently as here they are, without some rational cause for it. And the reason was, because it was a work of great virtue to love and to do honour to their country; a work of piety to restore the holy city; a religious thing to defend the true worshippers of God, that they might serve him in quietness and safety; and a courageous thing, in the midst of so many enemies, to go on with this work in a pious confidence of the power of God to support them. The names, therefore, of such persons deserved to be preserved & transmitted to future generations, as a most noble example to them.'
5 So many turnings of the wall are mentioned, that none can now give any account of them. The king's high house was perhaps some lofty building from which the watchmen might make their observations.

4 The expressions of this man indicate at once rage and contempt. Vast numbers of the Jews were employed in the work, as if they designed to make a speedy end of it. This he attempts to make a subject of ridicule, as if they hoped to finish their work, and keep a feast, and dedicate it by sacrifice all in one day. Believing them to be incapable of accomplishing the work, he laughs at their diligence and zeal.

CHAPTER IV.

While the enemies are wroth, and scoff, Nehemiah prayeth to God, and continueth the work, 1—6. Understanding the wrath and secrets of the enemy, he setteth a watch, 7—12. He armeth the labourers, 13—18, and giveth military precepts, 19—23.

BUT it came to pass, that when [a]Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he was wroth, and took great indignation, and [b]mocked the Jews.

2 And he spake before his brethren and [c]the army of Samaria, and said, What do these [d]feeble Jews? will they fortify[3] themselves? [e]will they sacrifice? will they make an end in a [4]day? will they [f]revive the stones out of the heaps of the rubbish which are burned?

3 Now [g]Tobiah the Ammonite was by him; and he said, Even that which they build, if a fox go up, he shall even break down their stone wall.

4 [h]Hear, O our God; for we are despised:[5] and [i]turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity;

5 And [k]cover not their iniquity, and let not [l]their sin be blotted[6] out from before thee: for they have provoked thee to anger [m]before the builders.

6 So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the [7]half thereof: for the people [n]had a mind to work.

7 ¶ But it came to pass, that when [o]Sanballat, and Tobiah, and the Arabians, and [p]the Ammonites, and [q]the Ashdodites, [r]heard that the walls of Jerusalem were[8] made up, and that the breaches began to be stopped, [s]then they were very wroth,

8 And [t]conspired all of them together to come and to fight against Jerusalem, and to hinder[9] it.

9 Nevertheless [u]we made our prayer unto our God, and [v]set a watch against them day and night, because of them.

10 And Judah said, [w]The strength of the [x]bearers of burdens is decayed, and there is much rubbish; so that we are not able to build the wall.

11 And our adversaries said, [y]They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease.

12 And it came to pass, that when the Jews which dwelt by them came, they said unto us [z]ten times, From[1] all places[2] whence ye shall return unto us they will be upon you.

13 ¶ Therefore [a]set I in the lower[3] places behind the wall, and on the higher places, I even set the people after their families, with [b]their swords, their spears, and their bows.

14 And I looked, and rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, [c]Be not ye afraid of them: [d]remember the LORD, which is [e]great and terrible, and fight[f] for your brethren, your sons and your daughters, your wives and your houses.

15 And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and [g]God had brought their counsel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, [h]every one unto his work.

16 And it came to pass, from that time forth, that the half of [i]my servants wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears,[4] the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons; and the rulers were behind all the house of Judah.

17 They which builded on the wall, and they that [k]bare burdens, with those that laded, every one [l]with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other[5] hand held a weapon.

18 For the builders, every one had his sword girded by[6] his side, and so builded: and [m]he that sounded the trumpet was by me.

19 And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the wall, one far from another:

20 In what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us: [n]our God shall fight for us.

21 So [o]we laboured in the work: and half of them held the spears from the rising of the morning till the stars appeared.

2 The construction of this verse is extremely difficult. The sense, says Clarke, appears to be this: 'the Jews which dwelt among the Samaritans, &c., came often to Nehemiah from all quarters, where they sojourned, and told him the designs of his enemies against him; therefore he set people with their swords, spears, and bows, to defend the walls.'

We have seen men following the plough with guns slung to their backs, and swords by their side; or else these & other weapons were placed within reach, while they pursued such labours as kept them stationary. Sometimes also, but less frequently, we have observed men armed with guns, swords, spears, clubs, and bucklers, keeping a watchful guard, while their fellows pursued their important labours.—*Pict. 2 There seems to have been most just ground of complaint on the part of the poorer Jews against their more wealthy brethren. Though the captivity of Babylon had cured them, as a people, of their tendency to idolatry, it had left unabated their tendency to many other sins. They were covetous, and given to oppression. Affliction will never of itself eradicate the evil propensities of our fallen nature.

3 Amidst the depredations to which the Jews were exposed, and their attention to self-defence, it is likely that tillage was in some degree neglected, and that a scarcity of corn ensued. Perhaps their supplies had been intercepted by their enemies. In these circumstances the wealthier Jews, availing themselves of their brethren's sufferings, exacted of them exorbitant usury, compelling them to sell all that they had for bread. If this happened, as some suppose, during the sabbatical year, their crime was still more deeply aggravated.

23 So neither [q]I, nor my brethren, nor my servants, nor the men of the guard which followed me, none of us put off our clothes, saving[1] that every one put them off for washing.

CHAPTER V.

The Jews complain of their debt, mortgage, and bondage, 1—5. Nehemiah rebuketh the usurers, and causeth them to swear to make a full and free restitution, 6—13. He forbeareth his own allowance, and keepeth hospitality at his own expense, 14—19.

AND there was [a]a great cry[2] of the people, and of their wives, against [b]their brethren the Jews.

2 For there were that said, [c]We, our sons, and our daughters, are many: therefore [d]we take up corn for them, that we may eat, and live.

3 Some also there were that said, [e]We have mortgaged our lands, vineyards, and houses, that we might buy corn, [f]because of the dearth.[3]

4 There were also that said, We have borrowed money for [g]the king's tribute, and that upon our lands and vineyards:

5 Yet now [h]our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children; and, lo, [i]we bring into bondage[4] our sons and our daughters to be servants, and some of our daughters are brought unto bondage already: neither is it in our power to redeem them; for other men have our lands and vineyards.

6 ¶ And [k]I was very angry when I heard their cry and these words.

7 Then I consulted[5] with myself, and [l]I rebuked the nobles, and the rulers, and said unto them, [m]Ye exact usury, every one of his brother. And [n]I set a great assembly against them.

8 And I said unto them, We, [o]after our ability, have [p]redeemed our brethren the Jews, which were sold unto the heathen; and will ye even [q]sell your brethren? or [r]shall they be sold unto us? Then [s]held they their peace, and found nothing to answer.

9 Also I said, [t]It is not good that ye do: ought ye not [u]to walk in the fear of our God, because of [v]the reproach[1] of the heathen our enemies?

10 [w]I likewise, and my brethren, and my servants, might exact of them money and corn: [x]I pray you, let us leave[y] off this usury.[2]

11 [z]Restore, I pray you, to them, even this day, [a]their lands, their vineyards, their oliveyards, and their houses, also the hundredth[3] part of the money, and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, that ye exact of them.

12 Then said they, [b]We will restore them, and will require nothing of them; so will we do as thou sayest. Then I[c] called the priests, and took an oath of them, that they should do according to this promise.

13 Also [d]I shook[4] my lap, and said, So[e] God shake out every man from his house, and from his labour, that performeth not this promise, even thus be he shaken out, and emptied.[5] And all the congregation said, [f]Amen, and praised[g] the LORD. And [h]the people did according to this promise.

14 ¶ Moreover,[6] from the time that I was appointed to be their governor in the land of Judah, [i]from the twentieth year even unto the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that is, twelve years, [k]I and my brethren have not eaten [l]the bread of the governor.

15 But the former governors, that had been before me, were chargeable unto the people, and had taken of them bread and wine, besides forty shekels of silver; yea, [m]even their servants bare rule over the people: but [n]so did not I, [o]because of the fear of God.

16 Yea, also [p]I continued in the work of this wall, [q]neither bought[7] we any land: and [r]all my servants were gathered thither unto the work.

17 Moreover, there were [s]at my table [t]an hundred and fifty of the Jews and rulers, besides those that came unto us from among the heathen that are about us.

18 Now, that [u]which was prepared for me daily was one ox, and six choice sheep; also fowls were prepared for me, and once in ten days store of all sorts of wine: yet for all this [v]required not I the bread[1] of the governor, because the bondage was heavy upon this people.

19 [w]Think upon me, my God, for good, [x]according to all that I have done for this people.

CHAPTER VI.

Sanballat practiseth by craft, by rumours, by hired prophecies, to terrify Nehemiah, 1—14. The wall is finished, to the terror of the enemies, 15, 16. Secret intelligence passeth between the enemies and the nobles of Judah, 17—19.

NOW it came to pass, [a]when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and [b]Geshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had builded the wall, and that there was [c]no breach left therein, (though [d]at that time I had not set up the doors upon the gates,)

2 That Sanballat and Geshem sent unto me, saying, [e]Come, let us meet together in some one of the villages[2] in the plain of [f]Ono: but [g]they thought to do me mischief.

3 And [h]I sent messengers[3] unto them, saying, I [i]am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down: why should the work cease, whilst I leave it, and come down to you?

4 Yet they sent unto me [k]four times after this sort; and I answered them after the same manner.

5 ¶ Then sent Sanballat his servant unto me, in like manner, the fifth time, with [l]an open[4] letter in his hand;

6 Wherein was written, [m]It is reported among the heathen, and [n]Gashmu saith it, [o]that thou and the Jews think to rebel: for which cause thou buildest the wall, [p]that thou mayest be their king, according to these words.

7 And thou hast also [q]appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, saying, There is [r]a king in Judah: and now shall it be reported to the king according to these words. [s]Come now therefore, and let us take counsel together.

8 Then I sent unto him, saying, [t]There are no such things done as thou sayest, but [u]thou feignest them out of thine own heart.

9 For [v]they all made us afraid, saying, [w]Their hands shall be weakened

1 Nehemiah, considering the depressed state of the people, refused to take from them the usual allowance of money & provisions, which as governor he had a right to claim. Throughout the Persian empire, the dues of the government were paid partly in money & partly in provisions. Nehemiahrefused the salary of the governor, and at his own expense, maintained thedignity of the office.

2 The word rendered 'villages,' should perhaps be considered as a proper name. 'Come and let us meet in Cephirim,' which probably was the same as Chephirah, a town belonging to the Gibeonites, & afterwards to the tribe of Benjamin. These treacherous men, pretending a desire to consult with him on some important matter, would have lured him to this place to his death.

2 Among the many discouragements with which this good man had to contend, none was greater than this defection of the Jewish nobles. Possibly envy and jealousy may have been one source of their treacherous conduct: fear too may have had some influence with them; but, as we learn from the succeeding verse, connection by marriage with the enemies of their country, was the chief cause. No wonder that Ezra took the firm steps which he did in this matter, rendering void those alliances by which the people were led into such designs against their country.

2 Between this list and that which has been given in Ezra, there are considerable differences in number and in name, although the final result is the same. Perhaps the list in Ezra was taken from one made at Babylon, of those who, upon the edict of Cyrus, gave in their names as intending to proceed to Jerusalem; while this may be supposed to have been made at Jerusalem after the party had arrived. The differences of name and number are then easily accounted for, from changes of intention to go and not to go, and from deaths and other accidents by the way.-Pict. Bible.

3 Here is an account of the heads of the several families that first came up. Though it seem of little use to us now, yet then it was of great use, to compare what they had been with what they now were. We may suppose they were much increased by this time; but it would do well for them to remember their small beginnings, that they might acknowledge God in multiplying their families, and building them up. By this means likewise, their genealogies would be preserved, & the destination of their families kept up till Messiah should come, and then an end be put to all their genealogies, which were preserved for his sake, but afterwards were useless.

CHAPTER VII.

Nehemiah committeth the charge of Jerusalem to Hanani and Hananiah, 1—4. A register found of the genealogy of them which came at the first out of Babylon, 5—8; of the people, 9—38; of the priests, 39—42; of the Levites, 43—45; of the Nethinims, 46—56; of the children of Solomon's servants, 57—62; and of the priests which could not show their pedigree, 63—65. The whole number of them, with their substance, 66—69. Their oblations, 70—73.

NOW it came to pass, when [a]the wall was built, and [b]I had set up the doors, and [c]the porters, and the singers, and the Levites, were appointed,

2 That I gave [d]my brother Hanani, and [e]Hananiah [f]the ruler of the palace, charge over Jerusalem; for he was [g]a faithful man, and [h]feared God above many.

3 And I said unto them, [i]Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened until the sun be hot; and while they stand by, let them shut the doors, and bar them: and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one in his watch, and [k]every one to be over against his house.

4 Now the city was large[1] and great; but the people were few therein, and [l]the houses were not builded.

5 ¶ And [m]my God [n]put into mine heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, [o]that they might be reckoned by genealogy: and I found a register[2] of the genealogy of them which came up at the first, and found written therein,

6 These are [p]the children of the province, that went up out of the captivity, of those that had been carried away, [q]whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away, and came again to Jerusalem and to Judah, every one unto his city;

7 Who came with [r]Zerubbabel, [s]Jeshua, Nehemiah, [t]Azariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mordecai, Bilshan, [u]Mispereth, Bigvai, [v]Nehum, Baanah: the number, I say, of the men of the people of Israel was this;

8 The children[3] of [w]Parosh, two thousand an hundred seventy and two.

9 The children of [x]Shephatiah, three hundred seventy and two.

10 The children of [y]Arah, six hundred fifty and two.

two thousand and eight hundred and eighteen.

12 The children of [a]Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

13 The children of [b]Zattu, eight hundred forty and five.

14 The children of [c]Zaccai, seven hundred and threescore.

15 The children of [d]Binnui, six hundred forty and eight.

16 The children of [e]Bebai, six hundred twenty and eight.

17 The children of [f]Azgad, two thousand three hundred twenty and two.

18 The children of [g]Adonikam, six hundred threescore and seven.

19 The children of [h]Bigvai,[1] two thousand threescore and seven.

20 The children of [i]Adin, six hundred fifty and five.

22 The children of [l]Hashum,[2] three hundred twenty and eight.

23 The children of [m]Bezai, three hundred twenty and four.

24 The children of [n]Hariph, an hundred and twelve.

25 The children of [o]Gibeon, ninety and five.

26 The men of [p]Beth-lehem and Netophah, an hundred fourscore and eight.

27 The men of [q]Anathoth, an hundred twenty and eight.

28 The men of [r]Beth-azmaveth, forty and two.

29 The men of [s]Kirjath-jearim, Chephirah, and Beeroth, seven hundred forty and three.

30 The men of Ramah and Gaba, six hundred twenty and one.

31 The men of [u]Michmas, an hundred and twenty and two.

32 The men of [v]Beth-el and Ai, an hundred twenty and three.

33 The men of the other [w]Nebo, fifty and two.

34 The children of [x]the other Elam, a thousand two hundred fifty and four.

35 The children of [y]Harim, three hundred and twenty.

36 The children of [z]Jericho, three hundred forty and five.

37 The children of [a]Lod, Hadid, and Ono, seven hundred twenty and one.

38 The children[1] of [b]Senaah, three thousand nine hundred and thirty.

39 ¶ The priests: the children of [c]Jedaiah, of the house of Jeshua, nine hundred seventy and three.

40 The children of [d]Immer, a thousand fifty and two.

41 The children of [e]Pashur, a thousand two hundred forty and seven.

42 The children of [f]Harim, a thousand and seventeen.

43 ¶ The Levites: the children of Jeshua, of Kadmiel, and of the children of [g]Hodevah, seventy and four.

44 [h]The singers: the children of Asaph, an hundred forty and eight.

1 Some MSS. read two thousand and sixty-six, as in Ezra 2. 14. Referring to the discrepancies between the two accounts, Scott remarks, 'that should any conjecture that some ancient copyist had inserted the wrong register, and that his mistake had been generally followed, the very conclusion would show, that such alterations are almost always liable to detection; and no reasonable man would think it the least objection to the divine inspiration of the sacred scriptures.' The same commentator suggests this reflection on the laudable conduct of Nehemiah: 'Provision is made in the gospel, and in the city of our God, for far greater numbers than have yet been enrolled citizens; we should therefore be devising means for replenishing it with inhabitants, as well as for building its walls.'

2 There are some families named here which are not in Ezra; as in ver. 22, and ver. 48, 49, 51, 52, which are all omitted in Ezra. For it must be considered that one of these accounts was taken by Ezra in Babylon; the other by Nehemiah in Judea. And therefore it is no wonder that a greater number are sometimes mentioned in Nehemiah than in Ezra; for, in the first account that was taken of them, many were ignorant of their genealogy; but before the last, the book of their genealogy was found. Lightfoot remarks, that the matter is to be apprehended thus: 'That Nehemiah found that list of those that came up in the first of Cyrus, as it was taken then; and that he called over the names of the families as they lay in order there. He observed the order of that list in calling and listing them.'

1 As this whole chapter is almost entirely the same as the second chapter of the book of Ezra, the reader may consult the notes which we have given there. On the whole chapter, Brown makes the following reflections: 'The worship and service of God ought always to be preferred to our civil concerns, however important; and with great care ought princes and other rulers to make choice of their deputies; if possible, they should fix upon such as are faithful, and eminently fear God. Happy, even amidst dangers, are the cities and nations which have such to rule and protect them. Great caution is necessary for our own & the church's safety, when we have traitors amongst and within us: and every man's family ought to be his immediate concern. He has need to watch over them night & day, that he may preserve them from the destroyer. Important records should be preserved, as they may be of use afterwards. But woe to those, who having given their names to the Lord, afterwards look back and return to the world; tho' God will compensate the loss of them to his church in the accession of others.

2 The slight variations that occur between the enumeration here given and that in the second chapter of Ezra, are to us of no importance, as they do not affect doctrinal truth. We consider it, therefore, unnecessary to point out the orthoepical differences of names and places as they stand in ancient copies and MSS. Blessed be God that our faith and hope are not built upon the niceties of names and numbers, genealogy and chronology, but on the great things of the law and gospel.

65 And the Tirshatha[2] said unto them, [d]that they should not eat of the most holy things, [e]till there stood up a priest with Urim and Thummim.

66 ¶ The [f]whole congregation together was forty and two thousand three hundred and threescore:

67 Besides [g]their man-servants and their maid-servants, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven; and they had [h]two hundred forty and five singing-men and singing-women.

68 [i]Their horses, seven hundred thirty and six; their mules, two hundred forty and five;

69 Their camels, four hundred thirty and five; six thousand seven hundred and twenty asses.[3]

70 ¶ And some[4] of [k]the chief of the fathers gave unto the work: [l]the Tirshatha gave to the treasure a thousand drams of gold, fifty [m]basons, five hundred and thirty priests' garments.

71 And some of the [n]chief of the fathers gave to the treasure of the work twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand and two hundred pound of silver.

72 And that which the rest of the people gave was twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand pound of silver, and threescore and seven priests' garments.

73 So the priests, and the Levites, and the porters, and the singers, and some of the people, and the Nethinims, and all Israel, dwelt in their [1]cities: and [o]when the seventh month came, the children of Israel were in their cities.

2 Or, the governor, ch. 8. 9; 10.1; Ezr. 2. 63. It is the opinion of Jacobus Capellus, that Zerubbabel is here meant by the Tirshatha in Ezra 2. 63. Whosoever he was, he expresses his hope that God might in time restore the Urim and Thummim, (as he had done the nation,) and so give answer about obscure and difficult matters, as he had done in former ages. But till then these priests were not admitted to partake of the most holy things, because it did not appear, by good proof, that they were of the family of the priests, and not to appear, and not to be, are the same thing in law. But the Talmudists, as the same person observes, interpret these words as if it had been said, Till the dead rise, or till the Messiah come. For after the first temple was destroyed, the cities of the Levites, with their suburbs, were wanting, and so were Urim and Thummim, and the kings of the house of Judah.—Patrick. The expression is by many understood as amounting to a perpetual prohibition; as if the Tirshatha had said that they should never eat of the most holy things.

3 After this verse, St Jerome has inserted the following words in the Vulgate: 'Thus far do the words extend which were written in the register;—what follows belongs to the history of Nehemiah.' This addition is not found in the Hebrew, or any other ancient version, but merely in the first edition of the Vulgate. What follows, however, seems to relate to a distinct oblation from that recorded in Ezra, and was probably made after the people were registered by Nehemiah, who was the Tirshatha or governor at this time, as Zerubbabel had been at the first return of the Jews from captivity.

1 In the last verse of the second chapter of Ezra, we have the same statement as here. In both passages it is remarked that all Israel dwelt in their cities. And, though this has reference chiefly to Judah & Benjamin, yet, as before remarked, it is evident that some of the ten tribes did return with them, as had been foretold by the prophets. They dwelt in their own cities, it having been discovered from the public registers, which were so carefully examined, to what families the particular villages and cities belonged, according to the ancient division.

The religious manner of reading and hearing the law, 1—8. Nehemiah, Ezra, and the Levites, comfort the people, 9—12. The forwardness of them to hear and be instructed, 13—15. They keep the feast of tabernacles, 16—18.

AND [a]all the people gathered themselves together [b]as one man into the street that was [c]before the water-gate; and they spake[2] unto [d]Ezra the scribe to [e]bring the book of the law of Moses, which the LORD had commanded to Israel.

2 And Ezra [f]the priest brought the law before [g]the congregation, both of men and women, and all that [3]could hear with understanding, upon [h]the first day of the seventh month.

3 And [i]he read therein before the street that was before the water-gate, from the morning[4] until mid-day, before the men and the women, and those that could understand: and [k]the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law.

4 And Ezra the scribe stood upon a pulpit[5] of wood, which they had made for the purpose: and beside him stood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Anaiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiah, and [l]Maaseiah, on his right hand: and on his left hand, Pedaiah, and Mishael, and [m]Malchiah, and [n]Hashum, and Hashbadana, Zechariah, and [o]Meshullam.

5 And Ezra [p]opened the book in the sight[6] of all the people; (for he was above all the people;) and, when he opened it, all the people [q]stood up:

6 And Ezra [r]blessed the LORD, the great God: and all the people answered, [s]Amen, Amen, [t]with lifting up their their hands; and they [u]bowed their heads, and worshipped the LORD [v]with their faces to the ground.

2 It must have been most refreshing to the heart of this pious man to behold the zeal of the people in spontaneously requiring the reading of the law. It was commanded (De.31.10,11,) that the law should be publicly read every seventh year, in the feast of tabernacles. This was the month in which that feast was held, and probably this may have suggested the people's request.

7 Also [w]Jeshua, and [x]Bani, and Sherebiah,[y] Jamin, [z]Akkub, Shabbethai, [a]Hodijah, [b]Maaseiah, [c]Kelita, Azariah,[d] [e]Jozabad,[f] Hanan, [g]Pelaiah, and the Levites, [h]caused the people to understand the law: and the people stood in their place.

8 So they read in the book, in the law of God, distinctly, [i]and gave the sense,[1] and caused them to understand the reading.

9 ¶ And [k]Nehemiah, which is the Tirshatha,[2] and [l]Ezra the priest the scribe, and [m]the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people, This[n] day is holy unto the LORD your God; [o]mourn not, nor weep. For [p]all the people wept,[3] when they heard the words of the law.

10 Then he said unto them, [q]Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and [r]send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared: for this day is holy unto our LORD; neither be ye sorry: for [s]the joy of the LORD is your strength.

11 So the Levites [t]stilled all the people, saying, Hold your peace, for the day is holy; neither be ye grieved.

12 And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, because[u] they had understood the words that were declared unto them.

13 ¶ And on [v]the second day were gathered together the chief of the fathers of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, unto Ezra the scribe, even to[4] understand the words of the law.

14 And they found written in the law which the LORD had commanded by Moses,[5] that the children of Israel should [w]dwell in [x]booths in the feast of the seventh month:

15 And [y]that they should publish and proclaim in all their cities, and [z]in Jerusalem, saying, Go forth unto [a]the mount, and [b]fetch [c]olive-branches, and pine-branches, and myrtle-branches, and [d]palm-branches, and branches of thick trees, to make booths, as it is written.

16 ¶ So the people went forth, and brought them, and made themselves booths, every one upon [e]the roof of his house, and in their courts, and in [f]the courts of the house of God, and in [g]the street of the water-gate, and [h]in the street of the gate of Ephraim.

17 And all the congregation of them that were come again out of the captivity made booths, and [i]sat under the booths; for since the days of [k]Jeshua the son of Nun unto that day [l]had not the children of Israel [m]done so: and [n]there was very great gladness.

18 Also [o]day by day, from the first day unto the last day, he read[1] in the book of the law of God: and they kept the feast seven days; and on the eighth day was a solemn[2] assembly, [p]according unto the manner.

CHAPTER IX.

A solemn general fast and humiliation, 1—3. The Levites make a religious confession of God's goodness, and of the national sins, 4—38.

NOW, in the [a]twenty and fourth day [b]of this month, the [c]children of Israel were assembled with [3]fasting, and with sackclothes, and [d]earth upon them.

2 And [e]the seed of Israel separated themselves from all strangers,[4] and stood and [f]confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers.

3 And [g]they stood up in their place, and read in the book of the law of the LORD their God [h]one fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed, and worshipped the LORD their God.

4 ¶ Then stood up upon the stairs,[5] of the Levites, [i]Jeshua, and Bani, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, and [k]cried with a loud voice unto the LORD their God.

5 Then the Levites, Jeshua, and Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabniah, Sherebiah, Hodijah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, said, [l]Stand up and [m]bless the LORD your God for ever and ever; and blessed be [n]thy glorious name, which is [o]exalted above all blessing and praise.

1 It would seem that during the long period of captivity in Babylon, the Jews had in a great measure lost the use of the Hebrew tongue, having been accustomed to use the Chaldee dialect. The scriptures, however, were read in the ancient Hebrew, and for the benefit of the people, were translated into Chaldee. This appears to be the meaning of the phrase, 'gave the sense.' But more than this seems to have been done. Ezra and his assistants 'caused the people to understand,' giving, it would seem, both a translation and exposition of the passages read, both of which the circumstances of the people urgently required. To this may be traced the origin of the Targums, & hence too, as Clarke remarks, the origin of preaching from a text.

1 This is understood to be the origin of the provision which was made for the regular reading of the law to the people, in their several cities every sabbath day. For this purpose appropriate buildings were soon after erected. These were the synagogues of which we read so much; and to this institution we may, perhaps, in some degree, ascribe the fact, that never henceforth did this nation lapse into idolatry.

thou [s]preservest them all; and the [t]host of heaven worshippeth thee.

7 Thou art the LORD the God, who didst [u]choose Abram,[1] and broughtest him forth out of [v]Ur of the Chaldees, and [w]gavest him the name of Abraham:

8 And [x]foundest his heart faithful before thee, and [y]madest a covenant with him, to give the land of [z]the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Jebusites, and the Girgashites, to give it, I say, to his seed, [a]and hast performed thy words; for thou art [b]righteous:

9 And [c]didst see the affliction of our fathers in Egypt, and [d]heardest their cry by the Red sea:

10 And [e]shewedst signs and wonders upon Pharaoh, and on all his servants, and on all the people of his land; for thou knewest that [f]they dealt proudly against them: so [g]didst thou get thee a name, as it is this day.

11 And thou didst [h]divide the sea before them, so that they went through the midst of the sea on the dry land: and [i]their persecutors thou threwest into the deeps, [k]as a stone into the mighty waters.

12 Moreover, [l]thou leddest them in the day by a cloudy pillar, and in the night by a pillar of fire, to give them light [m]in the way wherein they should go.

13 Thou [n]camest down also upon mount Sinai, and [o]spakest with them from heaven, and [p]gavest them right judgments and true[3] laws, good statutes and commandments:

14 And [q]madest known unto them thy holy sabbath, and [r]commandedst them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of [s]Moses thy servant:

15 And [t]gavest them bread from heaven for their hunger, and [u]broughtest forth water for them out of the rock for their thirst, and promisedst them that they should [v]go in to possess the land which thou hadst sworn[4] to give them.

16 But they and our fathers [w]dealt proudly, and [x]hardened their necks, and [y]hearkened not to thy commandments,

17 And [z]refused to obey, neither were [a]mindful of thy wonders that thou didst among them; but hardened their necks, and in their rebellion [b]appointed a captain[1] to return to their bondage: but thou art [c]a God ready[2] to pardon, [d]gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and [e]forsookest them not.

18 Yea, [f]when they had made them a molten calf, and said, This is thy god that brought thee up out of Egypt, and had wrought great provocations;

19 Yet thou, [g]in thy manifold mercies, forsookest them not in the wilderness: [h]the pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day, to lead them in the way; neither the pillar of fire by night, to show them light, and the way wherein they should go.

20 Thou [i]gavest also thy [k]good Spirit[3] to instruct them, and [l]withheldest not thy manna from their mouth, and [m]gavest them water for their thirst.

21 Yea, [n]forty years didst thou sustain them in the wilderness, so that they lacked nothing: [o]their clothes waxed not old, and their feet swelled not.

22 Moreover, [p]thou gavest them kingdoms and nations, and didst [q]divide them into corners: so they possessed [r]the land of Sihon,[4] and the land of the king of Heshbon, and the land of Og king of Bashan.

23 Their children also [s]multipliedst thou as the stars of heaven, and [t]broughtest them into the land concerning which [u]thou hadst promised to their fathers, that they should go in to possess it.

24 So the children went in and possessed the land, and [v]thou subduedst before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them [5]as they would.

25 And they took [w]strong cities, and [x]a fat land, and possessed[6] houses full of all goods, wells[7] digged, vineyards, and olive-yards, and [8]fruit-trees in abundance: so they [y]did eat, and were filled, and became fat, and [z]delighted themselves in thy great goodness.

26 Nevertheless [a]they were disobedient,[1] and rebelled against thee, and cast[b] thy law behind their backs, and slew[c] thy prophets, which testified against them to turn them to thee; and they[d] wrought great provocations.

27 Therefore [e]thou deliveredst them into the hand of their enemies, who vexed[2] them: and [f]in the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and, according to thy manifold mercies, thou gavest them [g]saviours,[3] who saved them out of the hand of their enemies.

28 But after they had rest, they [4]did evil again before thee: therefore leftest thou them in the hand of their enemies, so that they had the dominion over them: yet when they returned, and cried unto thee, thou [h]heardest them from heaven; and [i]many times didst thou deliver them, according to thy mercies;

29 And [k]testifiedst against them, that thou mightest bring them again unto thy law; [l]yet they dealt proudly, and hearkened not unto thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments, ([m]which if a man do, he shall live in them,) and withdrew[5] the shoulder, [n]and hardened their neck, and would not hear:

30 Yet [o]many years didst thou forbear[6] them, and testifiedst against them by[p] thy Spirit in thy[7] prophets; yet would they not give ear: [q]therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the people of the lands.

31 Nevertheless, [r]for thy great mercies' sake, thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them: for thou art a [s]gracious and merciful God.

32 Now therefore, [t]our God, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God, who [u]keepest covenant and mercy, let not all the trouble[8] seem [v]little before thee that hath come[9] upon us, [w]on our kings, on our princes, and on our priests, and on our prophets, and on our fathers, and on all thy people, since[x] the time of the kings of Assyria unto this day.

33 Howbeit [y]thou art just in all that is brought upon us; for thou hast done right, but [z]we have done wickedly:

1 The whole of the complaint in this and the ensuing verse, is very touching. However favoured they were in many respects by the Persian kings, they were still but servants ('slaves,' as the original denotes,) in their own land, to a foreign master. There is a force in this which must not pass unobserved. The Persian kings, while they almost required divine honours to be rendered to their own persons, allowed their subjects no better name than that of 'slaves;' nor did the latter aspire to a name more honourable. The tribute to the king, partly in money, and partly in kind, appears to have been heavy in proportion to their means, and was so much loss to them; tribute paid to a foreign prince, residing in another country, being much more grievous, even if of smaller amount, than the taxes required by a resident government, and spent in the country. Nor was this all; for this foreign king also had 'dominion over their bodies;' meaning doubtless, that he had an absolute claim upon their personal services, particularly in his wars.—Pict. Bible.

2 In addition to their general promise of obedience, they specify some important particulars, respecting which, as they knew from experience, they were in much danger of erring. The intermarrying with strangers was one of these.

5 In former times it had been the duty of the Nethinims, who were hewers of wood, and drawers of water to the congregation, to provide the wood necessary to maintain the fire continually upon the altar. It is probable, that of those comparatively few would return from the land of captivity; and these being too few to discharge this duty, it again devolved upon the people themselves. They now, therefore, determined by lot the order in which the various classes or districts should provide their supply. Maimonides says, there was a time fixed for families to go into the forests and bring in wood for the altar, and the day when it came to the turn of a family to bring the wood, they offered up free-will burnt - offerings, which were called a wood-offering.

2 Although the inhabitants of Jerusalem must at this time have been considerable, they were nevertheless too few for the public works, and for defence; a tenth of the rural population was therefore drafted to dwell in the holy city. Besides these, some volunteered their services; and these the people blessed; for Jerusalem afforded but few advantages, & moreover, was a place of some danger at the time, as being most exposed to the attacks of their envious enemies.

38 And the priest the son of Aaron shall be with the Levites, [h]when the Levites take tithes: and the Levites shall bring up the tithe[1] of the tithes unto the house of our God, to the chambers, into [i]the treasure-house.

39 For [k]the children of Israel and [l]the children of Levi shall bring the offering of the corn, of the new wine, and the oil, unto the chambers, where are the vessels of the sanctuary, and the priests that minister, and the porters, and the singers: and [m]we will not forsake the house of our God.

CHAPTER XI.

The rulers, voluntary men, and the tenth man chosen by lot, dwell at Jerusalem, 1, 2. A catalogue of their names, 3—19. The residue dwell in other cities, 20—36.

AND [a]the rulers of the people dwelt at Jerusalem: the rest of the people also [b]cast lots, to bring [c]one of [2]ten to dwell in Jerusalem [d]the holy city, and nine parts to dwell in other cities.

2 And the people [e]blessed all the men that [f]willingly offered themselves to dwell at Jerusalem.

3 ¶ Now these are [g]the chief[3] of the province that dwelt in Jerusalem: but in the cities of Judah dwelt every one in his possession in their cities, to wit, [h]Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the Nethinims, and [i]the children of Solomon's servants.

4 And at Jerusalem [k]dwelt certain of the children of Judah,[4] and of the children of Benjamin: of the children of Judah;[1] Athaiah the son of Uzziah, the son of Zechariah, the son of Amariah, the son of Shephatiah, the son of Mahalaleel, of the children of Perez;[l]

5 And Maaseiah the son of Baruch, the son of [m]Col-hozeh, the son of Hazaiah, the son of Adaiah, the son of Joiarib, the son of Zechariah, the son of [n]Shiloni.

6 All the sons of Perez that dwelt at Jerusalem were four hundred threescore and eight valiant men.

7 And these are [o]the sons of Benjamin; Sallu the son of Meshullam, the son of Joed, the son of Pedaiah, the son of Kolaiah, the son of Maaseiah, the son of Ithiel, the son of Jesaiah.

8 And after him Gabbai, Sallai, nine[2] hundred twenty and eight.

9 And Joel the son of Zichri was their overseer; and [p]Judah the son of Senuah was second[3] over the city.

10 Of the priests;[4] [q]Jedaiah the son of [r]Joiarib, Jachin.

11 [s]Seraiah the son of Hilkiah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Zadok, the son of Meraioth, the son of Ahitub, was [t]the ruler[5] of the house of God.

12 And their brethren that did the work of the house were eight hundred twenty and two: and [u]Adaiah the son of Jeroham, the son of Pelaliah, the son of Amzi, the son of Zechariah, the son of Pashur, the son of Malchiah,

13 And his brethren, chief of the fathers, two hundred forty and two; and Amashai the son of Azareel, the son of Ahasai, the son of Meshillemoth, the son of Immer,

14 And their brethren, mighty men of valour,[6] an hundred twenty and eight: and their overseer was Zabdiel, the son of[7] one of the great men.

15 Also of the Levites; [v]Shemaiah the son of Hashub, the son of Azrikam, the son of Hashabiah, the son of Bunni;

16 And [w]Shabbethai and Jozabad, of the chief of the Levites, had[8] the oversight of the outward[9] business of the house of God.

17 And Mattaniah the son of Micha, the son of [x]Zabdi, the son of Asaph, was the principal [y]to begin the [z]thanksgiving in prayer; and [a]Bakbukiah the second among his brethren, and Abda the son of Shammua, the son of Galal, the son of Jeduthun.

18 All the Levites in [b]the holy city were two hundred fourscore and four.

19 Moreover, the porters: [c]Akkub, Talmon, and their brethren that kept the gates,[1] were an hundred seventy and two.

20 ¶ And the residue of Israel, of the priests and the Levites, were in all the cities of Judah, every one in his inheritance.

21 But [d]the Nethinims dwelt in Ophel:[2] and Ziha and Gispa were over the Nethinims.

22 The [e]overseer also of the Levites at Jerusalem was [f]Uzzi the son of [g]Bani, the son of [h]Hashabiah, the son of [i]Mattaniah, the son of Micha: [k]of the sons of Asaph, the singers [l]were over the business of the house of God.

23 For it was [m]the king's[3] commandment concerning them, that a[4] certain portion should be for the singers, due for every day.

24 And Pethahiah the son of [n]Meshezabeel, of the children of [o]Zerah the son of Judah, was [p]at the king's hand[5] in all matters concerning the people.

25 And for the villages, with their fields, some of the children of Judah dwelt at [q]Kirjath-arba, and in the villages thereof, and at [r]Dibon, and in the villages thereof, and at [s]Jekabzeel, and in the villages thereof,

26 And at Jeshua, and at [t]Moladah, and at [u]Beth-phelet,

27 And at [v]Hazar-shual, and at [w]Beer-sheba, and in the villages thereof,

28 And at [x]Ziklag, and at Mekonah, and in the villages thereof,

29 And at [y]En-rimmon, and at [z]Zareah, and at [a]Jarmuth,

30 [b]Zanoah, [c]Adullam, and in their villages, at [d]Lachish, and the fields thereof, at [e]Azekah, and in the villages thereof. And they dwelt from Beer-sheba unto [f]the valley of Hinnom.

3 In the 10th and 11th verses we have the succession of the high priests from the return of the captivity, till the time when they began to bear the greatest sway in the Jewish nation. Jaddua is supposed to be the high priest, whom Josephus and others mention as having gone forth to meet Alexander the Great when returning from the conquest of Tyre, and averted his hostile intentions. It is said that Jaddua in his pontifical habit attended by the priests, &c. issued forth to meet him—that the conqueror expressed his astonishment at the sight, having, as he said, before seen in a vision a person attired like the high priest, who had encouraged his great enterprises; and that hereupon he entered the city in peace. We may remark that if this Jaddua was the same person, then either what is here written must have been added by another hand, or the life of Nehemiah must have been protracted long beyond the ordinary limits.

4 They sent for the Levites from all quarters, that this dedication might be as solemn and majestic as possible; and it is likely that this was done as soon as convenient after the walls were finished. The dedication seems to have consisted in processions of the most eminent persons, around the walls, and thanksgivings to God, who had enabled them to bring the work to so happy a conclusion; and no doubt to all this were added a particular consecration of the city to God, & the most earnest invocation that he would take it under his guardian care, and defend it and its inhabitants against all their enemies. The ancients consecrated their cities to the gods, and the very walls were considered as sacred. — Clarke. The Jewish doctors are of opinion, that the oracle being wanting in the temple, this dedication gave no new sanctity, but only restored it to the old; for it was still the holy city, as it is called twice in the foregoing chapter of this book, ver.1-18.

20 Of [f]Sallai, Kallai; of Amok, Eber;

21 Of Hilkiah, Hashabiah; of Jedaiah, Nethaneel.

22 ¶ The Levites, in the days of [g]Eliashib, Joiada, and Johanan, and Jaddua, were [h]recorded chief of the fathers; also the priests, to the reign of Darius[1] the Persian.

23 The sons of Levi, the chief of the fathers, were written in [i]the book of the Chronicles,[2] even until the days of Johanan the son of Eliashib.

24 And the chief of the Levites: [k]Hashabiah, Sherebiah, and Jeshua the son of Kadmiel, with their brethren over against them, to praise and to give thanks, [l]according to the commandment of David [m]the man of God, [n]ward over against ward.

25 [o]Mattaniah, and Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Meshullam, Talmon, Akkub, were porters, [p]keeping the ward at the thresholds[3] of the gates.

26 These were in the days of [q]Joiakim the son of Jeshua, the son of Jozadak, and in the days of [r]Nehemiah the governor, and of Ezra the priest the scribe.

27 ¶ And at [s]the dedication[4] of the wall of Jerusalem they sought the Levites [t]out of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, to keep the dedication [u]with gladness, both with [v]thanksgivings, and with singing, with cymbals, psalteries, and with harps.

28 And the sons of the singers gathered themselves together, both out of [w]the plain country round about Jerusalem, and from the villages of [x]Netophathi;

29 Also from [y]the house of Gilgal, and out of the fields of [z]Geba and [a]Azmaveth; for the singers had builded them villages round about Jerusalem.

30 And the priests and the Levites [b]purified themselves, and purified the people, and the gates, and the wall.

31 Then I brought up [c]the princes of Judah upon the wall, and appointed [d]two great companies of them that gave thanks, whereof one went on the right hand upon the wall toward the [e]dung-gate;

32 And after them went Hoshaiah, and half of the princes of Judah,

33 And [f]Azariah, Ezra, and Meshullam,

34 Judah, and Benjamin, and Shemaiah, and Jeremiah;

35 And certain of the priests' sons with[g] trumpets; namely, [h]Zechariah the son of Jonathan, the son of Shemaiah, the son of Mattaniah, the son of Michaiah, the son of Zaccur, the son of Asaph;

36 And his brethren, Shemaiah, and Azarael, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethaneel, and Judah, Hanani, with the musical[i] instruments of David the man of God, and [k]Ezra the scribe before them.

37 And at [l]the fountain-gate, which was over against them, they went up by [m]the stairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the house of David, even unto the [n]water-gate eastward.

38 And [o]the other[1] company of them that gave thanks went over against them, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, from beyond [p]the tower of the furnaces even unto [q]the broad[2] wall;

39 And from above [r]the gate of Ephraim, and above [s]the old gate, and above [t]the fish-gate, and [u]the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Meah, even unto [v]the sheep-gate: and they stood still in [w]the prison-gate.

40 So stood [x]the two companies of them that gave thanks in the house of God, and I, and the half of the rulers with me:

41 And the priests; Eliakim, Maaseiah, Miniamin, Michaiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah, [y]with trumpets;

42 And Maaseiah, and Shemaiah, and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan, and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer: and the singers sang[3] aloud, with Jezrahiah their [z]overseer.

43 Also that day they [a]offered great sacrifices, and rejoiced;[4] for [b]God had made them rejoice with great joy: [c]the wives also and the children rejoiced; so that [d]the joy of Jerusalem was heard even afar off.

Thus they marched in a row opposite ways, in the circuit of the wall; the Levites playing upon instruments, and singing praises to God,—and the people accompanying them on each side, part of them on the wall, and part, it may be supposed, by the side of it. 10 Considering how strict the regulations were which excluded aliens from the sacred precincts, this profanation was so very gross that it is difficult to account for it otherwise than by supposing that, as the temple services were discontinued, and the priests and Levites discontinued their attendance, the temple had come to be looked upon as a common public building.—Pict. Bible.

44 ¶ And at that time were [e]some appointed over [f]the chambers for the treasures, for the offerings, for the first-fruits, and for the tithes, to gather into them, out of the fields of the cities, the portions of[1] the law for the priests and Levites: for Judah rejoiced[2] for the priests and for [g]the Levites that waited.[3]

45 And both [h]the singers and the porters kept the ward of their God, and [i]the ward of the purification,[4] according to the commandment of David, and of Solomon his son.

46 For in the days of David [k]and Asaph of old there were chief of the singers, and songs of praise and thanksgiving unto God.

47 And all Israel, in the days of [l]Zerubbabel, and in the days of Nehemiah, [m]gave the portions of the singers and the porters, every day his portion; and [n]they sanctified[5] holy things unto the Levites, and the Levites sanctified them unto the children of Aaron.

CHAPTER XIII.

Upon the reading of the law separation is made from the mixed multitude, 1—3. Nehemiah at his return causeth the chambers to be cleansed, 4—9. He reformeth the offices in the house of God, 10—14, the violation of the Sabbath, 15—22, and the marriages with strange wives, 23—31.

ON that day they[6] read in the book of Moses in the audience [7]of the people; and therein was found written, that [a]the Ammonite and the [b]Moabite should not come into the congregation of God for ever;

2 Because they met not the children of Israel with bread and with water, but [c]hired Balaam against them, that he should curse them: howbeit [d]our God turned the curse into a blessing.

3 Now it came to pass, [e]when they had heard the law, [f]that they separated from Israel all [g]the mixed multitude.

4 ¶ And before this, [h]Eliashib the priest, having[8] the oversight of the chamber of the house of our God, was [i]allied unto Tobiah:[9]

5 And he had prepared for him [j]a great chamber,[10] where aforetime they laid the meat-offerings, the frankincense, and the vessels, and the tithes of the corn, the new wine, and the oil, which[1] was commanded to be given to the Levites, and the singers, and the porters,) and the offerings of the priests.

6 But [l]in all this time was not I at Jerusalem:[2] for in [m]the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon came I unto the king, and after[3] certain days obtained[4] I leave of the king:

7 And I came to Jerusalem, and [n]understood of the evil that Eliashib did for Tobiah, [o]in preparing him a chamber in the courts of the house of God.

8 And [p]it grieved me sore; therefore [q]I cast forth all the household-stuff of Tobiah out of the chamber.

9 Then I commanded, and [r]they cleansed the chambers; and thither brought I again the vessels of the house of God, with the meat-offering and the frankincense.

10 ¶ And I perceived that [s]the portions of the Levites had not been given them: for the Levites and the singers, that did the work, were fled every one to his field.[5]

11 Then [t]contended I with the rulers, and said, [u]Why is the house of God forsaken? And I gathered them together, and set them in their place.[6]

12 Then [v]brought all Judah the tithe of the corn, and the new wine, and the oil, unto the treasuries.[7]

13 And [w]I made treasurers over the treasuries, [x]Shelemiah the priest, and Zadok the scribe; and of the Levites, [z]Pedaiah; and next[8] to them was Hanan the son of [a]Zaccur, the son of Mattaniah:[b] for they were [c]counted faithful; and their[9] office was [d]to distribute unto their brethren.

14 [e]Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and wipe[10] not out my [11]good deeds that I have done [f]for the house of my God, and for the offices[12] thereof.

15 ¶ In those days saw I in Judah some [g]treading wine-presses on the sabbath,[13] and bringing in sheaves, and lading asses; as also wine, grapes, and figs, and all manner of [h]burdens, which they brought into Jerusalem on the sabbath-day: and [i]I testified against them in the day wherein they sold victuals.

16 There dwelt [k]men of Tyre also therein, which brought fish, and all manner of ware, and sold on the sabbath unto the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem.

17 Then [l]I contended with the nobles[1] of Judah, and said unto them, What evil thing is this that ye do, and profane the sabbath-day?

18 [m]Did not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city? yet [n]ye bring more wrath upon Israel, by profaning the sabbath.

19 And it came to pass, that, when the gates of Jerusalem [o]began to be dark before the sabbath, [p]I commanded that the gates should be shut, and charged that they should not be opened till after the sabbath; and some of my servants[2] set I at the gates, that there should no burden be brought in on the sabbath-day.

20 So the merchants, and sellers of all kind of ware, lodged without Jerusalem once or twice.

21 Then [q]I testified against them, and said unto them, Why lodge ye about[3] the wall? if ye do so again, [r]I will lay hands on you. From that time forth came they no more on the sabbath.

22 And [s]I commanded the Levites, that they should [t]cleanse themselves, and that they should come and keep the gates, to [u]sanctify the sabbath-day. [v]Remember me, O my God, concerning this also, and [w]spare[4] me according to the greatness[5] of thy mercy.

23 ¶ In those days also saw I Jews [x]that had married[6] wives of [y]Ashdod, of [z]Ammon, and of Moab:

24 And their children spake half in the speech of Ashdod, and could[7] not speak in the Jews' language, but according to the language of [8]each people.

25 And [a]I contended with them, [b]and cursed[9] them, and [c]smote certain of them, and [d]plucked off their [10]hair, and [e]made them swear by God, saying, [f]Ye shall not give your daughters unto their sons, nor take their

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAH.

THIS book of Nehemiah, like that of Ezra which precedes, records the fulfilment of the promises made by Jehovah to his people, respecting their settlement in their own land after the seventy year's captivity in Babylon, and furnishes many striking illustrations of an all-wise and all-powerful overruling providence. Nehemiah arrived at Jerusalem thirteen years after Ezra had received his appointment from the king. This was in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes Longimanus, about 445 years before Christ. By a commission from Artaxerxes he superseded Ezra in the government of Judah and Jerusalem. 'Of Nehemiah the Jews speak as one of the greatest men of their nation. His concern for his country, manifested by such unequivocal marks, entitles him to the character of the first patriot that ever lived. In the course of the divine providence he was a captive in Babylon, but there his excellencies were so apparent, that he was chosen by the Persian king to fill an office the most respectable and the most confidential in the whole court. Here he lived in ease and affluence; he lacked no manner of thing that was good; and here he might have continued to live in the same affluence and in the same confidence: but he could enjoy neither, so long as his people were distressed, the sepulchres of his fathers trodden under foot, the altars of his God overturned, and his worship either totally neglected or corrupted. He sought the peace of Jerusalem, and he prayed to God for it; and was willing to sacrifice wealth, ease, safety, and even life itself, if he might be the instrument of restoring the desolations of Israel. And God, who saw the desire of his heart, and knew the excellencies with which he had endowed him, granted his request, and gave him the high honour of restoring the desolated city of his ancestors, and the pure worship of their God.'—Clarke.

Nehemiah having obtained from the king full authority to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem, immediately after his arrival set himself to the furtherance of this work. He met with cordial co-operation on the part of the people, whose zeal on this occasion should surely be an example and incitement to all true Christians, to unite their efforts in healing the breaches and building up the walls of the spiritual Jerusalem. As was to be expected, however, the good work called forth opposition. The adversaries were not idle. They ridiculed the work as a hopeless undertaking; and when, notwithstanding their ridicule, the walls were seen rising up with speed, they had recourse to plotting and prepared for violence. Thus it has always been with the enemies of the church. Infidelity has launched forth her sharp weapons of ridicule; persecution has laid her stratagems, and whetted her sword. But 'he that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh, the Lord shall have them in derision.'

We are reminded, however, that outward zeal for the prosperity of the church may be manifested by those who neglect personal holiness, and overlook many of the high duties of religion. Among those who engaged thus ardently in rebuilding the city walls were many who oppressed the poor. 'And there was a great cry of the people and of their wives against their brethren the Jews,' ch. v. 1. Let us never suppose that labours or sacrifices in the cause of righteousness will make up for the absence of personal piety or neglect of the duties which we owe to our brethren. The one without the other will only bring scandal on our profession; nor is there any thing which more exposes religion to the reproach of its enemies than the worldliness and hard-heartedness of the professors of it.

We cannot but admire the great anxiety displayed both by Nehemiah and by Ezra to have the means of religious instruction put within the reach of all the people. 'It being their ignorance which had led them into their transgressions, and their ignorance having been occasioned by their not having heard the law of God read to them; to prevent this for the future, they had from this time the most learned of the Levites and scribes that were skilled in the law to read it to them in every city; which, no doubt, was at first done by gathering the people together in the most wide street, where all might the better hear it: but the inconvenience of this being soon felt, especially in the winter and stormy seasons of the year, they erected houses or tabernacles to meet in, and these were the original synagogues among them. That they had no synagogues before the Babylonish captivity is plain, not only from the silence of the scriptures of the Old Testament, but also from several passages in them, which evidently prove that there were none in those days; for it is a common saying among the Jews, that when there is no book kept of the law, there can be no synagogues. . .Many texts of scripture tell us that the book of the law was very rare through all Judah before the Babylonish captivity. When Jehoshaphat sent teachers through all Judah to instruct the people in the law of God, they carried the law with them; which they would not have done if there had been copies of the law in those cities where they went, which there would have been had there been synagogues in them. . .When Hilkiah found the law in the temple, neither he nor the king Josiah would have been surprised at it, had books of the law been common in those times. . .From hence it plainly follows that there could be no synagogues among the Jews till after the Babylonish captivity; and it is most probable that Ezra's reading to them the law, and the necessity which they perceived there was of having it oftener read to them, was the occasion of their erecting them after their captivity in the manner I have related: and most learned men are of this opinion, and some of the Jews themselves say as much.'—Prideaux. It has been remarked that the establishment of those synagogues may have been one means of preventing the Jews from falling into idolatry, to which, before this time, they were so awfully prone; and, without question, no more effectual method could have been adopted for thoroughly instructing the great body of the people. Let it be our endeavour and our earnest prayer, that we may be enabled to appreciate the surpassing privileges which we enjoy. The word of God's completed revelation is in our hands. Means of instruction, and opportunities of worship are within our reach. Let us not receive the grace of God in vain. Oh let us remember, that to whom much is given, of them much shall be required!

E S T H E R.

THE author of this book is unknown, some ascribing it to Ezra, some to Esther and Mordecai, and others to the united labours of the great synagogue. It is a remarkable circumstance that the name of God does not occur throughout the book; and, chiefly from this fact, some of the Christian fathers were led to question its authenticity. By the Jews, however, it has ever been received with peculiar veneration; and the institution of the feast of PURIM, a festival commemorative of the great deliverance which this book records, and, till this day observed by the Jewish nation, is of itself a convincing proof of the reality of the history, and of the genuineness of the book, of Esther. It has been suggested, as explanatory of the strange omission of the name of God, that the book may have been chiefly an extract from the annals of the reign of the Persian monarch, and there are circumstances which seem to favour the conjecture.

It is generally agreed that the Ahasuerus of this book is Artaxerxes Longimanus, the monarch who reigned during the time of Ezra and Nehemiah, so that the influence of queen Esther accounts, in some measure, for the great favour shown to the Jews by that king. The narrative is peculiarly interesting, furnishing a most striking illustration of Divine Providence. In every event which it records the finger of God is conspicuous. It relates the elevation of Esther from the condition of a Jewish captive to that of the favoured consort of the Persian monarch—the deliverance, by her instrumentality, of the whole Jewish nation, from the merciless machinations of Haman; and the destruction of that oppressor and his associates, by the very means which they had themselves devised for the extirpation of the Jewish race. It forcibly confirms that observation of the Psalmist, 'The wicked plotteth against the just, and gnasheth upon him with his teeth. The Lord shall laugh at him, for he seeth that his day is coming,' Ps. xxxvii. 12, 13; and that declaration of Solomon, 'Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished; but the seed of the righteous shall be delivered,' Pr. xi. 21.

CHAPTER I.

Ahasuerus maketh royal feasts, 1—9. Vashti refuseth to come when sent for by the king, 10—12. Ahasuerus, by the counsel of Memucan, maketh the decree of men's sovereignty over their wives, 13—22.

2 That in those days, when the king Ahasuerus [d]sat on the throne of his kingdom, which was in [e]Shushan the palace,

3 In the third year of his reign, [f]he made a feast unto all his princes and his servants; the power [g]of Persia and Media, [h]the nobles and princes of the provinces, being before him:

5 And when these days were expired, the king made a feast unto all the people that were present[4] in Shushan the palace, both unto great and small, [m]seven days, in the court of the garden of the king's palace;

1 Various have been the opinions of learned men concerning the king of Persia who is here called Ahasuerus. The most probable is that of Dean Prideaux, who supposes him to have been Artaxerxes Longimanus. The extent of his dominions, and his liberality & kindness to the Jews, favour this supposition.

12 But the queen Vashti [w]refused[2] to come at the king's commandment by[3] his chamberlains: therefore [x]was the king very wroth, and his anger [y]burned in him.

15 What[5] shall we do unto the queen Vashti according to law, because she hath not performed the commandment of the king Ahasuerus by the chamberlains?

16 And Memucan[6] answered before the king and the princes, Vashti the queen hath not [d]done wrong to the king only, but also to all the princes, and to all the people that are in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus.

17 For this deed of the queen shall come abroad unto all women, so that they shall [e]despise their husbands in their eyes, when it shall be reported, The king Ahasuerus commanded Vashti the queen to be brought in before him, but she came not.

18 Likewise shall the ladies of Persia and Media say this day unto all the king's princes, which have heard of the deed of the queen. Thus shall there arise too much contempt and wrath.

19 If it[7] please the king, let there go a royal commandment from[8] him, and let it be written among the laws of the Persians and the Medes, that it[9] be not altered,[10] that Vashti come no more before king Ahasuerus; and let the king give her royal estate unto another[11] [f]that is better than she.

20 And when the king's decree, which he shall make, shall be published throughout[g] all his empire, (for it is great,) [h]all the wives shall give to their husbands honour, both to great and small.

21 And the saying pleased[1] the king and the princes; and the king did according to the word of Memucan:

22 For he sent letters into all the king's provinces, [i]into every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language, [k]that every man should bear rule[2] in his own house; and that it[3] should be published[4] [l]according to the language of every people.

CHAPTER II.

Out of the choice of virgins a queen is to be chosen, 1—4. Mordecai the nursing-father of Esther, 5—7. Esther is preferred to Hegai the rest, 8—11. The manner of purification, and going in to the king, 12—14. Esther best pleasing him, is made queen, 15—20. Mordecai, discovering a treason, is recorded in the chronicles, 21—23.

AFTER these things, when the wrath of king Ahasuerus was appeased, [a]he remembered[5] Vashti, and [b]what she had done, and what was decreed against her.

2 Then said the [c]king's servants that ministered unto him, [d]Let there be fair young virgins sought for the king:

3 And let the king appoint officers [e]in all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather[6] together all the fair young virgins unto Shushan the palace, to the house of the women, unto the[7] custody of [f]Hege the king's chamberlain, keeper of the women, and let [g]their things for purification be given them:

4 And let the maiden which pleaseth the king be queen instead of Vashti. And [h]the thing pleased the king; and he did so.

5 ¶ Now in [i]Shushan the palace there was a [k]certain Jew,[8] whose name was Mordecai, the son of Jair, [l]the son of Shimei, the son of Kish, a Benjamite;

2 It would seem from a statement in Herodotus, that on some particular occasions, it was customary among the Persians to violate their rule of keeping the females of the harem strictly secluded. The command of the king, on this occasion, however, was the effect of intoxication, and while we may perhaps admit that, according to the established customs of the East, the refusal of Vashti was improper, we cannot but admire the sensitiveness and modesty which shrunk from exposure to a company of revellers.

4 We have frequent allusions to these seven princes, or, as they are elsewhere styled, the king's seven counsellors. Some trace their origin to the time and advice of Daniel; but it is probable that the first of them were the coadjutors of Darius Hytaspes, in overthrowing the usurper Smerdis, who, according to previous stipulation, were rewarded with the most distinguished honours. They were the king's chief ministers, and the expounders of the laws of the empire.

8 ¶ So it came to pass, when the as heard, and when many maidens ere gathered together unto Shushan hat Esther[1] was brought also unto the ing's house, to the custody of Hegai, eeper of the women.

9 And the maiden pleased him, and he[r] obtained kindness of him: and he peedily gave her [s]her things for purication, with such[2] things as belonged o her, and seven maidens, which were meet to be given her, out of the king's ouse: and he preferred[3] her and her aids unto the best place of the house
f the women.

10 Esther [t]had not showed her peole, nor her kindred:[4] [u]for Mordecai ad charged her that she should not ow it.

11 And Mordecai [v]walked every day efore the court of the women's house, o know[5] how[6] Esther did, and what ould become of her.

12 ¶ Now, when every maid's turn as come [w]to go in to king Ahasuerus, fter that she had been twelve months, ccording to the manner of the women, or so were the days of their purications accomplished, to wit, [x]six onths with oil of myrrh, and six onths with sweet odours, and with her things for the purifying of the omen,)

13 Then thus came every maiden nto the king; whatsoever she desired as given her to go with her out of he house of the women unto the ing's house.

14 In the evening she went, and on he morrow she returned into the second ouse[7] of the women, to the custody
f Shaashgaz the king's chamberlain, hich kept the concubines: she came n unto the king no more, except the ing [y]delighted in her, and that [z]she ere called by name.

15 ¶ Now, when the turn of Esther, he daughter of Abihail the uncle of Mordecai, ([a]who had taken her for his aughter,) was come to go in unto the ing, she required nothing but what Hegai the king's chamberlain, the keeper of the women, appointed: and [b]Esther obtained favour in the sight of all them that looked upon her.

16 So Esther was taken unto king Ahasuerus, into his house-royal,[1] in [c]the tenth month, (which is the month Tebeth,) in [d]the seventh year of his reign.

17 And the king loved Esther above all the women, and she obtained grace and favour[2] in[3] his sight more than all the virgins; [e]so that he set the royal crown upon her head, and made her queen instead of Vashti.

18 Then the king [f]made a great feast unto all his princes and his servants, even Esther's feast: and he made a release[4] to the provinces,[5] and [g]gave gifts, according to the state of the king.

19 And when [h]the virgins were gathered together the second[6] time, then Mordecai [i][7]sat in the king's gate.

20 Esther [k]had not yet shewed her kindred nor her people, as Mordecai had charged her: for Esther did the commandment of Mordecai, like as when she was brought up with him.

21 ¶ In those days, (while Mordecai sat in the king's gate,) two of the king's chamberlains, [l]Bigthan and

1 It has been wondered how Mordecai could consent to Esther's becoming the wife or concubine of a heathen prince, contrary to the law of Moses; but it does not seem to have been left to the choice of either Mordecai or Esther, and it would have been unavailing to have opposed the public edict of Ahasuerus; according to the Targum, indeed, 'she was brought by violence.'

7 The house of the concubines. The Persian monarch seems to have had but one wife, at lest but one in chief favour and esteem with him, though he must have had many secondary wives, or concubines. This was the name of every one that was taken from among the virgins, (who had a separate house for themselves,) and conducted to the king's bed; where having passed a night, she returned no more to the virgin's apartments, but was the next morning, received into the house of the concubines, and there treated in the state and port of one of the king's wives; for such they were accounted. No man was permitted to marry them, as long as the king lived; and upon his demise, they generally fell to his successor. Of these Darius Nothus is reckoned to have had no less than 360.—Poole.

1 She seems not to have been sent to the house of the concubines, but retained by the king in his own house. A considerable period, however, elapsed from the degrading of Vashti, to the elevation of Esther. Vashti was dishonoured in the third, and Esther was made queen in the seventh year of Ahasuerus' reign. Perhaps Esther may have been treated by the king as his chief concubine for a time, before he had resolved to make her the successor of Vashti.

reverenced Haman; for the king had so commanded concerning him: but Mordecai [f] bowed not, nor did him reverence.

3 Then the king's servants, which were in the king's gate, said unto Mordecai, [g] Why transgressest thou the king's commandment?

4 Now it came to pass, [h] when they spake daily unto him, and he hearkened not unto them, [i] that they told Haman, to see whether Mordecai's matters would stand: for [k] he had told them that he was a Jew.[1]

5 And when Haman saw [l] that Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence, then was Haman [m] full of wrath.

6 And he thought scorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone; for they had shewed him the people of Mordecai; wherefore Haman [n] sought to destroy all the Jews that were throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus, even the people of Mordecai.

7 ¶ In [o] the first month, (that is, the month Nisan,) [p] in the twelfth year of king Ahasuerus, [q] they cast Pur,[2] that is, the lot, before Haman, from day to day, and from month to month, to the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar.[r]

8 ¶ And Haman said unto king Ahasuerus, There is a certain people scattered [s] abroad, and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of thy kingdom; and [t] their laws are diverse from all people, neither keep they the king's laws: therefore it is not for[3] the king's profit to suffer them.

9 If it please the king, let it be written that[4] they may be destroyed; and I will pay[5] [u] ten thousand talents[6] of silver to the hands of those that have the charge of the business, to bring it into the king's treasuries.

10 And the king [v] took his ring[7] from his hand, and gave it unto Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the Jews' enemy.[8]

11 And the king said unto Haman, The silver is given to thee, the people also, [w] to do with them as it seemeth good to thee.

12 Then were the king's scribes[9] called on the thirteenth day of the first month, and there was written (according to all that Haman had commanded) unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors that were over every province, and to the rulers of every people of every province, [x] according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language; [y] in the name of king Ahasuerus was it written, and [z] sealed with the king's ring.[1]

13 And the letters were sent [a] by posts into all the king's provinces, to destroy, to kill,[2] and to cause to perish, all Jews, [b] both young and old, little children and women, [c] in one day, even upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, (which is the month Adar,) and to take [d] the spoil of them for a prey.

14 The [e] copy of the writing, for a commandment to be given in every province, was published unto all people, that they should be ready against that day.

15 The posts went out, being [f] hastened by the king's commandment; and the decree was given in Shushan the palace. And the king and Haman [g] sat down to drink; but [h] the city Shushan was perplexed.

CHAPTER IV.

WHEN Mordecai perceived [a] all that was done, Mordecai [b] rent his clothes, and put on sackcloth [c] with ashes, and went out into the midst of the city, and [d] cried with a loud and a bitter cry;

2 And came even before the king's gate: for none might enter[3] into the king's gate clothed with sackcloth.

3 And [e] in every province, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, there was [f] great mourning among the Jews, and fasting, and [g] weeping, and wailing; and many[4] lay in sackcloth and ashes.

4 ¶ So Esther's maids and her chamberlains[5] came and told[6] it her. Then was the queen exceedingly grieved; and

2 The Septuagint preserves a clause which assists in explaining the meaning of this verse. It reads thus: 'They cast Pur, that is the lot, before Haman, from day to day, and from month to month, (that he might in one day destroy the race of Mordecai, and the lot fell for the fourteenth) of the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar.' The practice of casting lots to discover a lucky day for any enterprize was, & still is, very common in the East, and particularly among the Persians. Without this, even the most trifling undertaking will not be commenced. By the providence of God, who determines the lot, no favourable intimation was given till the twelfth month, & thus opportunity was afforded to frustrate Haman's cruel designs.

1 The Persians have stones in their rings, which answer the purpose of seals. On these their names are frequently engraved, and the impression serves for their signature. It was probably for the purpose of sealing this writing that the king had previously given Haman his ring, by the use of which the sanction of the royal authority would be given to his bloody mandate.

2 Without some knowledge of the human heart, and the history of mankind, we should find a difficulty in conceiving, how any prince could be induced to consent to such a horrid & ruinous proposal, without objection or hesitation. It would be absurd to assign a reason for so infatuated a measure. But when an arbitrary monarch has become the dupe of a wicked favourite, it has always been observed, that the first object of his life, the chief, and almost the only use that he makes of his power, is to gratify and aggrandise him; and the lives of his subjects, or the interests of empires, have, on such occasions, often been wantonly sacrificed to the avarice, the ambition, the revenge, or the caprice of a worthless minion.—Scott.

she sent raiment to clothe Mordecai, and to take away his sackcloth from him: [h]but he received it not.

5 Then called Esther for Hatach, [i]one of the king's chamberlains, whom he had appointed[1] to attend upon her, and gave him a commandment to Mordecai, [k]to know what it was, and why it was.

6 So Hatach went forth to Mordecai unto the street of the city, which was before the king's gate:

7 And Mordecai told him of [l]all that had happened unto him, and of the sum of the money that Haman had promised to pay to the king's treasuries for the Jews, to destroy them:

8 Also he gave him [m]the copy of the writing of the decree that was given at Shushan to destroy them, to shew it unto Esther, and to declare it unto her, and [n]to charge her that she should go in unto the king, [o]to make supplication unto him, and [p]to make request before him for her people.

9 And Hatach came and told Esther the words of Mordecai.

10 ¶ Again Esther spake unto Hatach, and gave him commandment unto Mordecai:

11 All the king's servants, and the people of the king's provinces, do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come unto the king into the[p] inner court,[2] who is not called, there is [q]one law of his to put him to death, except such to whom [r]the king shall hold out the golden sceptre, that he may live: [s]but I have not been called to come in unto the king these thirty days.

12 And they told to Mordecai Esther's words.

13 Then Mordecai commanded to answer Esther, [t]Think not with thyself that thou shalt escape[3] in the king's house more than all the Jews.

14 For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, [u]then shall there enlargement[4] and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but [v]thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed: and who knoweth [w]whether thou art come to the kingdom[5] [x]for such a time as this?

2 The Persian sovereigns affected the highest degrees of majesty, even to the assuming of divine honours. No man nor woman dared to appear unveiled before them without hazarding their lives. Into the inner chamber of the harem, no person ever entered but the king and the woman he had chosen to call thither. Here was Esther's difficulty; and that difficulty was now increased by the circumstance of her not having been sent for to the king's bed for thirty days. Some have supposed that this law forbidding all to enter the inner court on pain of death, had been suggested by Haman, the more effectually to secure his own influence. But it was much more ancient. Herodotus states that this had been a law from the time of Dejoces king of Media, for the security of the king's person. It is possible, however, that the exclusion of Esther, for the period mentioned, may have been the result of his wicked intrigues; and it is not to be wondered at, if in the circumstances, Esther was afraid that the king's love for her had begun to cool, and that her petition might be rejected.

The circumstance that Esther was seen by the king, she being in the court, while he was seated in the hall, is explained by the fact, that, in the Persian palaces, the principal apartment is open in front, so that the king, from the upper end of the hall, commands a view of the whole court.

The form of expression has evident reference to the custom among the ancient Persian kings, in bestowing grants to their favourites, which they did by charges upon the revenues of particular provinces. sight of the king, and if it please the king to grant my petition, and to perform[1] my request, let the king and Haman come to the banquet that I shall prepare for them, and I will do to-morrow[n] as the king hath said.[2]

9 ¶ Then went Haman forth that day [o]joyful and with a glad heart: but when Haman saw Mordecai in the king's gate, that [p]he stood not up, nor moved for him, [q]he was full of indignation against Mordecai.

10 Nevertheless Haman [r]refrained himself: and when he came home, he sent and called[3] for his friends, and Zeresh[s] his wife.

11 And Haman told them of [t]the glory of his riches, and [u]the multitude of his children, and all the things wherein the king had promoted him, and [v]how he had advanced him above the princes and servants of the king.

12 Haman said moreover, Yea, Esther the queen did let no man come in with the king unto the banquet that she had prepared but myself; and [w]to-morrow am I invited unto her also with the king.

13 Yet [x]all this availeth me nothing,[4] so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate.

14 ¶ Then [y]said Zeresh his wife and all his friends unto him, [z]Let a gallows[5] be made of fifty cubits high, and to-morrow [a]speak thou unto the king that Mordecai may be hanged thereon; then [b]go thou in merrily with the king unto the banquet. And [c]the thing pleased Haman; and [d]he caused the gallows[6] to be made.

CHAPTER VI.

Ahasuerus, hearing read in the chronicles the good service done by Mordecai, taketh care for his reward, 1—3. Haman, coming to see that Mordecai might be hanged, unawares giveth counsel that he might do him honour, 4—11. Complaining of his misfortune, his friends foretell him of his fall, 12—14.

ON [a]that night could[7] not the king sleep;[8] and he commanded to bring the [b]book of records of the Chronicles;[9] and they were read before the king.

2 And it was found written, that Mordecai had told of [c]Bigthana and Teresh, two of the king's chamberlains, the keepers of the door,[10] who sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

3 And the king said, [d]What honour and dignity hath been done to Mordecai for this? Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, [e]There is nothing done for him.

4 ¶ And the king said, [f]Who is in the court? (Now Haman was come into [g]the outward court of the king's house, [h]to speak unto the king to hang[1] Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him.)

5 And the king's servants said unto him, Behold, Haman standeth in the court. And the king said, Let him come in.

6 So Haman came in. And the king said unto him, What shall be done unto the man whom[2] the king delighteth to honour? (Now Haman thought in his heart, [i]To whom would the king delight to do honour more than to myself?)

7 And Haman answered the king, For the man whom[3] the king delighteth to honour,

8 Let the royal apparel[4] be brought which the king useth to wear, and [k]the horse that the king rideth upon, and the crown-royal[5] which is set upon his head:

9 And let this apparel and horse be delivered to the hand of one of the king's most noble princes, that they may array the man withal whom the king delighteth to honour, and [6]bring him on horseback through the street of the city, and [l]proclaim before him, Thus shall it be done to the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

10 Then the king said to Haman, [m]Make haste, and take the apparel and the horse, as thou hast said, and do even so to Mordecai the Jew, that sitteth at the king's gate: let[7] nothing fail of all that thou hast spoken.

11 Then [n]took Haman the apparel, and the horse, [o]and arrayed Mordecai, and brought him on horse-back through the street of the city, and proclaimed before him, Thus shall it be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

12 ¶ And Mordecai [p]came again to the king's gate: but Haman [q]hasted to his house mourning, and [r]having his head covered.[8]

6 In former times, the Jews were accustomed to burn Haman in effigy, and with him a wooden cross,—which they pretended to be in memory of that which he erected for the suspension of Mordecai, but which was, in fact, to deride the Christian religion. The emperors Justinian and Theodosius abolished it by their edicts.

5 Interpreters are greatly divided, whether what is called here the crown-royal be not rather an ornament worn on the head of the horse, than what may be called the royal crown. The original may be understood either way. The latter, however, we consider the more probable. It was a capital crime to wear the turban or crown which the king had worn, as well as any other part of his dress. It is narrated by Arrian, that when Alexander was sailing on the Euphrates, his turban fell amongsome reeds. One of the watermen swam in to fetch it, and having put it on his head, as the only means of securing it, the king, it is said, gave him a talent of silver for his zeal, and afterwards ordered his head to be struck off, for presuming to put on the royal diadem.

13 And Haman told [s]Zeresh his wife and all his friends every thing that had befallen him. Then [t]said his wise[1] men and Zeresh his wife unto him, [u]If Mordecai be of the seed of the Jews, before whom thou hast begun to fall, thou shalt not prevail against him, [v]but shalt surely fall before him.

14 And while they were yet talking with him, came the king's chamberlains, and [w]hasted to bring Haman unto the banquet that Esther had prepared.

CHAPTER VII.

Esther, entertaining the king and Haman, maketh suit for her own life and her people's, 1—4. She accuseth Haman, 5, 6. The king in his anger, being told of the gallows which Haman had made for Mordecai, causeth him to be hanged thereon, 7—10.

SO the king and Haman came to banquet[2] with Esther the queen.

2 And [a]the king said again unto Esther on the second day, at the banquet of wine, What is thy petition, queen Esther? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? and it shall be performed, even to the half of the kingdom.

3 Then Esther the queen answered and said, If I have found favour in thy sight, O king, and if it please the king, [b]let my life[3] be given me at my petition, and [c]my people at my request:

4 For [d]we are sold, I and my people, to be destroyed,[4] to be slain, and to perish: [e]but if we had been sold for bond-men and bond-women I had held my tongue, although [f]the enemy could not countervail the king's damage.[5]

5 ¶ Then the king Ahasuerus answered and said unto Esther the queen, Who[g] is he, and where is he, that[6] durst presume in his heart to do so?

6 And Esther said, The[7] adversary and enemy is [h]this wicked[8] Haman. Then Haman [i]was afraid before[9] the king and the queen.

7 ¶ And the king, arising from the banquet of wine [k]in his wrath, went into the palace-garden: and [l]Haman stood up to make request for his life to Esther the queen; [m]for he saw that there was evil[10] determined against him by the king.

8 Then the king returned out of the palace-garden into the place of the banquet of wine; and Haman was fallen upon [n]the bed[1] whereon Esther was. Then said the king, Will he force the queen also before[2] me in the house? As the word went out of the king's mouth, they [o]covered[3] Haman's face.

9 And [p]Harbonah, [q]one of the chamberlains, said before the king, [r]Behold also, the gallows,[4] fifty cubits high, which Haman had made for Mordecai, [s]who had spoken good for the king, standeth in the house of Haman. Then the king said, [t]Hang him thereon.

10 So they hanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai. [u]Then was the king's wrath pacified.

CHAPTER VIII.

Mordecai is advanced, 1, 2. Esther maketh suit to reverse Haman's letters against the Jews, 3—6. Ahasuerus granteth to the Jews to defend themselves, 7—14. Mordecai's honour, and the Jews' joy, 15—17.

ON that day did the king Ahasuerus [a]give the house of Haman, the Jews' enemy, unto Esther the queen: and Mordecai [b]came before the king; for Esther had told what he was unto her.

2 And the king took off [c]his ring, which he had taken from Haman, and gave it unto Mordecai. And [d]Esther set Mordecai over the house of Haman.

3 ¶ And Esther spake yet again before the king, and [e]fell down at his feet, and besought[5] him with tears to put away [f]the mischief of Haman the Agagite, and his device that he had devised against the Jews.

4 Then the king [g]held out the golden sceptre towards Esther. So Esther arose, and stood before the king,

5 And said, If it please the king, [h]and if I have found favour in his sight, and the thing seem right before the king, and [i]I be pleasing in his eyes, let it be written to reverse the letters[6] devised by Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, which[7] he wrote to destroy the Jews which are in all the king's provinces:

6 For [k]how can I endure[8] to see [l]the evil that shall come unto my people? or how can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred?

1 It was a custom of the Persians, as well as other nations, to sit or rather to lie upon beds, when they ate or drank; and therefore, when Haman fell down at the feet of Esther, and (as the manner was among the Greeks and Romans, and not improbably among the Persians,) embraced her knees, the king might pretend that he was offering violence to the queen's chastity. Not that he believed that this was his intention, but, in his furious passion he turned every thing to the worst sense, and made use of it to aggravate his crime.—Patrick.

7 ¶ Then the king Ahasuerus said unto Esther the queen, and to Mordecai the Jew, [m]Behold, I have given Esther the house of Haman, and [n]him they have hanged upon the gallows, because he laid his hand upon the Jews.

8 Write ye also for the Jews, as it liketh you, [o]in the king's name, and seal it with the king's ring: for the writing which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, may[p] no man reverse.[1]

9 Then were [q]the king's scribes called at that time in the third month, (that is, the month Sivan,) on the three and twentieth day thereof; and it was written (according to all that Mordecai commanded) unto the Jews, [r]and to the lieutenants, and the deputies and rulers of the provinces which are from India unto Ethiopia, an hundred twenty and seven provinces, unto every province according to the writing thereof, and unto every people after their language, and to the Jews according to their writing, [s]and according to their language.

10 And he wrote [t]in the king Ahasuerus's name, and sealed it with the king's ring; and sent letters [u]by posts[2] on horseback, and riders on mules, camels, and [v]young dromedaries:

11 Wherein the king granted the Jews which were in every city to gather[w] themselves together, and to stand for their life, to destroy, to slay, and to cause to perish, all the power of the people and province that would assault them, both little ones and women, [x]and to take the spoil of them for a prey,

12 Upon [y]one day, in all the provinces of king Ahasuerus, namely, upon[z] the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar.

13 The copy of the writing, for a commandment to be given in every province, was published[3] unto all people, and that the Jews should be ready against that day to [a]avenge themselves on their enemies.

14 So the posts that rode upon mules and camels went out, [b]being hastened and pressed on by the king's commandment. And the decree was given at [c]Shushan the palace.

15 ¶ And Mordecai went out from the presence of the king in [d]royal apparel of blue[2] and white, and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and purple: and [e]the city of Shushan rejoiced and was glad.

16 The [f]Jews had [g]light, and gladness, and joy, and honour.

17 And in every province, and in every city, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, the Jews had joy and gladness, [h]a feast and a good day. And [i]many of the people of the land became[3] Jews; [k]for the fear of the Jews fell upon them.

CHAPTER IX.

The Jews (the rulers, for fear of Mordecai, helping them) slay their enemies, with the ten sons of Haman, 1—11. Ahasuerus, at the request of Esther, granteth another day of slaughter, and causeth Haman's sons to be hanged, 12—19. The two days of Purim are made festival, 20—32.

NOW, [a]in the twelfth month, (that is, the month Adar,) on the thirteenth day of the same, when the king's commandment and his decree drew near to be put in execution, in the day that the enemies of the Jews [b]hoped to have power over them, (though it was turned to the contrary, that the Jews had rule over them that hated them,)

2 The Jews [d]gathered themselves together in their cities, throughout all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, to lay[4] hand on such [e]as sought their hurt: and no man could withstand them; for [f]the fear[5] of them fell upon all people.

3 And all [g]the rulers of the provinces, and the lieutenants, and the deputies, and officers[6] of the king, helped the Jews; because [h]the fear of Mordecai fell upon them.

4 For Mordecai was great in the king's house, and [i]his fame[7] went out throughout all the provinces: for this man Mordecai [k]waxed greater and greater.

5 Thus the Jews [l]smote all their enemies with [m]the stroke of the sword, and slaughter, and destruction, and did what[8] they would unto those that hated them.

1 Whatever had passed the royal signet could never be revoked; and this was the reason why the king was obliged not to reverse but to give a contradictory decree,—that, if the Jews, pursuant to the first decree, were assaulted, they might legitimately, by virtue of the second, defend themselves, slay their enemies, and even take the spoil. The maxim in our government, that no act can be so framed but that the same authority which enacted it may repeal it, is better suited to the state of human nature; for no human wisdom can foresee all the effects of any regulation till experience has evinced them. Nothing, indeed, could more strikingly show the absurdity of this law of the Persians than that the king should now be forced to allow a civil war.

2 The idea, it is said, of establishing posts, originated with Cyrus. The expedition with which the king was enabled by his posts to obtain intelligence from, and forward edicts to, the remotest parts of his empire, astonished the ancient world. Their admiration resembled that with which early European travellers regarded the posting establishments of the Mongol empire, which seems to have been similar to that of the ancient Persians. Respecting these the following particulars are quoted by the editor of the Pictorial Bible. From the capital, roads extended to every part of the empire, having post-houses, at every twenty-five or thirty miles; there were 10,000 of these stations, with 200,000 horses. The post rode 200 and sometimes 250 miles in a day. There were other stations, consisting of a few dwellings, three or four miles asunder, occupied by runners or foot-posts, who, being girded, ran as fast as horses.

4 As the Jews were not charged with exceeding the limits assigned them in the king's edict, it may be concluded that they assaulted none, except such as appeared in arms against them. The 16th verse, indeed, seems plainly to indicate that they stood on the defensive. It is not unnatural to suppose that Haman had a great party throughout the empire, who, enraged at his fall, would be unable to suppress their hatred against those who had been the occasion of it.

6 And in [n]Shushan the palace the Jews slew and destroyed five hundred men.

7 And Parshandatha, and Dalphon, and Aspatha,

8 And Poratha, and Adalia, and Aridatha,

9 And Parmashta, and Arisai, and Aridai, and Vajezatha,

10 The [o]ten sons of Haman the son of Hammedatha, the [p]enemy of the Jews, slew they; but [q]on the spoil[1] laid they not their hand.

11 On that day the number of those that were slain in Shushan the palace was[2] brought before the king.

12 ¶ And the king said unto Esther the queen, The Jews have slain and destroyed five hundred men in Shushan[3] the palace, and the ten sons of Haman; what have they done in the rest of the king's provinces? now, what[r] is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee; or what is thy request further? and it shall be done.

13 Then said Esther, If it please the king, let it be granted to the Jews which are in Shushan to do to-morrow also [s]according unto this day's decree, and let[4] Haman's ten sons be hanged[5] upon the gallows.

14 And the king commanded it so to be done: and the decree[6] was given at Shushan; and they hanged Haman's ten sons.

15 For the Jews that were in Shushan [t]gathered themselves together on the fourteenth day also of the month Adar, and slew three hundred men at Shushan: [u]but on the prey they laid not their hand.

16 But the other Jews that were in the king's provinces gathered themselves together, and [v]stood for their lives, and had rest from their enemies, and slew of their foes seventy and five[7] thousand (but they laid not their hands on the prey)

17 On the thirteenth day of the month Adar; and on the fourteenth day of[8] the same rested they, and made it a day of feasting and gladness.

18 But the Jews that were at Shushan assembled together [w]on the thirteenth day thereof, and on the fourteenth thereof; and on the fifteenth day of the same they rested, and made it a day of feasting and gladness.

19 Therefore the Jews of the villages, that dwelt in the unwalled towns, made the fourteenth day of the month Adar a day of [x]gladness and feasting, and a good day, and of sending portions one to another.

20 ¶ And Mordecai [y]wrote[1] these things, and sent letters unto all the Jews that were [z]in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, both nigh and far,

21 To establish this among them, that they should keep the fourteenth day of the month Adar, and the fifteenth day of the same, yearly,

22 As [a]the days wherein the Jews rested from their enemies, and the month which was turned unto them [b]from sorrow to joy, and from mourning into a good day; that they should make them days of feasting and joy, and of [c]sending portions[2] one to another, and gifts to the poor.

23 And the Jews undertook to do as they had begun, and as Mordecai had written unto them;

24 Because Haman the son of Hammedatha, the Agagite, [d]the enemy of all the Jews, had devised against the Jews to destroy them, and had cast [e]Pur (that is, the lot) to consume[3] them, and to destroy them;

25 But when[4] Esther came before the king, he commanded by letters, that his wicked device, which he devised against the Jews, should [f]return upon his own head, and that he and his sons should be hanged on the gallows.

26 Wherefore [g]they called these days Purim,[5] after the name of Pur: therefore, for all the words of this [h]letter, and of that which they had seen concerning this matter, and which had come unto them,

27 The Jews ordained, and took upon them, [i]and upon their seed, and upon [k]all such as joined themselves unto them, so as it should not [6]fail, that they would keep these two days according to their writing, and according to their appointed time, every year;

28 And that these days should be

Thus the power and spirits of the enemies of the Jews were broken, and peace and rest were prepared for them. We are not informed whether any Jews were slain on this occasion: but probably their preservation was as remarkable as the destruction of their assailants. They were indeed placed in most extraordinary circumstances; but as they were sanctioned in what they did by the king's authority, and stood in defence of their own lives; as they slew none but those who attacked them, and universally declined availing themselves of the king's permission to enrich themselves with the spoil, they must be allowed to have acted in an unexceptionable manner; and were no more chargeable with the blood shed by them, than if they had been engaged in the most necessary defensive war.—Scott.

5 The feast of Purim, from the Persian word Pur, which signifies lot, is taken from the circumstance of Haman having cast lots to destroy them, and has been observed by the Jews down to the present time, with some peculiar ceremonies. The Jews tell us that though this feast was established by Esther and Mordecai, eighty-five elders opposed it as an innovation against the law. During this festival the whole book of Esther is twice read in their synagogues, once in the evening, when the feast begins, and again the next morning, and when the name of Haman is mentioned, the very children are taught to beat on the benches, and stamp for joy. After the second reading of the book is finished, they spend the remaining part of the day in sports, with music & dancing, until the time for feasting arrives, in which they indulge to the greatest excesses. In the Talmud, intoxication is even authorized, and this feast has been not improperly called the Bacchanalian feast of the Jews. The best part of this feast is the custom of giving abundant alms to the poor, that they may be enabled to keep this feast as well as the rich.

They wrote with all authority as persons of the highest official influence, and their characters, as the saviours of the nation, would lead the Jews to yield most willing obedience to their mandate. CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

It is generally allowed that the transactions recorded in this book relate to the time of Artaxerxes Longimanus, here called Ahasuerus, and that the history which it contains comes in between the vi. and vii. chapters of the book of Ezra. It furnishes a striking display of Jehovah's care and watchfulness over his peculiar people, even over those of them who had not availed themselves of the opportunities afforded by the edicts of former princes, to return to their own land; and a beautiful and astonishing manifestation of the method of his holy providence in causing 'all things to work together' for the accomplishment of his purposes. We cannot fail to be struck with the marvellous concurrences of circumstances and events which we here behold, tending at once to the preservation of the Jews in the provinces of the empire from most eminent danger, and at the same time, to the great advantage of those who had returned to their own land, and to the promised restoration of the holy city. In every event which is here narrated we see the finger of him who is 'wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working.' In the raising up of Esther, the captive Jewish orphan, to be the instrument of saving her people, we discover the hand of him who chooses 'the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty.' In the record of Haman's cruel devices and miserable end, we behold 'the wicked snared in the work of his own hands:' and the whole narrative strikingly reminds us of the circumstances of the church of God in this world of trial and suffering and danger, opposed by malignant and powerful adversaries, and often reduced to the last extremity, yet ever exemplifying the truth of the promise that 'the gates of hell shall not prevail,' and, after every new attempt of the powers of darkness, taking up her joyful song of gratitude and triumph: 'If it had not been the Lord who was on our side, when men rose up against us: then they had swallowed us up quick, when their wrath was kindled against us: then the waters had overwhelmed us, the stream had gone over our soul: then the proud waters had gone over our soul. Blessed be the Lord who hath not given us as a prey to their teeth. Our soul is escaped as a bird out of the snare of the fowler: the snare is broken, and we are escaped. Our help is in the name of the Lord, who made heaven and earth,' Ps. cxxiv.

Let the conduct of Esther, who put her life in jeopardy to benefit her people, remind us that it is the duty of those who in God's providence are placed in situations of influence, to employ that influence for the good of the church of God, even though their exertions may entail trouble and expose to danger. For power, and authority, and influence, as for every other talent, we are responsible, and even as Christ laid down his life for us, so ought we to be ready 'to lay down our lives for the brethren.' And, while contemplating the circumstances of Esther, when with fear and trembling she presented herself before the king with her petition, let us rejoice in the free access which we at all times enjoy to the presence of Jehovah, that glorious King, who, to every humble suppliant, is ready to hold out the golden sceptre encouraging his approach: and from the throne of mercy is saying, 'Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest.'—'Call upon me in the day of trouble, I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.'

The history of Haman, in the hour of his greatest prosperity, reminds us that outward advantages cannot secure even present happiness to the wicked. 'While this haughty tyrant could boast of the highest favours, and abundance of wealth, and a numerous and flourishing offspring, and in fact every thing that ought to have made him content, yet one thing was as the dead fly in the apothecary's ointment. "All this," said he, "availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's-gate." How insufficient then, after all, are the dazzling objects of this world to give satisfaction to the mind! The poorest followers of the Saviour would not exchange places with such a man. Even bread and water, with the prospect of a heavenly inheritance, have afforded the sweetest satisfaction to many a humble Christian. "I have all things and abound," said an apostle, who was often in hunger, and thirst, and nakedness, and who, when he said so, was a poor prisoner. This man had nothing, and yet possessed all things. Ten thousand talents were but a small part of Haman's wealth, and yet he is miserably poor. The man who knows not Christ is poor, though he be rich, because he is utterly destitute of the true riches.'

We have in this book the record of the institution of the Jewish feast of Purim, a feast still observed by Jews. 'The Jews,' says Prideaux, 'being delivered from the dangerous design which threatened them with nothing less than total extirpation, made great rejoicings for it on the two days following, that is, on the fourteenth and fifteenth days of the month Adar; and by the order of Esther and Mordecai these two days, with the thirteenth that preceded them, were set apart, and consecrated to be annually observed for ever in commemoration thereof, the thirteenth as a fast, because of the destruction in that day intended to have been brought upon them; and the other two as a feast because of a deliverance from it: and both this fast and feast they constantly observe every year on those days, even to this time. The fast they call the fast of Esther, and the feast, the feast of Purim, from the Persian word Purim, which signifies lots; because it was by the casting of lots that Haman did set out this time for their destruction. This feast is the Bacchanals of the Jews, which they celebrate with all manner of rejoicing, mirth, and jollity; and therein indulge themselves in all manner of luxurious excesses... During this festival the book of Esther is solemnly read in all their synagogues, from the beginning to the end; at which they are all to be present, men, women, children, and servants, because all these had their part in this deliverance, which Esther obtained for them. And as often as the name of Haman occurs in the reading of this book, the usage is for them all to clap with their hands, and stamp with their feet, and cry out: Let his memory perish. This is the last feast of the year among them, for the next that follows is the passover, which always falls in the middle of the month which begins the Jewish year.'

Let it be ours, as Christians, every day to celebrate with grateful hearts and with joyful lips, our glorious deliverance by the great Redeemer, of which that of the Jews was but a feeble type—our deliverance from sin and from hell by the mighty conqueror, who through death destroyed him that had the power of death, who defeated the machinations of the adversary, snared him in his own device, and spoiled the principalities of darkness, triumphing over them in his cross.

OF JOB.

THE book of Job is so called from the name of the venerable patriarch whose history forms the leading subject of it. It is certainly the most remarkable, as it is probably the most ancient book extant. None has given rise to so many doubts and difficulties. The attempts at their solution, while they confuse and perplex, have yet this advantage, that they make us rest with the greater satisfaction on the information which may be gathered from scripture itself. We cannot even enumerate, far less discuss the multitude of opinions that have been held on various points connected with this book. We believe that it contains the history of a real person, and a true narration of facts and circumstances connected with it. This has been the uniform belief of the Jewish and Christian church, and has been maintained by the great majority of the ablest modern commentators and critics. The manner in which it has been quoted and referred to, by Ezekiel ch. xiv. 14, 20; the apostle James, ch. ii. 21—25; v. 11; and by the apostle Paul, 1 Cor. iii. 19, as compared with Job v. 13, may be considered decisive proof that the narrative it contains is historical truth. The various opinions respecting the age in which Job lived all tend to show its remote antiquity. There is every reason to believe that it was before the departure of the children of Israel out of Egypt; we are inclined to believe, even under the patriarchal dispensation. Holding this opinion, we think it most probable that Job himself was the author of his own history. The proofs which are adduced as decisive of its being the composition of Moses, and still more so, of any later writers, seem to us of very doubtful force. And the real or supposed resemblances to the style or sentiments of Moses, only confirm the truth that 'all scripture is given by inspiration of God.' It is a poem unequalled in all the beauties of poetry. The country of Job and the scene of the poem is the land of Uz, or Idumæa, in stony Arabia. The great object of this wonderful composition is to show the majesty, holiness, justice, wisdom, and goodness of God; the weakness and corruption of man, the duty of humility and submission to the divine will, and the certainty that though the heaviest calamities may befal the righteous, and no man is exempted from affliction, and though the wicked may and do prosper very generally in the present life, yet God will finally bless and reward the righteous, and humble and punish the wicked. It is, in a word, the same doctrine as is taught by our Lord to the Jews, when they imagined, as Job's friends did, that great calamities were proofs of great wickedness, 'I tell you nay, for except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish;' and by the apostle Paul, 'whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth.' For an analysis of the style and structure of this singularly sublime poem we must refer to the writers on the subject, such as, Lowth's Lectures, Mason Good's Dissertation, introductory to his Translation, Magee's Discourses on the Atonement. vol. ii. Numerous others, will be found referred to in Horne's Introduction, vol. iv.

The holiness, riches, and religious care of Job for his children, 1—5. Satan, appearing before God, by calumniation obtaineth leave to tempt Job, 6—12. Understanding of the loss of his goods and children, in his mourning he blesseth God, 13—22.

THERE was a man in the land of [a]Uz, whose name was [b]Job;[1] and that man was [c]perfect and upright, and [d]one that feared God, and eschewed evil.

2 And there were born unto him seven[e] sons and three daughters.

4 And his sons went and feasted in their houses, every one his day; and [i]sent and called for their three sisters, to eat and to drink with them.

5 And it was so, when the days of their feasting were gone about, that Job sent and [k]sanctified them, and [l]rose up early in the morning, and [m]offered burnt-offerings [n]according to the number of them all: for Job said, [o]It may be that my sons have sinned, and [p]cursed God [q]in their hearts. [r]Thus did Job continually.[1]

6 ¶ Now [s]there was a day when [t]the sons of God[2] [u]came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan[3] [v]came also among[4] them.

1 Dr Good divides the book of Job into six parts. These we shall notice as they occur, and as far as our space will permit. The first contains an opening or exordium, & contains the two first chapters in our ordinary division; and here commences with a brief narrative of the principal personage of the poem, to which we have adverted in the introductory remarks.

about[g] all that he hath on every side? Thou[h] hast blessed the work of his hands, and his substance[1] is increased in the land:

11 But [i]put forth thine hand now, and [k]touch all that he hath, and[2] he will [l]curse thee[3] to thy face.

12 And the LORD said unto Satan, Behold,[m] all that he hath is in thy power;[4] [n]only upon himself put not forth thine hand. [o]So Satan went forth from the presence of the LORD.

13 ¶ And there was a day [p]when his sons and his daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house:

14 And there came a [q]messenger unto Job, and said, The oxen were plowing, and the asses feeding beside them;

15 And the [r]Sabeans[5] fell upon them, and took them away; yea, they have slain the servants with the edge of the sword; [s]and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

16 While he was yet speaking, there[t] came also another, and said, The[6] fire of God is fallen from heaven, and hath burnt up the sheep, and the servants, and consumed them; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

17 While he was yet speaking, there came also another,[7] and said, The[u] Chaldeans made out three bands, and fell[8] upon the camels, and have carried them away, yea, and slain the servants with the edge of the sword; and [v]I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

18 While he was yet speaking, there[w] came also another, and said, Thy[x] sons and thy daughters were eating[y] and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house:

19 And, behold, there came [z]a great wind from[9] the wilderness, and smote the four corners of the house, and [a]it fell upon the young men, and they[b] are dead;[10] and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

20 Then Job arose, and [c]rent his mantle,[11] and shaved his head, and fell[d] down upon the ground, and worshipped, 21 And said, [e]Naked came I out of my mother's womb,[1] and naked shall I return thither: [f]The LORD gave, and [g]the LORD hath taken away; [h]blessed be the name of the LORD.

22 [i]In all this Job sinned not, nor charged[2] God foolishly.

CHAPTER II.

Satan appearing again before God, obtaineth further leave to tempt Job, 1—6. He smiteth him with sore boils from head to foot, 7, 8. Job reproveth his wife, moving him to curse God, 9, 10. His three friends condole with him in silence, 11—13.

AGAIN [a]there was a day[3] when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them, to present himself before the LORD.

2 And the LORD said unto Satan, [b]From whence comest thou? And Satan answered the LORD, and said, [c]From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

3 And the LORD said unto Satan, [d]Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and [e]an upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil? and still he [f]holdeth fast his integrity, although [g]thou movedst me against him, to [4]destroy him [h]without cause.

4 And Satan answered the LORD, and said, Skin for skin,[5] yea, [i]all that a man hath will he give for his life.

5 But [k]put forth thine hand now, and touch his bone and his flesh, and [l]he will curse thee to thy face.

6 And the LORD said unto Satan, [m]Behold, he is in thine hand; [6]but [n]save his life.

7 ¶ So [o]went Satan forth from the presence of the LORD, and smote Job with [p]sore boils, [q]from the sole of his foot unto his crown.

8 And he [r]took him a potsherd to scrape himself withal; and [s]he sat down among the ashes.

9 ¶ Then said [t]his wife unto him, Dost thou still [u]retain thine integrity? [v]curse God,[7] and die.

10 But he said unto her, [w]Thou speakest [x]as one of the foolish women speaketh. What! [y]shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil? [z]In all this did not Job sin with his lips.

7 Here the same word is used as in the 5th verses of ch.i. and ii,& it may be here rendered, 'Dost thou still retain thine integrity, blessing God even unto death.' The reply in the next verse is appropriate enough to this question; as Job's wife ought never to have supposed any thing else. The ordinary translation is a violation of the usual meaning of the word, is exceedingly harsh, and is altogether unnecessary to bring out the sense of the passage.

11 ¶ Now, when Job's three friends[a1] heard of all this evil that was come upon him, they came every one from his own place; Eliphaz the Temanite,[b] and Bildad the [c]Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite: for they had made an appointment together to come [d]to mourn with him, and to comfort[e] him.

12 And when they lifted up their eyes afar off, and [f]knew him [2]not, they[g] lifted up their voice, and wept; and [h]they rent every one his mantle, and [i]sprinkled dust upon their heads toward heaven.

13 So [k]they sat down with him upon the ground [l]seven days and seven nights; and [m]none spake a word unto him: for they saw that his grief was very great.

CHAPTER III.

Job curses the day and services of his birth, 1—12. The ease death, 13—19. He complaineth of life, because of his anguish, —26.

AFTER[a] this [b]opened Job his mouth, and [c]cursed his day.

2 And Job spake,[3] and said,[4]

3 [d]Let the day perish wherein I was born, and the night in which it was said, There is a man-child conceived.

4 Let that day be [e]darkness; let not [f]God regard it from above, neither let the light shine upon it.

5 Let darkness and [g]the shadow of death stain[5] it; [h]let a cloud dwell upon it; let[6] the blackness of the day terrify it.

6 As for that night, let darkness seize upon it; let[7] it not be joined unto the days of the year; let it not come into the number of the months.

7 Lo, let that night be [i]solitary; let no joyful voice come therein.

8 Let them curse it that curse the day, [k]who are ready to raise up [8]their mourning.

9 Let the stars of the twilight thereof be dark; let it [l]look for light, but have none; neither let it see the[9] dawning of the day:

10 Because [m]it shut not up the doors of my mother's womb, nor [n]hid sorrow from mine eyes.

11 Why [o]died I not from the womb? why did I not give up the ghost [p]when I came out of the belly?

12 Why did [q]the knees prevent me? or why the breasts that I should suck?

13 For now should I have lain still and been quiet, I should have slept: [r]then had I been at rest

14 With [s]kings and counsellors of the earth, which [t]built desolate [1]places for themselves;

15 Or with princes that had gold, who [u]filled their houses with silver:

16 Or as [v]an hidden untimely birth I had not been; as infants which never saw light.

17 There [w]the wicked cease from troubling; and there the weary[2] be [x]at rest.

18 There the prisoners rest together; [y]they hear not the voice of the oppressor.

19 [z]The small and great are there; [a]and the servant is free from his master.

20 [b]Wherefore is [c]light given to him that is in misery, and life unto [d]the bitter in soul;

21 [e]Which long[3] for death, but it cometh not; and [f]dig for it more than for hid treasures;

22 Which rejoice exceedingly, and are glad when they can find the grave?

23 Why is light given to a man [g]whose way is hid, and whom God [h]hath hedged in?[4]

24 For [i]my sighing cometh before I eat,[5] and [k]my roarings are poured out like the waters.

25 For the[6] thing which I greatly feared is come upon me, and [l]that which I was afraid of is come unto me.

26 I was not in safety,[7] neither had I rest, neither was I quiet; [m]yet trouble came.[8]

CHAPTER IV.

Eliphaz reproveth Job for want of religious trust, 1—6. He teacheth God's judgments to be not for the righteous, but for the wicked, 7—11. His fearful vision, to humble the excellency of creatures before God, 12—21.

THEN [a]Eliphaz the Temanite [b]answered and said,[9]

2 If we assay to[10] commune with thee, [c]wilt thou be grieved? but who can withhold[11] himself from speaking?

1 These friends of Job, though they formed a mistaken judgment of the cause of his calamities, seem to have been persons of wisdom and piety, as well as of some distinction. They were Edomites —a people anciently famous for their wisdom. Eliphaz is supposed to have been descended from Teman, the grandson of Esau, by Eliphaz, Ge. 26.11; 1 Ch. 1. 36; and Bildad, from Shuah, Abraham's son by Keturah. Zophar was also descended from Abraham.

3 Heb. answered.

4 This is the commencement of the second part of the poem, which extends to the end of the 14th chapter. There is every reason to believe, that besides his outward troubles, Job is now assaulted with the inward temptations of Satan, that he breaks out into such passionate and violent imprecations in all the wildness of despondency. The style and imagery are of admirable force & boldness. 'There is nothing,' says Dr Good, 'that I know of in ancient or modern poetry, equal to the entire burst; whether in the wildness and horror of its imprecations, or the terrible sublimity of its imagery.'

Dr Good renders it, restored to themselves waste places, and adds in a note, 'The grave is the common receptacle of all—of the patriotic princes, who have restored to their ancient magnificence the ruins of former cities, and fixed their palaces in them; and of the sordid accumulators of wealth, which they have not spirit to make use of —of the wicked, who have never ceased from troubling, and of those who have been wearied and worn out by their vexations — of the high and the low, the slave and his task-master, the servant and his lord.'

3 Behold, [d]thou hast instructed many, and [e]thou hast strengthened the weak hands.

4 Thy words have [f]upholden him that was falling, and thou hast strengthened the feeble[1] knees.

5 But now [g]it is come upon thee, and [h]thou faintest; [i]it toucheth thee, and thou art troubled.

6 Is not this [k]thy fear, [l]thy confidence, [m]thy hope, and [n]the uprightness of thy ways?

7 Remember, I pray thee, [o]who ever perished, being innocent? or where were the righteous cut off?

8 Even as I have seen, [p]they that plow iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same.

9 By [q]the blast of God they perish, and by[2] the breath of his nostrils are they consumed.

10 The roaring of the lion, and the voice of the fierce lion, and [r]the teeth of the young lions, are broken.

11 The [s]old lion [t]perisheth for lack of prey, and [u]the stout lion's whelps are scattered abroad.[3]

12 Now [v]a thing was secretly[4] brought to me, and mine ear received a[w] little thereof.

13 In [x]thoughts from the visions of the night, when [y]deep sleep falleth on men, 14 [z]Fear came[5] upon me, and trembling, which made all[6] my bones to shake.

15 Then [a]a spirit passed before my face; [b]the hair of my flesh stood up:

16 It stood still, but I could not discern the form thereof: an image was before mine eyes; there[7] was silence, and I heard a voice,[8] saying,

17 [c]Shall mortal man be more just than God? [d]shall a man be more pure than his Maker?[9]

18 Behold, [e]he put no trust in his servants; and[10] his angels he charged with folly:[11]

19 How much less in them that dwell[f] in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust, which are crushed[g] before the moth?

20 They are destroyed[12] [h]from morning to evening: [i]they perish for ever, [k]without any regarding it.

21 Doth not their [l]excellency which is in them go away? they [m]die, even without wisdom.

CHAPTER V.

The harm of inconsideration, 1, 2. The end of the wicked is misery, 3—5. God is to be regarded in affliction, 6—16. The happy end of God's correction, 17—27.

CALL now, if there be any that will answer thee; [a]and to which of [b]the saints wilt thou turn?[1]

2 For [c]wrath killeth [d]the foolish man, [e]and envy[2] slayeth the [f]silly one.

3 I have seen the foolish [g]taking root: but suddenly I [h]cursed his habitation.

4 His [i]children are far from safety, and [k]they are crushed in the gate, [l]neither is there any to deliver them.

5 Whose [m]harvest the hungry eateth up, and taketh it even out of [n]the thorns, and [o]the robber [p]swalloweth up their substance.

6 Although affliction[3] cometh not forth of the dust, neither [q]doth trouble [r]spring out of the ground;

7 Yet [s]man is born unto [4]trouble, as the[5] sparks fly upward.

8 I would [t]seek[6] unto God, and [u]unto God would I commit my cause:

9 Which [v]doeth great things and unsearchable;[7] [w]marvellous things without[8] number:

10 Who [x]giveth rain upon the earth, and sendeth waters upon the [9]fields:

11 To [y]set up on high those that be low; that [z]those which mourn may be [a]exalted to safety.

12 He [b]disappointeth the devices of the crafty, so that [c]their hands cannot perform their[10] enterprise.

13 He [d]taketh the wise in their own craftiness; and the counsel [e]of the froward is carried headlong.

14 They meet[11] [f]with darkness in the day-time, and grope in the noonday as in the night.[12]

15 But [g]he saveth the poor from the sword, from their mouth, and from the hand of the mighty.

16 So [h]the poor hath hope, and [i]iniquity stoppeth her mouth.

17 Behold, [k]happy is the man whom God correcteth; therefore despise not thou the chastening of the Almighty:

18 For [l]he maketh sore, and bindeth eth up; he woundeth, and his hands make whole.

19 He shall [m]deliver thee in six troubles; yea, in seven there shall [n]no evil touch thee.

20 In [o]famine he shall [p]redeem thee from death; and [q]in war from the power[1] of the sword.

21 Thou shalt [r]be hid from[2] the scourge of the tongue; [s]neither shalt thou be afraid of destruction when it cometh.

22 At destruction and famine thou shalt [t]laugh; neither shalt thou be afraid[u] of the beasts of the earth.

23 For [v]thou shalt be in league with the stones[3] of the field; and [w]the beasts of the field shall be at peace with thee.

24 And [x]thou shalt know that [4]thy tabernacle shall be in peace; and [y]thou shalt visit thy habitation, and shalt not sin.[5]

25 Thou shalt know also that [z]thy seed shall be great,[6] and thine offspring [a]as the grass of the earth.

26 Thou shalt come to thy grave [b]in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh[7] in in his season.[8]

27 Lo this, [c]we have searched it, so it is; hear it, and know thou it [9]for thy good.

CHAPTER VI.

Job showeth that his complaints are not causeless, 1—7. He wisheth for death, wherein he is assured of comfort, 8—13. He reproveth his friends of unkindness, 14—30.

BUT Job [a]answered and said,

2 Oh that my grief were [b]thoroughly weighed, and my calamity[10] laid[11] in the balances together!

3 For now it would be [c]heavier than the sand of the sea: therefore my[12] words [d]are swallowed up.[13]

4 For [e]the arrows of the Almighty are within me, the poison whereof drinketh[f] up my spirit: [g]the terrors of God do set themselves in array against me.

5 Doth the wild ass bray when[14] he hath grass? or [h]loweth the ox over his fodder?[15]

6 Can [i]that which is unsavoury[16] be eaten without salt? or is there any taste[k] in the white of an egg?

7 The things that my soul refused to touch are [l]as my sorrowful meat.

8 Oh that I might have my request; and that God would grant me [1]the thing that I long for!

9 Even [m]that it would please God to destroy me;[2] [n]that he would let loose his hand, and cut me off!

10 Then [o]should I yet have comfort; yea, [p]I would harden myself in sorrow: [q]let him not spare; for I [r]have not concealed the words of [s]the Holy One.

11 [t]What is my strength, that I should hope? and what is mine end, that I should prolong my life?

12 Is my strength the strength of stones? or is my flesh of brass?[3]

13 [u]Is not my help[4] in me? [v]and is wisdom driven quite from me?

14 To [w]him that is[5] afflicted pity should be shewed from his friend; but [x]he forsaketh the fear[6] of the Almighty.

15 [y]My brethren have dealt deceitfully as a brook,[7] and [z]as the stream of brooks they pass away;

16 Which are blackish by reason of the ice, and wherein the snow is hid:

17 What time they wax warm, they vanish:[8] when[9] it is hot, they are consumed out of their place.

18 The paths of their way are turned aside; they go to nothing, and perish.

19 The troops of [a]Tema looked, the companies of [b]Sheba waited for them.

20 They [c]were confounded because they had hoped; they came thither, and were ashamed.

21 For now ye[10] [d]are nothing;[11] [e]ye see my casting down, and are afraid.

22 Did I say, [f]Bring unto me? or, Give a reward for me of your substance?

23 Or, Deliver me from the enemy's hand? or, [g]Redeem me from the hand of the mighty?

24 [h]Teach me, and [i]I will hold my tongue; and [k]cause me to understand wherein I have erred.

25 How [l]forcible are right words! but [m]what doth your arguing reprove?

26 Do you imagine to [n]reprove words, and the speeches of [o]one that is desperate, which are [p]as wind?

27 Yea, ye overwhelm[12] [q]the fatherless, and [r]ye dig a pit for your friend.

28 Now therefore be content; look upon me: for it is evident[1] unto you if[s] I lie.

29 [t]Return, I pray you, let it not be iniquity; yea, return again, [u]my righteousness is in it.[2]

30 Is there [v]iniquity in my tongue? cannot[w] my taste[3] discern perverse things?

CHAPTER VII.

Job excuseth his desire of death, 1—11. He complaineth of his own restlessness, 12—16; and God's watchfulness, 17—21.

IS [a]there not an[4] appointed time[5] to man upon earth? are not his days also [b]like the days of an hireling?

2 As a servant earnestly[6] desireth the[c] shadow, and as [d]an hireling looketh for the reward of his work;

3 So am I made to possess [e]months of vanity, and wearisome nights are appointed to me.[7]

4 When I lie down, I say, [f]When shall I arise, and the night be gone?[8] and I am full of [g]tossings to and fro unto the dawning of the day.

5 My [h]flesh is clothed with worms and clods of dust; my skin is broken, and become [i]loathsome.

6 My days are [k]swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent [l]without hope.

7 Oh [m]remember that [n]my life is wind;[9] mine eye shall no[10] more see good.

8 The [o]eye of him that hath seen me shall see me no more: [p]thine eyes are upon me, and I am not.[11]

9 As [q]the cloud is consumed and vanisheth away; so [r]he that goeth down to the grave shall come up[12] no more.

10 He [s]shall return no more to his house, neither shall his place know him any more.

11 Therefore [t]I will not refrain my mouth; I will speak in [u]the anguish of my spirit; I will complain in [v]the bitterness of my soul.

12 Am [w]I a sea,[13] or [x]a whale, that thou settest a watch over me?

13 When I say, [y]My bed shall comfort me, my couch shall ease my complaint;

14 Then [z]thou scarest me with dreams, and terrifiest me through visions;

15 So that my soul [a]chooseth strangling, and death rather than my [1]life.

16 [b]I loathe it; I would not live alway: [c]let me alone; for [d]my days are vanity.

17 [e]What is man, that thou shouldest [f]magnify him? and that thou shouldest [g]set thine heart upon him?

18 And that thou shouldest [h]visit him every morning, and [i]try him every moment?

19 [k]How long wilt thou not depart from me, nor let me alone, till I swallow down my spittle?[2]

20 I [l]have sinned;[3] what shall I do unto thee, [m]O thou Preserver of men? [n]why hast thou set me as a mark against thee, so that [o]I am a burden to myself?

21 And [p]why dost thou not pardon my transgression, and [q]take away mine iniquity? for now shall I [r]sleep in the dust; and thou shalt seek me [s]in the morning, [t]but I shall not be.

CHAPTER VIII.

Bildad sheweth God's justice in dealing with men according to their works, 1—7. He appealeth to antiquity to prove the certain destruction of the hypocrite, 8—19. He applieth the argument of God's just dealing to the case of Job, 20—22.

THEN answered [a]Bildad the Shuhite, and said,

2 [b]How long wilt thou speak these things? and how long shall [c]the words of thy mouth be like a strong [4]wind?

3 [d]Doth God pervert judgment? or doth [e]the Almighty pervert justice?

4 If thy children have sinned against him, and [f]he have cast them away for[5] their transgression;

5 If [g]thou wouldest seek unto God betimes, and made thy supplication to the Almighty;

6 If [h]thou wert pure and upright; surely now [i]he would awake for thee, and [k]make the habitation of thy righteousness prosperous.

7 Though [l]thy beginning was small, yet [m]thy latter end should greatly increase.

8 For [n]enquire, I pray thee, of the former age,[6] and prepare thyself to the search of their fathers;

CHAPTER IX.

Job, acknowledging God's justice, sheweth there is no contending with him, 1—21. Man's innocency is not to be condemned by afflictions, 22—35.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 I know it is so of a truth:[9] but [a]how should man be just with[10] God?

3 If [b]he will[11] contend with him, [c]he cannot answer him one of a thousand.

4 He is [d]wise in heart, and mighty in strength; [e]who hath hardened himself against him, and hath prospered?

5 Which [f]removeth the mountains, and they know not; [g]which overturneth them in his anger;

6 Which [h]shaketh the earth out of her place, and [i]the pillars thereof tremble;

7 Which [k]commandeth the sun, and it riseth not, and [l]sealeth up the stars;

8 Which [m]alone spreadeth out the heavens, and [n]treadeth upon the waves[1] of the sea;

9 Which [o]maketh Arcturus,[2] Orion, and Pleiades, and [p]the chambers of the south;[3]

10 Which doeth [q]great things past finding out; yea, and [r]wonders without number.

11 Lo, [s]he goeth by me, and I see him not: he passeth on also, but I perceive him not.

12 Behold, [t]he taketh away, who can hinder[4] him? who will say unto him, [u]What doest thou?

13 If God will not withdraw his anger, [v]the proud[5] helpers do stoop under him.

14 [w]How much less [z]shall I answer him, and [y]choose out my words to reason with him?

15 Whom, [z]though I were righteous, yet would I not answer, but [a]I would make supplication to [b]my Judge.

16 If [c]I had called, and he had answered me; yet [d]would I not believe that he had hearkened unto my voice.

17 For [e]he breaketh me with a tempest, and [f]multiplieth my wounds [g]without cause.

18 He [h]will not suffer me to take my breath, but [i]filleth me with bitterness.

19 If I speak of strength, lo, [k]he is strong: and if of judgment, [l]who shall set me a time to plead?

20 If I [m]justify myself, [n]mine own mouth shall condemn me: if I say, [o]I am perfect, [p]it shall also prove me perverse.

21 Though I were perfect, yet [q]would I not know my soul; [r]I would despise my life.

22 This is one thing, therefore I said it, [s]He destroyeth the perfect and the wicked.

6 Indeed the earth is chiefly possessed and governed by wicked men; and the judges of it are commonly blinded by their lusts, or hoodwinked by bribery, so that they frequently oppress & persecute the righteous. Yet God gives them their power, and allows them to prosper in their crimes, by which they are still further blinded and hardened. faces of the judges thereof; [x]if not, where, and who is he?

25 Now my days are [y]swifter than a post; [z]they flee away, they see no good.

26 They are passed away as the swift[1] ships; [a]as the eagle that hasteth to the prey.

27 If I say, [b]I will forget my complaint, I will leave off my heaviness, and comfort myself;

34 Let him take his rod away from me, and [n]let not his fear terrify me:

35 Then would I speak, and not fear him: but[4] it is not so with me.[5]

CHAPTER X.

Job, taking liberty of complaint, expostulateth with God about his afflictions, 1—17. He complaineth of life, and craveth a little ease before death, 18—22.

MY [a]soul is[6] weary of my life: [b]I will leave my complaint upon myself; [c]I will speak in the bitterness of my soul.

2 I will say unto God, [d]Do not condemn me; [e]shew me wherefore thou contendest with me.[7]

3 Is it [f]good unto thee that thou shouldest oppress? that thou shouldest despise[g] [h]the work[8] of thine hands? and shine[i] upon the counsel of the wicked?

4 Hast thou eyes of flesh? or [k]seest thou as man seeth?

5 Are [l]thy days as the days of man? are thy years as man's days,

6 That [m]thou enquirest after mine iniquity, and searchest after my sin?[9]

7 Thou[10] [n]knowest that I am not wicked; [o]and there is none that can deliver out of thine hand.

2 Should not [b]the multitude of words be answered? and should a man full[1] of talk be justified?

3 Should [c]thy lies[2] make men hold their peace? and when thou [d]mockest, shall no man [e]make thee ashamed?

4 For thou hast said, [f]My doctrine is pure, and [g]I am clean in thine eyes.

5 But [h]Oh that God would speak, and open his lips against thee;

6 And that he would [i]shew thee the secrets of wisdom, that they are double to that which is! Know therefore that [k]God exacteth of thee less than thine iniquity[3] deserveth.

7 Canst [l]thou by searching find out God? canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection?

8 It is as[4] [m]high as heaven; what canst thou do? [n]deeper than hell; what canst thou know?

9 The measure thereof is [o]longer than the earth, and broader than the sea.

10 If [p]he cut[5] off, and [q]shut up, or gather together, then who can [6]hinder him?

11 For [r]he knoweth vain men: [s]he seeth wickedness also; will he not then consider it?

12 [t]For vain[7] man [u]would be wise, though [v]man be born like [w]a wild ass's colt.[8]

13 If thou [x]prepare thine heart, and [y]stretch out thine hands toward him;

14 If [z]iniquity be in thine hand, put[a] it far away, and [b]let not wickedness dwell in thy tabernacles.

15 For then shalt thou [c]lift up thy face without spot; yea, [d]thou shalt be stedfast, and shalt not fear:

16 Because [e]thou shalt forget thy misery, and remember it [f]as waters that pass away:

17 And thine [g]age shall be[9] clearer than the noon-day; [h]thou shalt shine forth, thou shalt be as the morning.

18 And thou shalt be secure, [i]because there is hope; yea, thou shalt dig about thee, and [k]thou shalt take thy rest in safety.

19 Also thou shalt lie down, and none shall make thee afraid; yea, many[l] shall make[10] suit unto thee.

CHAPTER XII.

Job maintaineth himself against his friends that reprove him, 1—12. He acknowledgeth the general doctrine of God's omnipotency, 13—25.

AND Job answered and said,

2 No doubt but [a]ye are the people, and wisdom shall die with you.[3]

3 But [b]I have understanding[4] as well as you; I[5] am not inferior to you: yea, who[6] knoweth not such things as these?

4 I am as [c]one mocked of his neighbour, [d]who calleth upon God, and he answereth him: [e]the just upright man is laughed to scorn.[7]

5 He that is [f]ready to slip with his feet, is as [g]a lamp despised[8] in the thought [h]of him that is at ease.

6 The [i]tabernacles of robbers prosper, and they that provoke God are secure; into whose hand God bringeth abundantly.

7 But [k]ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee; and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee:

8 Or speak to the earth, and it shall teach thee; and the fishes of the sea shall declare unto thee.

9 [l]Who knoweth not in all these that [m]the hand of the LORD hath wrought this?[9]

10 In [n]whose hand is the soul[10] of every living thing, and [o]the breath of all mankind.[11]

11 Doth [p]not the ear try words? and the mouth[12] taste his meat?

12 With [q]the ancient is wisdom; and in length of days understanding.

13 With him[13] is [r]wisdom and strength, he hath [s]counsel and understanding.

14 Behold, [t]he breaketh down, and it cannot be built again; [u]he shutteth up[14] a man, and there can be no opening.

15 Behold, [v]he withholdeth the waters, and they dry up;[15] also [w]he sendeth them out, and they overturn the earth.

16 With [x]him is strength and wisdom; [y]the deceived and the deceiver are his.

17 He [z]leadeth counsellors away spoiled, and maketh the judges fools.

18 He [a]looseth the bond of kings, and girdeth their loins with a girdle.

19 He [b]leadeth princes away spoiled, and overthroweth the mighty.

20 He removeth away the[1] speech of the trusty, and [c]taketh away the understanding of the aged.

21 He [d]poureth contempt upon princes, and weakeneth[2] the strength of the mighty.

22 He [e]discovereth deep things out of darkness, and [f]bringeth out to light the shadow of death.

23 He [g]increaseth the nations, and destroyeth them: he enlargeth the nations, and straiteneth[3] them again.

24 He [h]taketh away the heart of the chief of the people of the earth, and[i] causeth them to wander in a wilderness where there is no way.

25 They [k]grope in the dark without light, and he [l]maketh them to stagger[4] like a drunken man.[5]

CHAPTER XIII.

Job reproveth his friends of false reasoning and partiality, 1—13. He professeth his confidence in God, 14—19; and entreateth to know his own sins, and God's purpose in afflicting him, 20—28.

LO, [a]mine eye hath seen all this, [b]mine ear hath heard and understood it.

2 What [c]ye know, the same do I know also: I am not inferior unto you.

3 Surely [d]I would speak to the Almighty, and [e]I desire to reason with God.[6]

4 But [f]ye are forgers of lies, ye are all [g]physicians of no value.

5 Oh [h]that ye would altogether hold your peace; [i]and it should be your wisdom.

6 Hear [k]now my reasoning, and hearken to the pleadings of my lips.

7 Will ye [l]speak wickedly for God? and talk deceitfully for him?

8 Will ye [m]accept his person?[7] will ye contend for God?

9 Is it good that he should [n]search you out? or [o]as one man mocketh another, do ye so mock him?

10 He will surely [p]reprove you, if ye do secretly accept persons.

11 Shall [q]not his excellency make you afraid? and [r]his dread fall upon you?

12 Your [s]remembrances are like unto [t]ashes, your bodies [u]to bodies of clay.[1]

13 Hold[2] your peace, [v]let me alone, that I may speak, [w]and let come on me what will.

14 Wherefore do [x]I take my flesh in my teeth, [y]and put my life in mine hand?[3]

15 Though [z]he slay me, yet will I trust in him: [a]but I will [4]maintain mine own ways[5] before him.

16 He also shall be [b]my salvation: [c]for an hypocrite shall not come before him.

17 Hear [d]diligently my speech, and my declaration with your ears.

18 Behold now, [e]I have ordered my cause; [f]I know that I shall be justified.

19 Who is he [g]that will plead with me? for now, [h]if I hold my tongue, I shall give up the ghost.[6]

20 Only [i]do not two things unto me: then will I not [k]hide myself from thee.

21 [l]Withdraw thine hand[7] far from me; and [m]let not thy dread make me afraid;

22 Then [n]call thou, and I will answer; or let me speak, and answer thou me.

23 How [o]many are mine iniquities and sins? [p]make me to know my transgression and my sin.

24 Wherefore [q]hidest thou thy face, and [r]holdest me for thine enemy?

25 Wilt thou [s]break a leaf driven to and fro? and wilt thou pursue the dry stubble?[8]

26 For thou [t]writest bitter things against me, and [u]makest me to possess the iniquities of my youth.

27 Thou [v]puttest my feet also in the stocks, [w]and lookest[9] narrowly unto all my paths; thou [x]settest a print[10] upon the heels[11] of my feet.

28 And [y]he, as a rotten thing, consumeth, [z]as a garment that is moth-eaten.

CHAPTER XIV.

Job entreateth God for favour, by the shortness of life, and certainty of death, 1—6. Though life once lost be irrecoverable, yet he waiteth for his change, 7—17. By sin the creature is subject to corruption, 18—22.

MAN that is [a]born of a woman is [12]of [b]few days, and [c]full of trouble.

2 He cometh forth [d]like a flower, and is cut down: he [e]fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not.

3 And [f]dost thou open thine eyes upon such an one, and [g]bringest me into judgment with thee?

4 Who[1] [h]can bring [i]a clean thing out of an unclean? not one.[2]

5 Seeing [k]his days are determined, the [l]number of his months are with thee; [m]thou hast appointed his bounds that he cannot pass.

6 [n]Turn from him, that he may rest,[3] till he shall accomplish, [o]as an hireling, his day.

7 For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, [p]that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease.

8 Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die [q]in the ground;

9 Yet through the scent of water it will bud, [r]and bring forth boughs like a plant.

10 But man dieth, and [4]wasteth away; yea, [s]man giveth up the ghost, and [t]where is he?

11 As the waters fail from the sea, and [u]the flood decayeth and drieth up;

12 So [v]man lieth down, and riseth not: [w]till the heavens be no more, they shall not [x]awake, nor be raised out of their sleep.

13 Oh that thou wouldest [y]hide me in the grave, that thou wouldest keep me secret, [z]until thy wrath be past, that thou wouldest [a]appoint me a set time,[5] and [b]remember me!

14 If a man die, [c]shall he live again? all [d]the days of my appointed time will I wait, till [e]my change come.

15 Thou [f]shalt call, and I will answer thee: [g]thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands.

16 For now [h]thou numberest my steps; dost thou not watch over my sin?

17 My transgression is [i]sealed up in a bag, and thou sewest up mine iniquity.

18 And surely [k]the mountain falling cometh to nought,[6] and [l]the rock is removed out of his place.

19 The waters wear the stones: thou washest[7] away the things which grow out of the dust of the earth; and thou [m]destroyest the hope of man.[1]

20 Thou [n]prevailest for ever against him; and he passeth: thou [o]changest his countenance, and sendest him away.

21 His sons come to honour, and [p]he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them.

22 But [q]his flesh upon him shall have pain, and [r]his soul within him shall mourn.[2]

2 He pleads that he is unworthy of God's notice. 'He was indeed a sinner, being descended from sinful parents, as all other men were: even as, in the whole course of nature, the progeny partake of the propensities and qualities of the creature from which it sprang. For "who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? Not one." Or, how could it be possible for his conduct to be sinless, when his heart was by nature polluted and unclean?' In either sense, this expresses Job's belief in the doctrine of original sin, and he uses it as a plea that God should deal with him not according to his works, but in his own divine mercy.

CHAPTER XV.

Eliphaz reproveth Job of impiety in justifying himself, 1—16. He proveth from tradition the disquietude of wicked men, 17—35.

THEN answered [a]Eliphaz the Temanite, and said,[3]

2 Should [b]a wise man utter [4]vain knowledge, and [c]fill his belly with the east wind?

3 Should [d]he reason with unprofitable talk? or with speeches wherewith he can do no good?

4 Yea, [e]thou castest[5] off fear, and [f]restrainest prayer[6] before God.

5 For thy mouth uttereth[7] thine iniquity, and [g]thou choosest the tongue of the crafty.

6 Thine [h]own mouth condemneth thee, and not I; yea, [i]thine own lips testify against thee.

7 Art thou [k]the first man that was born? [l]or wast thou made before the hills?

8 Hast thou heard [m]the secret of God? and dost [n]thou restrain wisdom to thyself?

9 What [o]knowest thou, that we know not? what understandest thou, which is not in us?

10 With us are both [p]the grayheaded and very aged men, much elder than thy father.

11 Are [q]the consolations of God small with thee?[8] [r]is there any secret thing with thee?

12 Why doth [s]thine heart carry thee away? and what do [t]thy eyes wink [9]at,

13 That thou [u]turnest thy spirit against God, [v]and lettest such words go out of thy mouth?

14 What [w]is man, that he should be clean? and he which is born of a woman, that he should be righteous?

his saints;[1] yea, the heavens are not clean in his sight;

16 How much more [y]abominable and filthy is man, which [z]drinketh iniquity like water?

17 I will shew thee, [a]hear me; and that which I have seen I will declare;[2]

18 Which wise men have told from[b] their fathers, and have not hid it;

19 Unto [c]whom alone the earth was given, and no stranger passed among them.

20 The wicked man [d]travaileth with pain all his days, and [e]the number of years is hidden to the oppressor.

21 A dreadful[3] sound is in his ears: [f]in prosperity [g]the destroyer shall come upon him.

22 He [h]believeth not that he shall return out of darkness, [i]and he is waited for of the sword.[4]

23 He [k]wandereth abroad for bread, saying, Where is it? he knoweth that [l]the day of darkness is ready at his hand.

24 Trouble and [m]anguish shall make him afraid; they shall prevail against him, [n]as a king ready to the battle.

25 For [o]he stretcheth out his hand against God, and [p]strengtheneth himself against the Almighty.

26 He [q]runneth upon him, [r]even on his neck, upon the thick bosses of his bucklers;

27 Because [s]he covereth his face with his fatness, and maketh collops of fat on his flanks.

28 And he dwelleth in [t]desolate cities, and in houses which no man inhabiteth, [u]which are ready to become heaps.

29 He shall not be rich, [v]neither shall his substance continue, neither shall he prolong the perfection thereof upon the earth.[5]

30 He shall not [w]depart out of darkness: [x]the flame[6] shall dry up his branches; and [y]by the breath of his mouth shall he go away.

31 Let [z]not him that is deceived trust[a] in vanity; for [b]vanity shall be his recompence.

32 It shall be accomplished[7] before his time, [c]and his branch shall not be green.

33 He shall [d]shake off his unripe grape as the vine, [e]and shall cast off his flower as the olive.

34 For [f]the congregation of hypocrites shall be desolate, and fire shall consume [g]the tabernacles of [1]bribery.

35 They [h]conceive mischief, and bring forth vanity,[2] and their belly prepareth deceit.

CHAPTER XVI.

Job reproveth his friends of inhumanity toward him, 1–5. He sheweth the pitifulness of his case, 7—16. He maintaineth his innocency, 17—22.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 I have [a]heard many such things: miserable[3] comforters are ye all.

3 Shall vain words[4] have an end? or [b]what emboldeneth thee that thou answerest?

4 I also could speak as ye do: if your soul were in my soul's stead, I could heap [d]up words against you, and [e]shake mine head at you.

5 But [f]I would strengthen you with my mouth, and the moving of my lips should asswage your grief.

6 Though I speak, [g]my grief is not asswaged; and though I forbear, what[5] am I eased?

7 But now [h]he[6] hath made me weary: thou [i]hast made desolate all my company.

8 And thou hast filled me with wrinkles, which [k]is a witness against me: and [l]my leanness rising up in me beareth witness to my face.

9 He [m]teareth me in his wrath, who hateth me: [n]he gnasheth upon me with his teeth; [o]mine [7]enemy sharpeneth his eyes upon me.

10 They have [p]gaped upon me with their mouth;[8] [q]they have smitten me upon the cheek reproachfully; [r]they have gathered themselves together against me.

11 God hath delivered[9] me [s]to the ungodly, and [t]turned me over into the hands of the wicked.

12 I was [u]at ease, but he hath [v]broken me asunder: he hath also taken me [w]by my neck, and [x]shaken me to pieces, and [y]set me up for his mark.

13 His [z]archers compass me round about; [a]he cleaveth my reins asunder, and [b]doth not spare; he [c]poureth out my gall upon the ground.

14 He [d]breaketh me with breach upon breach; [e]he runneth upon me like a giant.[1]

15 I have [f]sewed sackcloth upon my skin, and [g]defiled my horn[2] in the dust.

16 My [h]face is foul with weeping, and [i]on my eyelids is the shadow of death;

17 Not [k]for any injustice in mine hands: also [l]my prayer is pure.

18 [m]O earth, [n]cover not thou my blood,[3] and [o]let my cry have no place.

19 Also now, behold, [p]my witness is in heaven, and my record is on [4]high.

22 When a[7] few years are come, then I shall go the way [s]whence I shall not return.

CHAPTER XVII.

Job appealeth from men to God, 1—5. The unmerciful dealing of men with the afflicted may astonish, but not discourage the righteous, 6—10. His hope is no longer in life, but in death, 11—16.

MY breath[8] is [a]corrupt, [b]my days are extinct, [c]the graves are ready for me.

2 Are there not [d]mockers with me? and doth not mine eye continue[9] in their [e]provocation?

3 Lay down now, [f]put me in a surety with thee; who is he that will strike[g] hands with me?

4 For [h]thou hast hid their heart from understanding: therefore shalt thou not exalt them.

5 He [i]that speaketh flattery to his friends, even [k]the eyes of his children shall fail.

6 He hath made me also [l]a by-word of the people; and aforetime[10] I was [m]as a tabret.[11]

7 Mine [n]eye also is dim by reason of sorrow, and all my members[12] are as[o] a shadow.

8 Upright men shall be [p]astonied at this, and the innocent shall [q]stir up himself against the hypocrite.

9 The righteous also shall hold [r]on his way; and he that hath [s]clean hands shall be stronger and stronger.[1]

10 But as for you all, [t]do ye return,[2] and come now: [u]for I cannot find one wise man among you.

11 My [v]days are past, [w]my purposes are broken off, even the thoughts[3] of my heart.

13 [y]If I wait, [z]the grave is mine house: [a]I have made my bed in the darkness.

14 I have said[5] to [b]corruption, Thou art my father; [c]to the worm, Thou art my mother, and my sister.

15 And where is now [d]my hope? as for my hope, who shall see it?

16 They[6] shall go down to [e]the bars of the pit, when our [f]rest together is in the dust.

Bildad reproveth Job of presumption and impatience, 1—4. The calamities of the wicked, 5—21.

THEN answered [a]Bildad the Shuhite, and said,

2 How [b]long will it be ere ye make an end of words? [c]mark, and afterwards we will speak.

3 Wherefore [d]are we counted as beasts,[7] and reputed vile in your sight?

4 He [e]teareth himself[8] in his anger: [f]shall the earth be forsaken for thee? and shall [g]the rock be removed out of his place?

5 Yea, [h]the light of the wicked shall be put out, and the [i]spark of his fire shall not shine.

6 The light shall be dark in his tabernacle, and his candle[9] shall be put out with him.

7 The [k]steps of his strength shall be straitened, and [l]his own counsel shall cast him down.

8 For [m]he is cast into a net by his own feet, and he walketh upon a snare.

9 The [n]gin shall take him by the heel, and [o]the robber shall prevail against him.

10 The [p]snare is laid[10] for him in the ground, and a trap for him in the way.

11 [q]Terrors shall make him afraid on every side, and shall drive[11] him [r]to his feet.[12]

2 The horn is the emblem of power and prosperity. The original is, I have rolled my horn in the dust; I have thrown down my power and glory to the earth. Good renders the word 'turban,' explaining it of the horn-like, or turbinated headdress. There is probably an allusion to the practice in the East, of wearing an ornament on the forehead exactly in the shape of a pointed horn.

bitten, and [t]destruction shall be ready at his side.

13 It shall devour the strength[1] of his skin: even [u]the first-born of death[2] shall devour his strength.

14 His [v]confidence shall be rooted out of his tabernacle, and it shall bring him to [w]the king of terrors.

15 It shall [x]dwell[3] in his tabernacle, because[y] it is none of his: [z]brimstone shall be scattered upon his habitation.

16 His [a]roots shall be dried up beneath, and above [b]shall his branch be cut off.

17 His [c]remembrance shall perish from the earth, and he shall have no name in the street.

20 They that come after him shall be [h]astonied at [i]his day, as they that went[5] before were[6] affrighted.

21 Surely [k]such are the dwellings of the wicked, and this is the place of him that [l]knoweth not God.

CHAPTER XIX.

Job, complaining of his friends' cruelty, sheweth there is misery enough in him to gratify it, 1—20. He craveth pity, 21, 22; professeth his belief in a future resurrection, 23—27; and warneth his friends not to persecute him, 28, 29.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 [a]How long will ye [b]vex my soul, and [c]break me in pieces with words?

3 These [d]ten times[7] have [e]ye reproached me: ye are not ashamed that ye make[8] yourselves [f]strange to me.

4 And be it indeed that [g]I have erred, mine[h] error remaineth with myself.

5 If indeed ye will [i]magnify yourselves against me, and [k]plead against me my reproach;

6 Know now that [l]God hath overthrown me, and hath [m]compassed me with his net.

7 Behold, [n]I cry out of wrong,[9] but I am not heard: I cry aloud, but there is [o]no judgment.

8 He hath [p]fenced up my way that I cannot pass, and [q]he hath set darkness in my paths.

9 He hath [r]stripped me of my glory, and taken the crown from my head.

10 He hath [s]destroyed me on every side, and [t]I am gone; and [u]mine hope hath he removed like a tree.[1]

11 He hath also [v]kindled his wrath against me, and [w]he counteth me unto him as one of his enemies.

12 [x]His troops come together, and [y]raise up their way against me, and encamp round about my tabernacle.

13 He hath [z]put my brethren far from me, and mine acquaintance are verily [a]estranged from me.

14 My [b]kinsfolk have failed, and my [c]familiar friends have forgotten me.

15 They that [d]dwell in mine house, and my maids, [e]count me for a stranger: I am an alien in their sight.

16 I called [f]my servant, and he gave me no answer; I entreated him with my mouth.

17 My [g]breath is strange to my wife, though I entreated for the children's sake of mine own body.[2]

18 [h]Yea, [3]young children despised me; I arose, and they spake against me.

19 All my[4] inward friends abhorred me; and [i]they whom I loved are turned against me.

20 My [k]bone cleaveth to my skin and[5] to my flesh, [l]and I am escaped with the skin of my teeth.[6]

21 Have pity upon me,[7] [m]have pity upon me, O ye my friends; for [n]the hand of God hath touched me.

22 Why do ye [o]persecute me as God, [p]and are not satisfied with my flesh?

23 Oh[8] that [q]my words were now written! Oh that they were printed in a book!

24 That they were [r]graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock[9] for ever!

25 For [s]I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that [t]he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth:

26 And[10] though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet [u]in my flesh shall I see God:

27 Whom [v]I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another;[11] though[12] my reins be consumed within[13] me.

28 But ye should say, [w]Why persecute we him, seeing[14] [x]the root of the matter is found in me?

wrath bringeth the punishments of the sword, [z]that ye may know there is a judgment.[1]

CHAPTER XX.

Zophar sheweth in his turn the certain downfal and portion of the wicked, 1—29.

THEN answered [a]Zophar the Naamathite, and said,[2]

2 Therefore do [b]my thoughts cause me to answer, [c]and for this I[3] make haste.

3 I have heard [d]the check of my reproach, and [e]the spirit of my understanding causeth me to answer.

4 Knowest [f]thou not this of old, since [g]man was placed upon earth,

5 That [h]the triumphing of the wicked is short,[4] and [i]the joy of the hypocrite but for a moment?

6 Though [k]his excellency mount up to the heavens, and his head reach unto the clouds;[5]

7 Yet he shall [l]perish for ever like his own dung: they which have seen him [m]shall say, Where is he?

8 He shall [n]fly away as a dream, and shall not be found; yea, he shall be chased away as a vision of the night.

9 The [o]eye also which saw him shall see him no more; neither shall his place any more behold him.

10 His[6] children shall [p]seek to please the poor,[7] and [q]his hands shall restore their goods.

11 His [r]bones are full of the sin of his youth, [s]which shall lie down with him in the dust.

12 Though [t]wickedness be sweet in his mouth, though [u]he hide it under his tongue;

13 Though he [v]spare it, and forsake it not, but keep it still within[8] his mouth;

14 Yet [w]his meat in his bowels is turned, it is [x]the gall of asps within him.

15 He hath [y]swallowed down riches, and he shall vomit them up again: God shall cast them out of his belly.[9]

16 He shall suck the poison of asps; [z]the viper's tongue shall slay him.

17 He [a]shall not see [b]the rivers, the floods,[10] the brooks [c]of honey and butter.[11]

18 That which he laboured for shall[d] he restore, and shall not [e]swallow it down: according to his[1] substance shall the restitution be, [f]and he shall not rejoice therein.

19 Because [g]he hath [2]oppressed and hath forsaken the poor; because [h]he hath violently taken away an house which he builded not;

20 Surely [i]he shall not feel[3] quietness in his belly,[4] he shall not save of that which he desired.

21 There shall none[5] of his meat [k]be left; therefore shall no man look for his goods.

22 In [l]the fulness of his sufficiency he shall be in straits: [m]every hand of the wicked[6] shall come upon him.

23 When [n]he is about to fill his belly, God shall cast the fury of his wrath upon him, and shall [o]rain it upon him while he is eating.

24 He shall [p]flee from the iron weapon, and [q]the bow of steel shall [r]strike[7] him through.

25 It is [s]drawn, and cometh out of the body;[8] yea, the glittering sword cometh out of his gall: [t]terrors are upon him.

26 All [u]darkness shall be hid in his secret places:[9] [v]a fire not blown shall consume him; [w]it shall go ill with him that is left in his tabernacle.

27 The [x]heaven shall reveal his iniquity; and [y]the earth shall rise up against him.

28 The [z]increase of his house shall depart, [a]and his goods shall flow away in the day of his wrath.

29 This is [b]the portion of a wicked man from God, and the heritage [10]appointed unto him by God.

CHAPTER XXI.

Job sheweth that even in the judgment of man he hath reason to be grieved, 1—6. Sometimes the wicked do so prosper, that they are tempted to despise God, 7—15. Sometimes their destruction is manifest, 16—22. The happy and unhappy are alike in death, 23—26. The judgment of the wicked is in another world, 27—34.

BUT Job answered and said,

2 [a]Hear diligently my speech; and [b]let this be your consolations.

3 Suffer me [c]that I may speak; and after that I have spoken, [d]mock on.

4 As for me, [e]is my complaint to man? and [f]if it were so, why should not my spirit be troubled?[11]

5 Mark[12] me, and [g]be astonished, and [h]lay your hand upon your mouth.

6 Even [i]when I remember[13] I am afraid, and trembling taketh hold on my flesh.

7 [k]Wherefore do the wicked live, become old, yea, are [l]mighty in power?

8 Their [m]seed is established in their sight with them, and their offspring before their eyes.

9 Their houses are safe[1] from fear, neither is [n]the rod of God upon them.

10 Their bull gendereth, and faileth not; [o]their cow calveth, and casteth not her calf.

11 They [p]send forth their little ones like a flock, and their children dance.

12 They [q]take the timbrel and harp, and rejoice at the sound of the organ.

13 They [r]spend their days in wealth,[2] and in a moment[3] go down to the grave.

14 Therefore [s]they say unto God, Depart from us; [t]for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways.

15 What [u]is the Almighty, that we should serve him? and [v]what profit should we have, [w]if we pray unto him?

16 Lo, [x]their good is not in their hand: [y]the counsel of the wicked is far from me.

17 How [z]oft is the candle[4] of the wicked put out? and how oft cometh their destruction upon them? God distributeth[a] sorrows in his anger.

18 They are [b]as stubble before the wind, and as chaff that the storm carrieth[5] away.

19 God [c]layeth up his iniquity[6] for[d] his children: [e]he rewardeth him, and [f]he shall know it.

20 His eyes shall [g]see his destruction, and he shall [h]drink of the wrath of the Almighty.

21 For [i]what pleasure hath he in his house after him, when [k]the number of his months is cut off in the midst?

22 Shall any [l]teach God knowledge?[7] seeing [m]he judgeth those that are high.

23 One dieth in his full[8] strength, being wholly at ease and quiet:

24 [n]His breasts[9] are full of milk, and his bones are [o]moistened with marrow.

25 And another dieth [p]in the bitterness of his soul, and [q]never eateth with pleasure.

26 They shall lie down [r]alike in the dust, and [s]the worms shall cover them.

27 Behold, [t]I know your thoughts, and the devices which [u]ye wrongfully imagine against me.[1]

28 For ye say, [v]Where is the house of the prince? and where are the dwelling-places[2] of the wicked?

29 Have ye not asked them that [w]go by the way? and do ye not know their tokens, 30 That [x]the wicked is reserved to the day of destruction? they shall be brought forth to [y]the day of [3]wrath.

31 Who shall [z]declare his way to his face? and who shall [a]repay him what he hath done?

32 Yet shall [b]he be brought to the grave,[4] and shall remain[5] in the tomb.

33 The clods of the valley shall be [c]sweet unto him, and [d]every man shall draw after him, as there are innumerable before him.

34 How then [e]comfort ye me in vain, [f]seeing in your answers there remaineth falsehood?[6]

CHAPTER XXII.

Eliphaz sheweth that man's goodness profiteth not God, 1–4. He accuseth Job of divers sins, 5—20. He exhorteth him to repentance, with promises of mercy, 21—30.

THEN Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said,

2 Can [a]a man be profitable unto God, as[7] [b]he that is wise may be profitable unto himself?

3 Is it [c]any pleasure to the Almighty, that thou art righteous? or is it gain to him, that [d]thou makest thy ways perfect?

4 Will he [e]reprove thee [f]for fear of thee? [g]will he enter with thee into judgment?

5 Is [h]not thy wickedness great? and [i]thine iniquities infinite?

6 For [k]thou hast taken a pledge from thy brother for nought, [l]and stripped the naked of their [8]clothing.

7 Thou hast [m]not given water to the weary to drink, and thou hast withholden bread from the hungry.

8 But [n]as for the mighty[9] man, he had the earth; and the [10]honourable man dwelt in it.

9 Thou hast sent [o]widows away empty, and the [p]arms of the fatherless have been broken:

10 Therefore [q]snares are round about thee, and [r]sudden fear troubleth thee;

11 Or [s]darkness, that thou canst not see; and [t]abundance of waters cover thee.

12 Is [u]not God in the height of heaven? and behold the height[1] of the [v]stars, how high they are!

13 And thou sayest, How[2] [w]doth God know! can he judge through the dark cloud?

14 Thick [x]clouds are a covering to him, that he seeth not; and he walketh in the circuit of heaven.

15 Hast thou marked [y]the old way which wicked men have trodden?

16 Which were [z]cut down out of time, whose[3] foundation was overflown with a flood;[4]

17 Which said unto God, [a]Depart from us; [b]and what can the Almighty do for[5] them?

18 Yet [c]he filled their houses with good things: but [d]the counsel of the wicked is far from me.[6]

19 The [e]righteous see it, and are glad; and [f]the innocent laugh them to scorn

20 Whereas [g]our substance[7] is not cut down; but the[8] remnant of them[9] [h]the fire consumeth.

21 [i]Acquaint now thyself with him,[10] and [k]be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee.

22 [l]Receive, I pray thee, the law from his mouth, and [m]lay up his words in thine heart.

23 If thou [n]return to the Almighty, thou shalt be [o]built up, [p]thou shalt put away iniquity far from thy tabernacles.

24 Then shalt thou [q]lay up gold as[11] dust, and the gold of [r]Ophir as the stones of the brooks.

25 Yea, [s]the Almighty shall be thy defence,[12] and thou shalt have plenty of silver.[13]

26 For then [t]shalt thou have thy delight in the Almighty, and shalt lift[u] up thy face unto God.[14]

27 Thou shalt [v]make thy prayer unto him, and he shall hear thee, and thou shalt [w]pay thy vows.

28 Thou shalt also [x]decree a thing, and it shall be established unto thee; and [y]the light shall shine upon thy ways.[1]

29 When [z]men are cast down, then thou shalt say, There is lifting up; and [a]he shall save the[2] humble person.

30 He[3] shall deliver the island of the innocent; and it is delivered by the [b]pureness of thine hands.

CHAPTER. XXIII.

Job longeth to appear before God, 1—5; in confidence of being heard with mercy and acquitted, 6, 7. God, though invisible, observeth our ways, 8—10. Job's innocency, 11, 12. God's decree is immutable, 13—17.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 Even to-day is [a]my complaint bitter: my stroke[4] is [b]heavier than my groaning.[5]

3 [c]Oh that I knew [d]where I might find him! that [e]I might come even to his seat!

4 I would [f]order my cause before him, and [g]fill my mouth with arguments.

5 I would [h]know the words which he would answer me, and understand what he would say unto me.

6 Will he [i]plead against me with his great power? No; [k]but he would put strength in me.

7 There [l]the righteous might dispute with him; [m]so should I be delivered for ever from my Judge.[6]

8 Behold, [n]I go forward, but he is not there; and backward, but I cannot perceive him:

9 On the left hand, where he doth work, but I cannot behold him: [o]he hideth himself on the right hand, that I cannot see him.

10 But [p]he knoweth the[7] way that I take:[8] when [q]he hath tried me, [r]I shall come forth as gold.

11 My [s]foot hath held his steps; [t]his way have I kept, and not declined.

12 Neither [u]have I gone back from the commandment of his lips; [v]I have esteemed[9] the words of his mouth more than my necessary[10] food.

13 But he is in one mind, and [w]who can turn him? [x]and what his soul desireth, even that he doeth.

14 For he performeth the thing that is [y]appointed for me: and [z]many such things are with him.

15 Therefore [a]am I troubled at his presence: when I consider, I am afraid of him.

16 For God [b]maketh my heart soft, and [c]the Almighty troubleth me:

17 Because I was not [d]cut off before the darkness, neither hath he covered the[e] darkness from my face.[1]

CHAPTER XXIV.

Wickedness goeth often unpunished, 1—16. There is a secret judgment for the wicked, 17—25.

WHY, [a]seeing times are not hidden from the Almighty, do [b]they that know him [c]not see his days?[2]

2 Some remove the [d]land-marks: they [e]violently take away flocks, and feed[3] thereof:

3 They [f]drive away the ass of the fatherless; they take the widow's ox for a pledge;

4 They [g]turn the needy out of the way: the poor of the earth [h]hide[4] themselves together.

5 Behold, as [i]wild asses in the desert, go they forth to their work, rising[k] betimes for a prey: [l]the wilderness yieldeth food for them and for their children.[5]

6 They [m]reap every one his corn[6] in the field; and they gather[7] the vintage of the wicked:

7 They cause [n]the naked to lodge without clothing, that they have [o]no covering in the cold;

8 They are [p]wet with the showers of the mountains, and [q]embrace the rock for want of a shelter;

9 They [r]pluck the fatherless from the breast, and take a pledge of the poor;

10 They cause him to go naked without clothing, and [s]they take away the sheaf from the hungry;

11 Which [t]make oil within their walls, and tread their wine-presses, and suffer thirst.[8]

12 Men [u]groan from out of the city, and the soul of the [v]wounded crieth out; [w]yet God layeth not folly[9] to them.

13 They are of those that [x]rebel against the light; [y]they know not the ways thereof, [z]nor abide in the paths thereof.

14 The [a]murderer, rising with the light, killeth the poor and needy, and [b]in the night is as a thief.

15 The [c]eye also of the adulterer waiteth for the twilight, saying, [d]No eye shall see me; and disguiseth[1] his face.

16 In [e]the dark they dig through houses, which they had marked for themselves in the day-time: [f]they know not the light.

17 For the morning is to them even as the shadow of death: if one know them, they are [g]in the terrors of the shadow of death.

18 He is [h]swift as the waters; [i]their portion is cursed in the earth: he beholdeth[2] not the way of the vineyards.

19 [k]Drought and heat [3]consume the snow-waters; [l]so doth the grave those which have sinned.

20 The womb shall forget him; [m]the worm shall feed sweetly on him: [n]he shall be no more remembered; and [o]wickedness shall be broken as a tree.

21 He [p]evil entreateth the barren that beareth not, and [q]doeth not good to the widow.[4]

22 He [r]draweth also the mighty with his power; he riseth up, and no man is sure of life:[5]

23 Though [s]it be given him to be in safety [t]whereon he resteth, [u]yet his eyes are upon their ways.[6]

24 They [v]are exalted for a little while, but are gone[7] and brought low; they are taken[8] out of the way as all other, and [w]cut off as the tops of the ears of corn.[9]

25 And if it be not so now, [x]who will make me a liar, and make my speech nothing worth?

CHAPTER XXV.

Bildad asserteth the sovereignty of God, before whom man cannot be justified.

THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said,[10]

2 [a]Dominion and fear are with him; [b]he maketh peace in his high places.

3 Is [c]there any number of his armies? and [d]upon whom doth not his light arise?

4 [e]How then can man be justified with God? or [f]how can he be clean that is born of a woman?

5 Behold [g]even to the moon, and

CHAPTER XXVI.

Job, reproving the uncharitable spirit of Bildad, 1—4; acknowledgeth the power of God to be infinite and unsearchable, 5—14.

BUT Job answered and said,

2 [a]How hast thou [b]helped him that is without power? how savest thou the arm that hath no strength?

3 How hast thou [c]counselled him that hath no wisdom? and how [d]hast thou plentifully declared the thing as it is?

4 To whom hast thou uttered words? and [e]whose spirit came from thee?[1]

5 [f]Dead things[2] are formed from under the waters, and[3] the inhabitants thereof.

6 [g]Hell is naked before him, and destruction[h] hath no covering.

7 He [i]stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing.

8 He [k]bindeth up the waters in his [l]thick clouds; [m]and the cloud is not rent under them.

9 He [n]holdeth back the face of his throne, and spreadeth his cloud upon it.

10 He hath [o]compassed the waters with bounds, [p]until the day[4] and night come to an end.

11 The [q]pillars of heaven tremble, and [r]are astonished at his reproof.

12 He [s]divideth the sea with his power, and by his understanding [t]he smiteth through the[5] proud.

13 By [u]his spirit he hath garnished the heavens; his hand hath formed [v]the crooked serpent.

14 Lo, these are parts of his ways: but [w]how little a portion is heard of him? but [x]the thunder of his power who can understand?

CHAPTER XXVII.

Job protesteth his sincerity, 1—8. The hypocrite is without hope, 8—10. The blessings which the wicked possess are sometimes turned into curses, 11—23.

MOREOVER, [a]Job continued[6] his parable, and said,

1 Job is generally supposed in these verses, 2-4, to answer Bildad ironically—admiring the great help he had brought to his friends in their need, and how admirablyhe had settled the whole controversy. That surely he must have been indebted to some other spirit for such great wisdom! CHAPTER XXVIII.

There is a knowledge of natural things, 1—11. But wisdom is an excellent gift of God, 12—28.

SURELY there is a vein[2] for [a]the silver, and a place for gold [b]where they fine it.

2 [c]Iron is taken out of the earth,[3] and brass is molten out of the stone.

3 He setteth an end to darkness, and [d]searcheth out all perfection; the[e] stones of darkness, and the shadow of death.[4]

4 The flood breaketh out from the inhabitant; even the waters forgotten of the foot: they are dried up, they are gone away from men.[5]

5 As for the earth, [f]out of it cometh bread; and under it is turned up as it were [g]fire.

6 The stones of it are the place of sapphires;[h] and it hath dust[6] of gold.

7 There is [i]a path which no fowl knoweth, and which the vulture's eye hath not seen:

8 The lion's whelps have not trodden it, nor the fierce lion passed by it.

9 He putteth forth his hand upon the rock;[7] [k]he overturneth the mountains by the roots.

10 He cutteth out rivers among the rocks; and his eye seeth [l]every precious thing.

11 He [m]bindeth the floods from overflowing;[8] [n]and the thing that is hid bringeth he forth to light.[9]

12 But [o]where shall wisdom be found? and where is the place of understanding?

13 Man [p]knoweth not the price thereof; neither is it found [q]in the land of the living.

14 The [r]depth saith, It is not in me; and the sea saith, It is not with me.

15 It cannot be gotten for [10]gold, neither shall silver be weighed for the price thereof.

16 It cannot be valued with [s]the gold of Ophir, with the precious onyx,[t] or the sapphire.

Job here (ver. 12-19) maintained, that 'wisdom,' (or the knowledge of God, & his works and ways, which led to a prudent and holy practice, and might enable men to unravel the mysteries of Providence,) was far more difficult to be found, than the subterraneous treasures before spoken of. Indeed, men in general knew neither where it might be obtained, nor its inestimable value. It was not to be met with among the inhabitants of the earth, except as it came down from above.—Scott.

7 God in his wisdom created and regulates all his works, and he had the whole plan before him from the beginning. 'This implied, that as men could neither alter nor comprehend these works of God, they were equally unable to discover the methods of his providence. God had from the beginning plainly declared to man that his wisdom consisted not in the knowledge of the secrets of nature, or of the divine government, but in "fearing the Lord and departing from evil."'

CHAPTER XXIX.

Job calleth to mind his former prosperity and honour, and the worthy use he had made of it.

MOREOVER, Job [8]continued his parable, and said,[9]

2 Oh that I were [a]as in months past, as in the days when [b]God preserved me;

3 When [c]his candle[10] shined upon my head, and when [d]by his light I walked through darkness;

7 When I went out [i]to the gate through the city; when I prepared my seat in the street!

8 The [k]young men saw me, and [l]hid themselves; and the aged arose, and stood up.

9 The princes [m]refrained talking, and [n]laid their hand on their mouth.

10 The nobles[1] held their peace, and [o]their tongue cleaved to the roof of their mouth.

11 When [p]the ear heard me, then it blessed me; and when the eye saw me, it gave witness to me;

12 Because [q]I delivered the poor that cried, and [r]the fatherless, and him that had none to help him.

13 [s]The blessing of him that was ready[t] to perish came upon me: and I[u] caused the widow's heart to [v]sing for joy.

14 [w]I put on righteousness, and it clothed me: my judgment was as a robe and [x]a diadem.[2]

17 And [b]I brake the jaws[3] of the wicked, [c]and plucked[4] the spoil out of his teeth.[5]

18 Then I said, [d]I shall die in my nest,[6] and I shall [e]multiply my days [f]as the sand.

19 My [g]root was spread[7] out by the waters, and the dew lay all night upon my branch.

20 My [h]glory was fresh[8] in me, and my [i]bow [k]was renewed[9] in my hand.

21 Unto me men gave ear, and waited, and kept silence at my counsel.

22 [m]After my words they spake not again; and [n]my speech dropped upon them.

23 And they waited for me [o]as for the rain; and they opened their mouth wide as for [p]the latter rain.

24 If I laughed on them, [q]they believed it not: and [r]the light of my countenance they cast not down.[10]

CHAP. XXX.

CHAPTER XXX.

Job's honour is turned into extreme contempt, 1—14. His prosperity into the deepest distress, 15—31.

BUT now [a]they that are [1]younger than I have me in derision, [b]whose fathers I would have disdained to have set with the dogs of my [2]flock.

2 Yea, whereto might the strength of their hands profit me, in whom old age was perished?

3 For want and famine they were solitary;[3] [c]fleeing into the wilderness in[4] former time desolate and waste:

4 Who cut up mallows by the bushes, and juniper-roots [d]for their meat.

5 They were [e]driven forth from among men, (they cried after them as after a thief,)

6 To [f]dwell in the clefts of the valleys, in caves[5] of the earth, and in the rocks.

7 Among the bushes they [g]brayed; under the nettles they were gathered together.

8 They were [h]children of [i]fools, yea, children of base[6] men; they were [k]viler than the earth.

9 And now [l]am I their song; yea, I am their by-word.

10 They [m]abhor me, they [n]flee far from me, and spare[7] not to [o]spit in my face.[8]

11 Because he hath [p]loosed my cord, and afflicted me, they have also [q]let loose the bridle[9] before me.

12 Upon my right hand [r]rise the youth; they push away my feet, and [s]they raise up against me the ways of their destruction.

13 They mar my path; [t]they set forward my calamity; they have no helper.[10]

14 They came upon me [u]as a wide breaking in of waters: in the desolation they rolled themselves upon me.

15 [v]Terrors are turned upon me: they pursue my soul[11] as the wind; and my welfare passeth away [w]as a [12]cloud.

16 And now [x]my soul is poured out upon me; the days of affliction [y]have taken hold upon me.

17 [z]My bones are pierced in me [a]in the night season; and my sinews take no rest.

ease is my garment changed: it bindeth me about as the collar of my coat.[1]

19 He hath [c]cast me into the mire, and I am become like [d]dust and ashes.

20 [e]I cry unto thee, and thou dost not hear me;[2] I stand up, and thou regardest me not.

21 Thou art become[3] [f]cruel to me; with thy[4] [g]strong hand thou opposest thyself against me.

22 Thou [h]liftest me up to the wind; thou causest me [i]to ride upon it, and dissolvest my substance.[5]

CHAPTER XXXI.

Job maketh a solemn protestation of his integrity in several duties.

I MADE [a]a covenant with mine eyes;[10] why then should I [b]think upon a maid?

2 For [c]what portion of God is there from above? and what inheritance of the Almighty from on high?[11]

3 Is not [d]destruction to the wicked? and [e]a strange punishment to the workers of iniquity?

4 [f]Doth not he see my ways, and count all my steps?

5 [g]If I have [h]walked with vanity, or if my foot hath hasted to deceit;

6 Let[12] me be [i]weighed in an even balance, that God may [k]know mine integrity.

7 [l]If my step hath turned out of the way, and [m]mine heart walked after mine eyes, and if any blot hath [n]cleaved to mine hands;

8 Then [o]let me sow, and let another eat; yea, [p]let my offspring be rooted out.

9 [q]If mine heart hath been deceived by a woman, or [r]if I have laid wait at my neighbour's door;

10 Then let my wife [s]grind unto another, [t]and let others bow down upon her.

11 For this is [u]an heinous crime; yea, it is [v]an iniquity to be punished by the judges.

12 For it is [w]a fire that consumeth to destruction, and would root out all mine increase.[1]

13 If I did despise [x]the cause of my man-servant,[2] or of my maid-servant, when they contended with me;

14 [y]What then shall I do when God riseth up? and [z]when he visiteth, [a]what shall I answer him?

15 [b]Did[3] not he that made me in the womb make him? and did[3] not one fashion us in the womb?

16 If I have [c]withheld the poor from their desire, or have caused [d]the eyes of the widow to fail;

17 Or [e]have eaten my morsel myself alone, and [f]the fatherless hath not eaten thereof;

18 (For from my youth he was brought up with me, as with a father, and I have guided her[4] from my mother's womb;)[5]

19 If I have seen any [g]perish for want of clothing, or any poor without covering;

20 If [h]his loins have not blessed me, and if he were not warmed with the fleece of my sheep;

21 If I have [i]lifted up my hand against the fatherless, [k]when I saw my help in the gate:

22 Then [l]let mine arm fall from my shoulder-blade, and mine arm be broken from the bone.[6]

23 For [m]destruction from God was a terror to me, and [n]by reason of his highness I could not endure.[7]

But as he abhorred such a thought, so he equally abhorred the thought of adultery: knowing that it was hateful to God, destructive of the peace of society, justly punishable by the civil magistrate, and utterly ruinous to the soul of the party guilty of it, consuming it like a fire, and poisoning and destroying all social and domestic happiness.

3 Elihu, who was present during the dispute, but had not spoken, now takes up the argument. He alleged, with truth, that Job was more disposed to justify himself than the dealings of God with him. He finds fault with both parties in the argument, and from this, to the end of the 37th chapter, exposes their errors, and magnifies in sublime langunge the supremacy of God.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Elihu is angry with Job and his three friends, 1—5. Because wisdom cometh not from age, he excuseth the boldness of his youth, 6—10. He reproveth them for not satisfying of Job, 11—15. His zeal to speak, 16—22.

SO these three men ceased to[1] answer Job, because he was [a]righteous in his own eyes.
2 Then was [b]kindled the wrath of Elihu the son of Barachel the [c]Buzite, of the kindred of Ram; against Job was his wrath kindled, [d]because he justified himself[2] rather than God.[3]
3 Also against his three friends was his wrath kindled, [e]because they had found no answer, [f]and yet had condemned Job.
4 Now Elihu had waited[4] till Job had spoken, because they were [5]elder than he.
5 When Elihu saw that there was no answer in the mouth of these three men, then [g]his wrath was kindled.
6 And Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite answered and said, [h]I am young,[6] and [i]ye are very old; wherefore I was afraid, and durst[7] not shew you mine opinion.
7 I said, [k]Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom.
8 But there is a spirit in man; and [l]the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding.
9 [m]Great men are not always wise; [n]neither do the aged understand judgment.
10 Therefore I said, [o]Hearken to me; I also will shew mine opinion.
11 Behold, [p]I waited for your words; I gave ear to your [8]reasons, [q]whilst ye searched out what[9] to say.
12 Yea, I attended unto you; and, [r]behold, there was none of you that convinced[10] Job, or that answered his words;
13 [s]Lest ye should say, [t]We have found out wisdom: [u]God thrusteth him down, not man.
14 Now, he hath not directed[11] his words against me; neither will I answer him with your speeches.[12]
15 They were [v]amazed; they answered no more; they left[13] off speaking.

spake not, but stood still, and answered no more,)

17 I said, [z]I will answer also my part; I also will shew mine opinion.

18 For I am full of matter;[1] [y]the spirit within[2] me constraineth me.

19 Behold, my belly is as wine which[3] hath no vent; it is ready to burst like [z]new bottles.[4]

20 [a]I will speak, that I may be[5] refreshed: [b]I will open my lips and answer.

21 Let me not, I pray you, [c]accept any man's person; neither let me give [d]flattering titles unto man.

22 For [e]I know not to give flattering titles;[6] in so doing my Maker would soon take me away.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Elihu offereth himself instead of God, with sincerity and meekness, to reason with Job, 1—7. He excuseth God from giving man an account of his ways, by his greatness, 8—13. God calleth man to repentance by visions, 14—18; by afflictions, 19—22; and by his ministers, 23—30. He inciteth Job to attention, 31—33.

WHEREFORE, Job, I pray thee, [a]hear my speeches, and hearken to all my words.

2 Behold, now [b]I have opened my mouth, my tongue hath spoken in my mouth.[7]

3 My words shall be of [c]the uprightness of my heart; and [d]my lips shall utter knowledge clearly.

4 [e]The Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life.

5 [f]If thou canst answer me, [g]set thy words in order before me, [h]stand up.

6 Behold, [i]I am according to thy wish[8] [k]in God's stead: [l]I also am formed[9] out of the clay.

7 Behold, [m]my terror shall not make thee afraid, neither shall [n]my hand be heavy upon thee.[10]

8 Surely thou hast spoken in mine hearing,[11] and I have heard the voice of thy words, saying,

9 I am [o]clean without transgression, I am [p]innocent; neither is there iniquity in me.

10 Behold, [q]he findeth occasions against me, [r]he counteth me for his enemy;

11 He [s]putteth my feet in the stocks, [t]he marketh all my paths.

12 Behold, in this[12] [u]thou art not just: [v]I will answer thee, that [w]God is greater than man.

13 Why dost thou [x]strive against him? for [y]he giveth[1] not account of any of his matters.

14 For [z]God speaketh once, yea, twice, yet man [a]perceiveth it not.

15 In [b]a dream, in a vision of the night, when [c]deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed;

16 Then [d]he openeth[2] the ears of men, and [e]sealeth their instruction,

17 That he may [f]withdraw man from his purpose,[3] and [g]hide pride from man.

18 He [h]keepeth back his soul from the pit, and his life from [4]perishing by the sword.

19 He is [i]chastened also with pain [k]upon his bed, and the multitude of his bones with strong pain:

20 So that [l]his life abhorreth bread, and his soul dainty[5] meat.

21 [m]His flesh is consumed away, that it cannot be seen; and [n]his bones that were not seen stick out.

22 Yea, [o]his soul draweth near unto the grave, and [p]his life to the destroyers.

23 If there be [q]a messenger with him, [r]an interpreter, [s]one among a thousand, [t]to shew unto man his uprightness;

24 [u]Then he is gracious unto him, and saith, [v]Deliver him from going down to the pit; [w]I have found [6]a ransom.

25 [x]His flesh shall be fresher than a child's:[7] he shall [y]return to the days of his youth:

26 He shall [z]pray unto God, and he will be favourable unto him; [a]and he shall see his face with joy: for [b]he will render unto man his righteousness.

27 [c]He looketh[8] upon men; and if any say, I have sinned, and [d]perverted that which was [e]right, and [f]it profited me not;

28 He will[9] [g]deliver his soul from going into the pit, and his life shall [h]see the light.

29 Lo, all these things worketh God oftentimes[10] with man,

10 Elihu had given his reasons for speaking, and here he demanded the attention of Job in particular; for Job himself had sufficiently answered his friends. He meant to speak his undisguised sentiments in the plainest and most instructive manner; he was the creature of God, dependent on him, and accountable to him; from whose life-giving spirit he derived his being, and rational nature. Job might therefore stand up before him to make the best of his cause. He had desired an impartial judge to be appointed in God's stead, to decide upon his appeal. He had now a man like himself, who would deal justly and tenderly by him.

12 In this thing at least, Elihu maintained that Job had been culpable; he had charged God foolishly and unjustly, as if his dealings with him were causelessly severe. But he ought to have recollected the infinite greatness of the Almighty sovereign, which made it the height of madness and presumption to contend with him.

31 [l]Mark well, O Job; hearken unto me: hold thy peace, and I will speak.

32 If thou hast any thing to say, answer me:[1] speak; [m]for I desire to justify thee.

33 If not, [n]hearken unto me: hold thy peace, and [o]I shall teach thee wisdom.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Elihu accuseth Job for charging God with injustice, 1—9. God omnipotent cannot be unjust, 10—30. Man must humble himself before God, 31—33. Job is blamed for his rash discourses, 34—37.

FURTHERMORE, Elihu answered and said,

2 Hear my words, [a]O ye wise men, and give ear unto me, ye that have knowledge:

3 For [b]the ear trieth words, as the mouth[2] tasteth meat.

4 Let us [c]choose to us judgment;[3] let us [d]know among ourselves what is good.

5 For Job hath said, [e]I am righteous: and [f]God hath taken away my judgment.

6 Should [g]I lie against my right? my wound[4] is incurable without transgression.[5]

7 What man is like Job, who drinketh[h] up scorning like water?

8 Which [i]goeth in company with the workers of iniquity, and walketh with wicked men.

9 For he hath said, [k]It profiteth a man nothing that he should [l]delight himself with God.

10 Therefore hearken unto me, ye men of understanding:[6] [m]far be it from God, that he should do wickedness; and from the Almighty, that he should commit iniquity.

11 For [n]the work of a man shall he render unto him, and [o]cause every man to find according to his ways.

12 Yea, [p]surely God will not do wickedly, neither will the Almighty pervert[7] judgment.

13 [r]Who hath given him a charge over the earth? or who hath disposed the whole world?[7]

14 If he [s]set his heart upon[8] man, if [t]he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath;

1 Elihu again demanded Job's attention, as he had much more to say; but if he could answer any thing to what he had urged, he would have him speak before he proceeded; for he greatly desired to find that he was a righteous man, and to clear up his aspersed character. But if Job could not refute his charge, let him be silent, and he would proceed to instruct him further in true wisdom. It seems that Job was so far convinced by his discourse, that he would not attempt an answer.

And he goes on to urge that this conduct ranked Job among the greatest of scorners; because he united with wicked men in maintaining that there was no profit in serving God.

15 [u]All flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto [1]dust.

16 If now [v]thou hast understanding, hear this; hearken to the voice of my words:

17 Shall [w]even he that hateth right govern?[2] and [x]wilt thou condemn him that is most just?

18 Is it fit [y]to say to a king, Thou art wicked? and to princes, Ye are ungodly?

19 How much less to him that [z]accepteth not the persons of [a]princes, nor [b]regardeth the rich more than the poor? for [c]they all are the work of his hands.

20 In [d]a moment shall they die, and the people shall be [e]troubled at midnight, and pass away; and the[3] mighty shall be taken away [f]without hand.

21 For [g]his eyes are upon the ways of man, and he seeth all his goings.

22 There is [h]no darkness, [i]nor shadow of death, where [k]the workers of iniquity may hide themselves.

23 For [l]he will not lay upon man more than right, [m]that he should enter[4] into judgment with God.

24 He shall [n]break in pieces mighty men without number,[5] and [o]set others in their stead.

25 Therefore [p]he knoweth their works, and he overturneth them [q]in the night, so that they are [6]destroyed.

26 He striketh them as wicked men [r]in the open[7] sight of others;[8]

27 Because they [s]turned back from[9] him, and [t]would not consider any of his ways:

28 So that [u]they cause the cry of the poor to come unto him, [v]and he heareth the cry of the afflicted.

29 [w]When he giveth quietness, who then can make trouble? and [x]when he hideth his face, [y]who then can behold him? [z]whether it be done against a nation, or against a man only:

30 [a]That the hypocrite reign not, lest the people be ensnared.

31 Surely [b]it is meet to be said unto God, I have borne chastisement, I will not offend any more:

32 That [c]which I see not, teach thou me; [d]if I have done iniquity, I will do no more.

33 [e] Should it be according[1] to thy mind?[2] [f] he will recompense it, [g] whether thou refuse, or whether thou choose; and not I: therefore speak what[h] thou knowest.

34 Let men of understanding[3] tell me, and let a wise man hearken unto me.

35 Job [i] hath spoken without knowledge, and his words were without wisdom.

36 My[4] desire is, that Job may be tried[k] unto the end, because of [l] his answers for wicked men.[5]

37 For he addeth [m] rebellion unto his [n] sin; he clappeth his hands among us, and [o] multiplieth his words against God.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Comparison is not to be made with God, because our good or evil cannot extend unto him, 1—8. Many cry in their afflictions, but are not heard for want of faith, 9—16.

ELIHU spake moreover, and said, 2 [a] Thinkest thou this to be right, that thou saidst, [b] My righteousness is more than God's?[6]

3 For thou saidst, [c] What advantage will it be unto thee? and, What profit shall I have, if[7] I be cleansed from my sin?

4 I will answer[8] thee, and [d] thy companions[9] with thee.

5 [e] Look unto the heavens, and see; and behold [f] the clouds, which are higher than thou.

6 If thou sinnest, [g] what doest thou against him? or if thy transgressions be multiplied, what doest thou unto him?

7 If thou be righteous, [h] what givest thou him? or what receiveth he of thine hand?

8 Thy wickedness [i] may hurt a man as thou art, and thy righteousness [k] may profit the son of man.

9 By reason of the multitude of oppressions [l] they make the oppressed to cry; they cry out by reason of the [m] arm of the mighty.

10 But [n] none saith, [o] Where is God my [p] Maker, [q] who giveth songs in the night;[10]

11 Who [r] teacheth us more than the beasts of the earth, and maketh us wiser than the fowls of heaven?

12 [s] There they cry, but none giveth answer, [t] because of the pride of evil men.

13 Surely [u] God will not hear vanity, neither will the Almighty [v] regard it.

14 Although [w] thou sayest thou shalt not see him, [x] yet judgment is before him; therefore [y] trust thou in him.

15 But now, [z] because it is not so, he[1] hath [a] visited in his anger; yet [2] he knoweth it not [b] in great extremity:

16 Therefore doth Job [c] open his mouth in vain; he multiplieth words without knowledge.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Elihu showeth how God is just in his ways, 1—15. How Job's sins hinder God's blessings, 16—23. God's works are to be magnified, 24—33.

ELIHU also proceeded, and said, 2 [a] Suffer me a little, and I will shew thee that I[3] have yet to speak [b] on God's behalf.

3 I will [c] fetch my knowledge from afar, and will [d] ascribe righteousness to my Maker.

4 For truly [e] my words shall not be false: he that is [f] perfect [g] in knowledge is with thee.

5 Behold, God is mighty, and [h] despiseth not any: he is [i] mighty in strength and wisdom.[4]

6 He [k] preserveth not the life of the wicked: but [l] giveth right to the [5] poor.

7 He [m] withdraweth not his eyes from the righteous: but [n] with kings are they on the throne; yea, [o] he doth establish them for ever, and they are exalted.

8 And [p] if they be bound in fetters, and be holden in [q] cords of affliction;

9 Then [r] he sheweth them their work, and [s] their transgressions that they have exceeded.

10 He [t] openeth also their ear to discipline, and [u] commandeth that they return from iniquity.

11 [v] If they obey and serve him, they shall [w] spend their days in prosperity, and their years in [6] pleasures.

12 But [x] if they obey not, they shall perish[7] by the sword, and they shall [y] die without knowledge.

13 But the hypocrites in heart [z] heap up wrath; [a] they cry not when he [b] bindeth them.

6 Elihu proceeds still in this chapter to declare what he supposed the true doctrine of Divine providence,—that God, though exalted, did not despise the meanest of his creatures, and that if the proper ends of affliction were accomplished in them, & they submitted to his corrections, and would obey him, & depart from iniquity, temporal prosperity would be the issue. If not, the reverse.

14 They[1] [c]die in youth, and their life is among the unclean.[2]

15 He [d]delivereth the [3]poor in his affliction, and [e]openeth their ears in oppression:

16 Even so[4] would he have removed thee out of the strait into [f]a broad place, where there is no straitness; and that[5] which should be set on thy table should be [g]full of fatness.

17 But thou hast [h]fulfilled[6] the judgment of the wicked: judgment and justice take[7] hold on thee.

18 [i]Because there is wrath, beware lest he take thee away with [k]his stroke: [l]then a great ransom cannot deliver[8] thee.

19 [m]Will he esteem thy riches? no, not gold, [n]nor all the forces of strength.

20 [o]Desire not the night,[9] when people are [p]cut off in their place.

21 Take heed, [q]regard not iniquity: for [r]this hast thou chosen rather than affliction.

22 Behold, [s]God exalteth by his power: [t]who teacheth like him?

23 [u]Who hath enjoined him his way? or who can say, [v]Thou hast wrought iniquity?

24 Remember that thou [w]magnify his work, [x]which men behold.

25 Every man may see it; man may behold it afar off.

26 Behold, [y]God is great, and [z]we know him not, [a]neither can the number of his years be searched out.

27 For [b]he maketh small the drops of water: they pour down rain according to [c]the vapour thereof, 28 Which [d]the clouds do drop and distil upon man abundantly.

29 Also can any understand [e]the spreadings of the clouds, or [f]the noise of his tabernacle?

30 Behold, [g]he spreadeth his light upon it, [h]and covereth the bottom[10] of the sea.

31 For [i]by them judgeth he the people; [k]he giveth meat in abundance.

32 [l]With clouds he covereth the light; and commandeth it not to shine, by the cloud that cometh betwixt.

33 The [m]noise thereof sheweth concerning it, [n]the cattle also concerning the[1] vapour.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

God is to be feared because of his great works, 1—14. His wisdom is unsearchable in them, 15—24.

AT this[2] also [a]my heart trembleth, and is moved out of his place.

2 Hear[3] attentively [b]the noise of his voice, and the sound that goeth out of his mouth.

3 [c]He directeth it under the whole heaven, and his lightning[4] unto the ends of the earth.[5]

4 After it [d]a voice roareth: he thundereth with [e]the voice of his excellency; and [f]he will not stay [6]them when his voice is heard.

5 God [g]thundereth marvellously with his voice: [h]great things doeth he, which we cannot comprehend.

6 For [i]he saith to the snow, Be thou on the earth; likewise[7] to the small rain, and to the [k]great rain of his strength.

7 [l]He sealeth up[8] the hand of every man; [m]that all men may know his work.

8 Then [n]the beasts go into dens, and remain in their places.

9 Out of the south[9] cometh [o]the whirlwind; and cold out of the [10]north.

10 By the breath of God [p]frost is given; and the breadth of the waters is straitened.

11 Also by watering [q]he wearieth the thick cloud;[11] [r]he scattereth [12]his bright cloud, 12 And [s]it is turned round about by his counsels;[13] [t]that they may do whatsoever he commandeth them upon the face of the world in the earth.

13 He causeth it to come, [u]whether for correction,[14] or [v]for his land, or [w]for mercy.

14 Hearken unto this, O Job: [x]stand still, and [y]consider the wondrous works of God.

15 [z]Dost thou know[15] when God disposed them, and caused [a]the light of his cloud to shine?

16 Dost thou know [b]the balancings of the clouds, the wondrous works of him which is [c]perfect in knowledge?

17 How thy garments are warm when [d]he quieteth the earth by the south wind?[1]

18 Hast thou with him [e]spread out the sky, which is strong, and [f]as a molten looking-glass?

19 [g]Teach us what we shall say unto him; for [h]we cannot order our speech by reason of darkness.

20 [i]Shall it be told him that I speak? If a man speak, [k]surely he shall be swallowed up.[2]

21 And now men [l]see not the bright light which is in the clouds; but the wind passeth, and cleanseth them.

22 Fair[3] [m]weather cometh out of the north: [n]with God is terrible majesty.

23 Touching the Almighty, [o]we cannot find him out: he is [p]excellent in power, and [q]in judgment, and in plenty of justice: [r]he will not afflict.

24 Men do therefore [s]fear him: he [t]respecteth not any that are wise of heart.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

God out of the whirlwind challengeth Job to answer, 1—3. God, by his mighty works, convinceth Job of ignorance, 4—30; and of weakness, 31—41.

THEN the LORD answered Job [a]out of the whirlwind, and said,[4]

2 Who is this that [b]darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge?

3 [c]Gird up now thy loins like a man; [d]for I will demand of thee, and answer[5] thou me.

4 [e]Where wast thou when [f]I laid the foundations of the earth? declare, if thou hast[6] understanding.

5 Who hath [g]laid the measures thereof, if thou knowest? or [h]who hath stretched the line upon it?

6 [i]Whereupon are the foundations[7] thereof fastened?[8] or who laid [k]the corner-stone thereof,

7 When [l]the morning-stars sang together, and all [m]the sons of God shouted[n] for joy?

8 Or [o]who shut up the sea with doors, when it brake forth, as if it had issued [p]out of the womb?

9 When I made the cloud the garment thereof, and [q]thick darkness a swaddling-band for it,

10 And brake[9] up for it my decreed place, and set bars and doors,

11 And said, [r]Hitherto shalt thou come, [s]but no farther; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed?[1]

12 Hast thou [t]commanded the morning [u]since thy days; and caused [v]the day-spring to know his place;

13 That it might [w]take hold of the ends[2] of the earth, that [x]the wicked might be shaken out of it?

14 It is turned as clay to the seal; and they stand [y]as a garment.

15 And [z]from the wicked their light is withholden, and [a]the high arm shall be broken.[3]

16 Hast thou entered into [b]the springs of the sea? or hast thou [c]walked in the search of the depth?

17 Have [d]the gates of death been opened unto thee? or hast thou seen the doors of [e]the shadow of death?

18 Hast thou perceived [f]the breadth of the earth? declare if thou knowest it all.

19 Where is [g]the way where light dwelleth? and as for [h]darkness, where is the place thereof, 20 That thou shouldest take it [4]to the bound thereof, and that thou shouldest know the paths to the house thereof?

21 Knowest thou it, [i]because thou wast then born?[5] or because the number of thy days is great?

22 Hast thou entered into [k]the treasures of the snow; or hast thou seen the treasures of the hail,

23 [l]Which I have reserved against the time of trouble, against the day of battle and war?

24 By what way is [m]the light parted, which scattereth the east wind upon the earth?[6]

25 Who hath [n]divided a watercourse for the overflowing of waters; or a way for the lightning of thunder;

26 To cause it to rain on the earth, where no man is; [o]on the wilderness, wherein there is no man;

27 To satisfy the desolate and waste ground; and to cause the bud of the tender herb to spring forth?

4 Here commences part six. The trial of faith, resignation, & integrity, is now drawing to an end. The opponents of Job, and through them, the arch-demon by whom they were excited, have been baffled in their utmost exertions; yet though silenced, they still refuse to retract. The Almighty now visibly appears, to pronounce judgment, & 'speaks to Job out of the whirlwind,' and the address ascribed to him is a most astonishing combination of dignity, sublimity, grandeur, and condescension. — *Good's Introd. That it denotes the Pleiades, a cluster of stars in the constellation Taurus, is generally agreed.
3 The word is Kesil. which denotes a fool; but as this has no apparent signification, we may recur to the Arabic meaning, which is cold, inactivity, torpor—a very significant name, for it is evidently the name of a constellation, the appearance of which denoted the approach of winter, as contrasted with the Kimah, (Pleiades,) which announced the presence of spring.—*Pict. 1 Zenophon in his Anabasis describing the part of the desert of Arabia, through which the Greeks passed, says, 'Of wild creatures the most numerous were wild asses, with plenty of ostriches, besides bustard and roe deer. which afforded sport to our horsemen. The wild ass, however, being swifter of foot than our horses, would, on gaining ground upon them, stand still and look around; & when their pursuers got nearly up to them, they would start up and repeat the same task; so that there remained to the hunters no other method of taking them, but by dividing themselves into dispersed parties, which succeeded each other in the chase.' In Persia the wild ass is prized above all other animals as an object of chase, not only from its fleetness, but the delicacy of its flesh, which made it a luxury even at royal tables.

5 Good renders this verse thus: 'The wing of the ostrich tribe is for flapping, that of the stork and the falcon for flight.' The ostrich runs with such very great speed by the strength of its legs and the flapping of its wings that it will outrun the fleetest horse. She lays her eggs in a hole in the saud, which preserves their vital warmth, & she leaves them for hours when she goes in quest of food. And from the prevailing accounts of the people of the countries she inhabits, it is evident she is, like the crocodile much more careless of her young than other creatures are.

CHAPTER XL.

God challengeth an answer, 1, 2. Job humbleth himself, 3—5. God calleth upon Job to show by instances of power that he is able to save himself, 6—14. God's great power is seen in the behemoth. 15—24.

MOREOVER, [a]the LORD answered Job, and said,[2]

2 [b]Shall he that contendeth with the Almighty [c]instruct[3] him? [d]he that reproveth God, let him answer it.

3 ¶ Then Job answered the LORD, and said,

4 [e]Behold, I am vile; [f]what shall I answer thee? [g]I will lay mine hand upon my mouth.

5 Once have I spoken, [h]but I will not answer; yea, [i]twice, [k]but I will proceed no further.[4]

6 ¶ Then answered the LORD unto Job [l]out of the whirlwind, and said,

7 [m]Gird up thy loins now like a man: I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto me.

8 [n]Wilt thou also [o]disannul my judgment? [p]wilt thou condemn me, that thou mayest be righteous?

9 [q]Hast thou an arm like God? or canst[r] thou thunder with a voice like him?

10 [s]Deck thyself now with [t]majesty and excellency, and array thyself with [u]glory and beauty.

11 [v]Cast abroad the rage of thy wrath; and [w]behold every one that is proud, and abase him.[5]

12 Look on everyone that is proud, and bring him low; and tread down the wicked [x]in their place.

13 [y]Hide them in the dust together, and [z]bind their faces in secret.

14 Then will I also confess unto thee [a]that thine own right hand can save thee.

15 ¶ Behold now behemoth,[1b] which I made with thee; [c]he eateth grass as an ox.

16 Lo now, his strength is in his loins, and his force is in the navel of his belly.

17 He moveth[2] his tail like a cedar: [d]the sinews of his stones are wrapped together.

18 His [e]bones are as strong pieces of brass; his bones are like bars of iron.

19 He is [f]the chief of the ways of God: [g]he that made him can make his sword to approach unto him.

20 Surely [h]the mountains bring him forth food, [i]where all the beasts of the field play.

21 He lieth under the shady trees, in the covert of [k]the reed, and fens.

22 The shady trees cover him with their shadow; [l]the willows of the brook compass him about.

23 Behold, he[3] drinketh up a river, and [m]hasteth not: he trusteth that he can draw up [n]Jordan[4] into his mouth.

24 He[5] taketh it with his eyes; his nose pierceth through snares.

2 Canst thou [a]put an hook into his nose? or bore his jaw through with a thorn?

3 Will he make many supplications unto thee? [b]will he speak soft words unto thee?

4 [c]Will he make a covenant with thee? [d]wilt thou take him for [e]a servant for ever?

5 Wilt thou [f]play with him as with a bird? or wilt thou [g]bind him for thy maidens?

2 It is probable that the voice from the whirlwind ceased for a short space, that Job might speak, if he could make any reply; but as he continued silent, God answered his very thoughts, and in few words showed him what he intended by his multiplied questions. Job had complained of the Lord's dispensations, as if he meant to 'contend with him,' ch. 23. 3-7; 31. 35-37; but could Job give him any instructions how to govern the world? 4 No doubt, say the writers in the Pict. Bible, Bochart and others are right in understanding that Jordan is here put by a figure for any large and deep stream, such as Jordan was at the time of its overflowing. In our version, the verse has no meaning with reference to any animal that the behemoth has been supposed to represent. More clearly understood, it well applies to an amphibious animal. Although Boothroyd understands behemoth to be the elephant, his translation of this verse agrees much better with the river-horse:

'Lo, should a river overflow, he hasteneth not;
He is secure, though Jordan rush to his mouth.'

3 Pliny admires a bold and dangerous undertaking which the Tentyritæ, and no others, dared to practise against the crocodile. They contrived to get upon its back when in the water; and when the astonished animal threw up its head, with open mouth, attempting to bite, then they seized the opportunity of inserting a stake transversely between its jaws, and taking hold of the opposite ends with each hand, they held him, as it were with a bit and bridle, and thus brought him to land as a prisoner, &c. This account seems confirmed by a representation of an Egyptian tumbler on the back of a crocodile on the marble of the Townley collection. Yet such a feat does not seem to have been known in the days of Job, and from the question in the text, seems to have been regarded as impossible.

THEN Job answered the LORD, and said,

2 I know that [a]thou canst do every thing, and that [b]no thought can[3] be withholden from thee.[4]

3 [c]Who is he that hideth counsel without knowledge? therefore have I uttered that I understood not; [d]things too wonderful for me, which I knew not.

4 [e]Hear, I beseech thee, and I will speak: [f]I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto me.

5 I have [g]heard of thee by the hearing of the ear; but now [h]mine eye seeth thee:

6 Wherefore [i]I abhor myself, and [k]repent in dust and ashes.[5]

7 ¶ And it was so, that, after the LORD had spoken these words unto Job, the LORD said to [l]Eliphaz the Temanite, [m]My wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends: for [n]ye have not spoken of me the thing that is right, as my servant Job hath.

8 Therefore take unto you now [o]seven bullocks and seven rams, and [p]go to my servant Job, and [q]offer up for yourselves a burnt-offering,[6] and [r]my servant Job shall pray for you; for him[7] will I accept; [s]lest I deal with you after your folly, in that ye have not spoken of me the thing which is right, like my servant Job.

9 ¶ So Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite, went and [t]did according as the LORD commanded them: the LORD also accepted Job.[1]

10 And the LORD [u]turned the captivity[2] of Job, [v]when he prayed for his friends: also [w]the LORD [x]gave Job twice as much as he had before.

11 Then came there unto him [y]all his brethren, and all his sisters, and all they that had been of his acquaintance before, and did eat bread with him in his house; and [z]they bemoaned him, and comforted him over all the evil that the LORD had brought upon him: [a]every man also gave him a piece of money, and every one an ear-ring of gold.

12 [b]So the LORD blessed the latter end of Job more than his beginning: for [c]he had fourteen thousand sheep, and six thousand camels, and a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she-asses.

13 He had also [d]seven sons and three daughters.

14 And he called the name of the first, Jemima; and the name of the second, Kezia; and the name of the third, Keren-happuch.[1]

15 And in all the land were [e]no women found so fair as the daughters of Job: and their father [f]gave them inheritance among their brethren.

16 ¶ After this lived Job [g]an hundred and forty years, [h]and saw his sons, and his sons' sons, even four generations.

17 So Job died, being old, and [i]full of days.[2]

Thus, in every particular, his integrity was evidenced by those very testimonies which his friends had improperly demanded. His longevity is strong proof that he lived at a very early period.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF JOB.

IN addition to the few general remarks on this book which have been given in the introduction, we beg to select a few passages from a very able and valuable writer there referred to, viz., Magee on the Atonement. 'I have now enumerated,' says he, 'all the arguments deserving any notice, which have been urged against the antiquity of the book of Job. How conjectural, unfounded, and futile, most of them are, and inconclusive others, it is not difficult to discover. This is indeed what they tend to show, that the more the objections against the antiquity of this book are examined, the stronger will the arguments be found in favour of it. In addition, however, to what has appeared, there are some positive proofs which have been advanced, and which are not a little worthy of consideration. Bishop Patrick has observed, in his Preface to Job, that though there is plain mention of the deluge, and the burning of Sodom, there is no allusion to the drowning of Pharaoh, and the other miraculous works attending the deliverance of the Israelites from Egypt. And that Elihu, when expressly reckoning up the different modes of revelation, takes no notice of the revelation made to Moses. These omissions, however, as well as the want of reference to the Mosaic rites, though they furnish a decisive proof against the late age of the book, on the supposition of the author being a Jew, yet do so, it must be confessed, only upon that supposition. But it will not be easy to account for the circumstance of the book's containing no allusion to "any one piece of history later than Moses," (Sherl. Use of Proph. p. 207,) upon any hypothesis, that places its date lower than the age of the Jewish lawgiver.'

'Now, if to these considerations be added the characters of antiquity attached to the subject, the conduct, and the language of the work, some of which have already appeared in the discussion of the foregoing objections, and which are in general so strikingly obvious, as to constrain even those who contend for the late production of the work to represent it as written in imitation of early manners:—if we admit with Peters, (Crit. Diss. p. 143,) that there are expressions in this book, of a stamp so ancient, that they are not to be met with in the Chaldee, Syriac, or any other language at present known: and that many which rarely occur elsewhere, and are difficult to be explained, are here to be found in their primitive and most simple forms:—if, in short, there be on the whole, that genuine air of the antique which those distinguished scholars, Schultens, Lowth, and Michaelis, affirm in every respect to pervade the work, we can scarcely hesitate to pronounce with Lowth and Sherlock, that the book of Job is the oldest in the world now extant.'

Again, 'There seems then, upon the whole, sufficient ground for the conclusion, that this book was not the production of Moses, but of some earlier age; and there appears no good reason to suppose that it was not written by Job himself.'

'One observation more remains to be offered, and that is, that there is good reason to pronounce the book of Job an inspired work. Its reception into the Jewish canon, the recognition of the history, and, as Peters has abundantly proved, (Crit. Diss. pp. 21, 145—148.) consequently of the book itself, by the prophet Ezekiel, a similar admission of it by another inspired writer, St James, and the express reference made to it by St Paul, (1 Cor. iii. 19,) who prefaces his quotation from it by the words, it is written, agreeably to the common form of quoting from other parts of inspired scripture:—all these fully justify the primitive fathers, and early councils, in their reception of it as a canonical and inspired book.—(See Gregor. Pref. in Job.) The intrinsic matter of the work also strengthens this idea. Job appears, from ch. xxxviii. 1, and ch. xlii. 5, to have enjoyed the divine vision. In what manner, whether, as the Seventy seem to think, by some appearance of a glorious cloud, or otherwise, it avails not. That, in some way, he was honoured with one of those extraordinary manifestations of the Deity, by which the prophets and inspired persons were distinguished, and that he was admitted to immediate communication with the Almighty, is positively asserted.' Magee then infers that Job was both a prophet and the author of the book, and adds, 'Now, from admitting the prophetic character of Job, we derive two considerable advantages. First, it removes the difficulty which otherwise must hang upon the supposition, that the words of that much celebrated passage in his writings refer to the doctrines of a Redeemer and a future state: And, second, it supplies an additional confirmation of the divine origin of those great truths concerning the creation, the fall, and the deluge, as they stand recorded in the books of Moses.'—See Magee on Atonement and Sacrifice, vol. ii., part i.

We would only add, that it is truly delightful to have in this book an additional proof, that as God never 'left himself without witness,' as the God of creation and providence, in that he gave 'rain from heaven, and fruitful seasons, filling the hearts of men with food and gladness,' so never since the beginning did he leave himself without witness as the God of redemption, and the rewarder of all them who by faith diligently seek Him.

OF PSALMS.

THIS book is entitled in the Hebrew Sepher Tehillim, that is, the book of Praises; because the praises of God are its main subject. It is called the book of Psalms or sacred songs, because they were accompanied with music in the worship of God. The whole collection is generally called the Psalms of David; because though he was not the writer of them all, yet he was of the greater part. Those who wish to see a larger analysis of this book, and more extended discussion on the authorship, chronological arrangement, use of the psalms in the Christian church, their style, varied kinds of poetry, and poetical beauties, &c., must consult the larger commentators and critics. Some of these things we may notice as space will permit, in the course of the Notes on each. The reader will obtain much information on these points in Dr A. Clarke's Introduction to the Book of Psalms; Horne's Introduction to the Study of the Scriptures; and in the prefaces of particular writers on the Psalms, such as Bishop Horne's Preface, Horsley's Preface, Lowth's Prelections, &c. Many of the psalms are expressly quoted by our Lord and his apostles. St Paul quotes the second psalm as a prophecy of Christ. Thus pointing to their present arrangement. 'Indeed, the several particulars respecting the descent, kingdom, and priesthood of Christ, the contempt and persecutions which he endured, and the intenseness and variety of his sufferings, the manner of his death, resurrection, ascension, and glory, with the success of the gospel, and the calling of the Gentiles, are so substantially foretold in one or other of the psalms, that a history of these events might in a great measure be compiled from them; and in some cases, with a minuteness to which historians seldom descend.'—Scott. Christ in his own person, or the believer in union with him, is the great theme of this divine book, to which all the psalms either directly or indirectly point. 'The psalms are an epitome of the bible, adapted to the purposes of devotion.'—Bishop Horne's Preface. They embody all the sublime truths of religion, and unfold the varied duties and experience of the believer. The best preparation for the study and enjoyment of them is a devout heart, under the teaching of the Holy Spirit, which must be earnestly sought in fervent prayer. In the language of this divine book the Son of God himself found language to praise Jehovah when He sung an hymn after the last supper, and to express the depth of his sorrows, when he cried, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me!' and the composure of his soul when he said, 'Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit.' Out of the same fountain may the follower of the Lamb derive rich supplies of instruction, consolation, and delight, and go on from strength to strength, till he appear before God in Zion.

PSALM I.

The happiness of the godly, 1—3. The unhappiness of the ungodly, 4—6.

BLESSED[a 1] is the man that [b]walketh not in [c]the counsel of the ungodly,[2] nor standeth in [d]the way of sinners, nor [e]sitteth in the seat of the [f]scornful:

2 But [g]his delight is in the law of the LORD; and in his law doth he meditate[h] [i]day and night.

3 And he shall be like [k]a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth[l] forth his fruit in his season: his leaf also [m]shall not wither;[3] and whatsoever[n] he doeth shall prosper.

4 The ungodly are not so: but are [o]like the chaff which the wind driveth away.

5 Therefore the ungodly [p]shall not stand in the judgment, nor [q]sinners in the congregation of the righteous.

6 For the LORD [r]knoweth[4] the way of the righteous: but [s]the way of the ungodly shall perish.

PSALM II.

The kingdom of Christ, 1—9. Kings are exhorted to accept it, 10—12.

WHY [a]do the heathen rage,[1] and [b]the people imagine[2] a vain thing?

2 [c]The kings of the earth set themselves, and [d]the rulers take counsel together, against the LORD, and [e]against his Anointed,[3] saying,

3 [f]Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us.

4 [g]He that sitteth in the heavens [h]shall laugh: the LORD shall have them in derision.

5 Then [i]shall he speak unto them in his wrath, and vex[4] them in his [k]sore displeasure.

6 [l]Yet have I set[5] my King upon my holy hill of Zion.[6]

7 I will declare the[7] decree: The LORD hath said unto me, [m]Thou art my Son; [n]this day have I begotten thee.

8 [o]Ask of me, [p]and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession.

9 Thou shalt [q]break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel.

10 [r]Be wise now therefore, [s]O ye kings; [t]be instructed, ye judges of the earth.

11 [u]Serve the LORD with fear, and rejoice[v] with trembling.

12 [w]Kiss [x]the Son,[1] lest he be angry, and [y]ye perish from the way, when[z] his wrath is kindled but a little. [a]Blessed are all they that put their trust in him.

PSALM III.

The security of God's protection.

¶ A psalm of David, [a]when he fled from Absalom his son.[2]

LORD, [b]how are they increased that trouble me? [c]many are they that rise up against me.

2 Many there be which say of my soul, There is [d]no help for him in God. [e]Selah.

3 But thou, O LORD, art [f]a shield for[3] me: [g]my glory, and [h]the lifter up of mine head.

4 [i]I cried unto the LORD with my voice, and he heard me out of [k]his holy hill. Selah.

5 [l]I laid me down and slept; I awaked: for [m]the LORD sustained me.

6 [n]I will not be afraid of [o]ten thousands of people that have set themselves against me round about.

7 [p]Arise, O LORD; save me, O my God: for [q]thou hast smitten all mine enemies upon the cheek-bone; thou hast broken the teeth of the ungodly.

8 [r]Salvation belongeth unto the LORD: [s]thy blessing is upon thy people. Selah.

PSALM IV.

David prayeth God to hear him, 1. He reproveth and exhorteth his enemies, 2—5. Man's happiness consisteth in God's favour, 6—8.

¶ To the chief[4] musician on [a]Neginoth, A psalm of David.[5]

HEAR me when I call, [b]O God of my righteousness: [c]thou hast enlarged me when I was in distress; have[6] mercy upon me, and hear my prayer.

2 O [d]ye sons of men, [e]how long will ye turn [f]my glory into shame? how long will ye [g]love vanity, and seek after [h]leasing? Selah.

3 But know that [i]the LORD hath set apart him that is godly [k]for himself: [l]the LORD will hear when I call unto him.

4 [m]Stand in awe, and [n]sin not: [o]commune with your own heart upon your bed, and [p]be still. [q]Selah.

5 Offer [r]the sacrifices of righteousness, and [s]put your trust in the LORD.

6 There be [t]many that say, Who will show us any good? LORD, [u]lift thou up the light of thy countenance[1] upon us.

7 Thou hast [v]put gladness in my heart, more than in [w]the time that their corn and their wine increased.

8 [x]I will both lay me down in peace, and sleep: for [y]thou, LORD, only makest me dwell in safety.

PSALM V.

David prayeth, and professeth to be constant in prayer, 1—3. God favoureth not the wicked, 4—6. David, professing his faith, prayeth unto God to guide him, 7—9, to destroy his enemies, 10, and to preserve the godly, 11, 12.

¶ To the chief musician upon Nehiloth,[2] A psalm of David.

GIVE[a] ear to my words, O LORD; consider [b]my meditation.[3]

2 Hearken [c]unto the voice of my cry, [d]my King, and my God: for [e]unto thee will I pray.

3 [f]My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O LORD; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up.

4 For thou art not a [g]God that hath pleasure in wickedness; neither shall [h]evil dwell with thee.

5 [i]The foolish shall not [k]stand [4]in thy sight: [l]thou hatest all workers of iniquity.

6 Thou shalt [m]destroy them that speak leasing: the LORD will abhor [n]the bloody[5] and deceitful man.

7 But [o]as for me, I will come into thy house [p]in the multitude of thy mercy; and [q]in thy fear will [r]I worship toward thy[6] holy temple.

8 [s]Lead me, O LORD, in thy righteousness because of mine[7] enemies: [t]make thy way straight before my face.

a 2Sa.xv.-xviii.
2 To most of the psalms are prefixed INSCRIPTIONS or TITLES, concerning the import of which expositors and interpreters are by no means agreed. Some hold them in the profoundest reverence, considering them as an original part of those divine odes, and absolutely necessary to the right understanding of them, while others regard the titles as subsequent additions, and of no importance whatever.—Horne's Introd. The sentiments in this psalm agree well with the circumstances recorded in 2 Sa. 15. 15, and referred to in the title. In this case David may here be considered a type of Christ.

¶ To the chief musician on [a]Neginoth upon Sheminith,[9] A psalm of David.

O LORD, [b]rebuke me not in thine anger, neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure.[10]

2 Have mercy upon me, O LORD; for[c] I am weak: [d]O LORD, heal me; for [e]my bones are vexed.

3 [f]My soul is also sore vexed: but thou, O LORD, [g]how long?

4 [h]Return, O LORD, [i]deliver my soul: Oh save me [k]for thy mercies' sake.

5 For [l]in death there is no remembrance of thee: [m]in the grave who shall give thee thanks?

6 [n]I am weary with my groaning; all[11] the night make I my bed to swim: [o]I water my couch with my tears.

7 [p]Mine eye is consumed because of grief; [q]it waxeth old because of all mine enemies.

8 [r]Depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity; for [s]the LORD hath heard the voice of my weeping,

9 [t]The LORD hath heard my supplication; [u]the LORD will receive my prayer.

PSALM VII.
A.M.2943. B.C.1061.

[a] Hab.3.1.
1 This word is either from a root signifying to wander, or from an Arabic word signifying sadness—an elegy. Cush was a Benjamite, and may either have been Saul, or Shimei, or some of Saul's followers. And the psalm has a reference to David's distresses in fleeing from Saul.

6 The heart-searching Judge of the world decides not only on men's conduct towards him, but in all the causes between one and another, 17. 1-3. To him therefore David referred the cause between him and his persecutors, desiring to be judged, in this respect, according to his righteousness and integrity, which were known to God, 26. 1; 2 Sa. 22. 21-28). He also earnestly prayed that the wickedness of the wicked might cease, and that God would establish the righteous. PSALM VII.

David prayeth against the malice of his enemies, professing his innocence, 1—9. By faith he seeth his defence, and the destruction of his enemies, 10—17.

¶ [a]Shiggaion[1] of David, which he sang unto the LORD, concerning the words[2] of Cush the Benjamite.

O [b]LORD my God, [c]in thee do I put my trust: [d]save me from all them that persecute me, and deliver me;

2 Lest [e]he tear my soul [f]like a lion, [g]rending it in pieces, [h]while there is none[3] to deliver.

3 O LORD my God, [i]if I have done this; [k]if there be iniquity in my hand;

4 [l]If I have rewarded evil unto him that was at peace with me; (yea, [m]I have delivered him that [n]without cause is mine enemy;)

5 [o]Let the enemy persecute my soul, and take it; yea, let him [p]tread down my life upon the earth, and [q]lay mine honour in the dust. [r]Selah.

6 [s]Arise, O LORD, in thine anger, [t]lift up thyself, because of the rage of mine enemies; and [u]awake for me to [v]the judgment that thou hast commanded.

7 [w]So shall the congregation of the people compass thee about: for their sakes therefore [x]return thou on high.

8 [y]The LORD shall judge the people: [z]judge me, O LORD, [a]according to my righteousness, and according [b]to mine integrity that is in me.

9 Oh [c]let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end; but [d]establish the just: [e]for the righteous God trieth the hearts and reins.

10 My[4] defence is of God, [f]which saveth the upright in heart.

11 God[5] judgeth[6] the righteous, and God is angry with the wicked every day.

12 If [g]he turn not, [h]he will whet his sword; he hath bent his bow, and made it ready.

13 He hath also prepared for him the instruments of death; [i]he ordaineth his arrows against the [k]persecutors.

14 Behold, [l]he travaileth with iniquity, and hath conceived mischief, and brought forth falsehood.

15 He made[7] a pit, and digged it, and[m] is fallen into the ditch which he made.

16 [n]His mischief shall return upon his own head, and his violent dealings shall come down upon his own pate.

17 I will praise the LORD [o]according to his righteousness; and will sing praise to the name of the LORD [p]most high.

PSALM VIII.

God's glory is magnified by his works, and by his love to man.

¶ To the chief musician upon [a]Gittith,[1] A psalm of David.

O LORD [b]our LORD, [c]how excellent is thy name in all the earth! who hast set [d]thy glory above the heavens.

2 [e]Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained[2] strength[f 3] because of thine enemies, that thou mightest [g]still [h]the enemy and the avenger.

3 When [i]I consider thy heavens, the[k] work of thy fingers, [l]the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained;

4 [m]What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and [n]the son of man,[4] that thou [o]visitest him?

5 For [p]thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour.

6 Thou [r]madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast [s]put all things under his feet:

7 All[5] sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field;

8 [t]The fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas.

9 O LORD our Lord, [u]how excellent is thy name in all the earth!

PSALM IX.

David praiseth God for executing of judgment, 1—10. He inciteth others to praise him, 11, 12. He prayeth that he may have cause to praise him, 13—20.

¶ To the chief musician upon Muth-labben,[6] A psalm of David.

I[a] WILL praise thee, O LORD, [b]with my whole heart; [c]I will show forth all thy marvellous works.

2 [d]I will be glad and rejoice in thee: I will sing praise to thy name, O[e] thou most High.

3 When mine enemies are turned back, [f]they shall fall and perish thy presence.

4 For [g]thou hast maintained[1] n right and my cause; thou satest the throne judging right.[2]

5 Thou hast [h]rebuked the heathe [i]thou hast destroyed the wicke [k]thou hast put out their name ever and ever.

6 O[3] [l]thou enemy, [m]destructio are come to a perpetual end; a [n]thou hast destroyed cities; th [o]memorial is perished with them.

7 But [p]the LORD shall endure ever: [q]he hath prepared his thro for judgment;

8 And [r]he shall judge the world righteousness, he shall minister jud ment to the people in uprightness.

9 [s]The LORD also will be a [5]refu for the oppressed, a refuge [t]in tim of trouble.

10 And they that [u]know thy na will [v]put their trust in thee: for th LORD, [w]hast not forsaken them t seek thee.

11 [x]Sing praises to the Lo [y]which dwelleth in Zion: [z]decl among the people his doings.

12 [a]When he maketh inquisiti for blood, he remembereth them: forgetteth not the cry of the [6]humb

13 [c]Have mercy upon me, O Lo [d]consider my trouble which I su of them that hate me, [e]thou that l est me up from the gates of death

14 That [f]I may show forth all praise [g]in the gates of [h]the daughte Zion: [i]I will rejoice in thy salvati

15 [k]The heathen are sunk dow the pit that they made; in the which they hid is their own foot tak

16 The LORD is [l]known by judgment which he executeth: wicked is snared in the work of own hands. Higgaion.[7] Selah.

17 [n]The wicked shall be tur into hell, and all the nations [o]forget God.

18 For [p]the needy shall not al be forgotten: [q]the expectation of poor shall not perish for ever.

19 [r]Arise, O LORD; [s]let not prevail; [t]let the heathen be judge thy sight.

a Ps. lxxi.; lxxxiv.; titles.
1 Great uncertainty prevails as to the meaning of this word. Scott thinks that assigned by bishop Patrick the most probable. He says, 'I take it to have been composed by David,...after he had overthrown ... Goliath of Gath; which is ... a lively emblem of Christ's conquest over our great enemy the devil.'

4 Literally, this is a great proof of God's condescension & kindness to man. 'But the apostle teaches us, that the Holy Spirit, who spake by David, also intended Christ, the eternal Son of God, who by his incarnation became the "Son of man." Thus he was "made a little (a little while) lower than the angels," by assuming and dwelling in a nature inferior to their's, "for the suffering of death:" which object having been accomplished, he arose from the dead, and was "crowned with glory and honour;" and in human nature exercises universal dominion.' 20 [u]Put them in fear, O LORD; that the nations [v]may know themselves to be but men. Selah.

PSALM X.

David complaineth to God of the outrages of the wicked, 1—11. He prayeth for redress, 12—15. He professeth his confidence, 16—18.

WHY [a]standest thou afar off, O LORD? why [b]hidest thou thyself in times of trouble?

2 The[1] wicked [c]in his pride doth persecute the poor: [d]let them be taken in the devices that they have imagined.

3 For the wicked[2] [e]boasteth of his heart's[3] desire, [f]and blesseth[4] the covetous, [g]whom the LORD [h]abhorreth.

4 The wicked, through [i]the pride of his countenance, [k]will not seek after God: God[5] is not in all his [l]thoughts.

5 [m]His ways are always grievous; thy[n] judgments are far above out of his sight: as for all his enemies, [o]he puffeth at them.

6 He hath [p]said in his heart, [q]I shall not be moved: for I shall never[6] be in adversity.

7 His mouth is [r]full of cursing, and[s] deceit,[7] and fraud; [t]under his tongue is [u]mischief [v]and vanity.[8]

8 He sitteth in [w]the lurking-places of the villages: in the secret places doth he murder the innocent: [x]his eyes are[9] privily set against the poor.

9 [y]He lieth in wait secretly[10] as a lion in his den: he lieth in wait [z]to catch the poor: he doth catch [a]the poor, when he draweth him into his net.

10 He croucheth,[11] and [b]*12*humbleth himself, that the poor may fall by[13] his strong ones.

11 He hath [c]said in his heart, God[d] hath forgotten: he hideth his face; he will never see it.

12 [e]Arise, O LORD; O God, [f]lift up thine hand: [g]forget not the humble.[14]

13 Wherefore doth the wicked contemn[h] God? he hath said in his heart, [i]Thou wilt not require it.

14 [k]Thou hast seen[15] it; for [l]thou beholdest mischief and spite, [m]to requite it with thy hand: [n]the poor committeth[16] himself unto thee; thou art [o]the helper of the fatherless.

15 [p]Break thou the arm of the wicked and the evil man: [q]seek out his wickedness till thou find none.

16 [r]The LORD is King for ever and ever: [s]the heathen are perished out of his land.

17 LORD, [t]thou hast heard the desire of [u]the humble: [v]thou wilt prepare[1] their heart, [w]thou wilt cause thine ear to hear;

18 [x]To judge the fatherless and the oppressed, that [y]the man of the earth may no more oppress.[2]

PSALM XI.

David encourageth himself in God against his enemies, 1—3. The providence and justice of God, 4—7.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

IN[a] the LORD put I my trust: [b]how say ye[3] to my soul, [c]Flee as a bird to your mountain?

2 For, lo, [d]the wicked bend their bow, they [e]make ready their arrow upon the string, [f]that they may privily[4] shoot at [g]the upright in heart.

3 If [h]the foundations be destroyed, [i]what can the righteous do?

4 [k]The LORD is in his holy temple, [l]the LORD's throne is in [5]heaven: [m]his eyes behold, his eye-lids try, the children of men.

5 The LORD [n]trieth the righteous; but [o]the wicked, and him that loveth violence, his soul hateth.

6 [p]Upon the wicked he shall rain snares,[6] fire and brimstone, and [7]an horrible tempest: this shall be [q]the portion of [r]their cup.

7 For [s]the righteous LORD loveth righteousness; [t]his countenance doth behold the upright.

PSALM XII.

David, destitute of human comfort, craveth help of God, 1, 2. He comforteth himself in the assurance of God's judgments on the wicked, 3—5, and in the faithfulness of his promises, 6—8.

¶ To the chief musician upon Sheminith,[8] A psalm of David.

HELP,[9] LORD; for [a]the godly man ceaseth; for [b]the faithful [10]fail from among the children of men.

2 [c]They speak vanity every one with his neighbour: with [d]flattering lips, and with a[11] double heart, do they speak.

3 The LORD shall [e]cut off all flattering lips, and [f]the tongue that speaketh proud[12] things;

David complaineth of God's delay to help him, 1, 2. He prayeth for preventing grace, 3, 4. He trusteth in the divine mercy, 5, 6.

¶ To the chief[5] musician, A psalm of David.

HOW[a] long wilt thou [b]forget me, O LORD? for ever? [c]how long wilt thou hide thy face from me?[6]

2 How long shall I [d]take counsel in my soul, having [e]sorrow in my heart daily? how long shall [f]mine enemy [g]be exalted over me?

3 [h]Consider and hear me, O LORD my God: [i]lighten mine eyes, [k]lest I sleep the sleep of death;

4 [l]Lest mine enemy say, [m]I have prevailed against him; and those that trouble me rejoice [n]when I am moved.

5 But [o]I have trusted in thy mercy; [p]my heart shall rejoice in thy salvation.

6 [q]I will sing unto the LORD, because he[r] hath dealt bountifully with me.

PSALM XIV.

David describeth the corruption of a natural man, 1—3. He convinceth the wicked by the light of their conscience, 4—6. He glorieth in the salvation of God, 7.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

THE [a]fool[7] hath said in his heart, There is [b]no God. [c]They are corrupt; they have done [d]abominable works; [e]there is none that doeth good.

2 [f]The LORD looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were [g]any that did understand, and [h]seek God.

3 They are [i]all gone aside, they are all together become filthy;[8] [k]there is none that doeth good, no, not one.

6 While God permits his servants to continue under affliction, he is said, after the manner of men, to have 'forgotten, and hid his face from them.' For the use, therefore, of persons in such circumstances, is this psalm intended; and consequently it suits the different cases of the Church universal, languishing for the advent of our Lord to deliver her from this evil world; of any particular church in time of persecution; and of each individual, when harrassed by temptation, or broken by sickness, pain & sorrow. He who bore our sins, and carried our sorrows, may likewise be presumed to have made it a part of his devotions in the day of trouble.—Horne.

5 It is probable that as soon as the ark was stationed on mount Zion, the Psalmist addressed himself to God, desirous of being taught who should be an acceptable worshipper at his tabernacle. This was typical of the true church of God on earth, all the members of which are heirs also of heaven. It is not here enquired what are the grounds of a sinner's acceptance with God; but rather what are the marks of a man accepted with God.

¶ A psalm of David.

LORD, [a]who shall abide[4] in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in [b]thy holy hill?[5]

3 He that [f]backbiteth not with his tongue, nor [g]doeth evil to his neighbour, nor taketh[6] up a reproach against his neighbour.

4 In whose eyes [h]a vile person is contemned; [i]but he honoureth them that fear the LORD: he that [k]sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not.

5 He that [l]putteth not out his money to usury, [m]nor taketh reward against the innocent. [n]He that doeth these things shall never be moved.

PSALM XVI.

David, in distrust of merits, and hatred of idolatry, fleeth to God for preservation, 1—4. He showeth the hope of his calling, of a future resurrection, and life everlasting, 5—11.

¶ Michtam[7] of David.

PRESERVE[a] me, O God: [b]for in thee do I put my trust.

2 O my soul, [c]thou hast said unto the LORD, Thou art my Lord: [d]my goodness extendeth not to thee;[8]

3 [e]But to [f]the saints that are in the earth, and to [g]the excellent, [h]in whom is all my delight.

4 [i]Their sorrows shall be multiplied that hasten[9] after another god: [k]their drink-offerings of blood will I not offer, nor [l]take up their names into my lips.

5 [m]The LORD is the portion of mine[1] inheritance and [n]of my cup: thou[o] maintainest my lot.

6 [p]The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, [q]I have a goodly heritage.

7 I will bless the LORD, [r]who hath given me counsel; [s]my reins also instruct me [t]in the night-seasons.

8 [u]I have set the LORD always before me: because [v]he is at my right hand, I shall not be moved.

9 Therefore [w]my heart is glad, and my[x] glory rejoiceth; [y]my flesh also shall rest[2] in hope:

10 For thou wilt not leave [z]my soul in hell;[3] [a]neither wilt thou suffer thine [b]Holy One to see corruption.

11 Thou wilt show me [c]the path of life: [d]in thy presence is fulness of joy; [e]at thy right hand there are pleasures[f] for evermore.

PSALM XVII.

David, in confidence of his integrity, craveth defence of God against his enemies, 1—9. He showeth their pride and eagerness to ruin him, 10—12. He prayeth against them in confidence of his hope, 13—15.

¶ [a]A prayer of David.

HEAR[b] the[4] right, O LORD, [c]attend unto my cry; give ear unto my prayer, that goeth not[5] out of feigned lips.

2 [d]Let my sentence come forth from thy presence;[6] let thine eyes behold [e]the things that are equal.

3 [f]Thou hast proved mine heart; thou[g] hast visited me in the night; thou hast tried me, and [h]shalt find nothing:[7] [i]I am purposed that my mouth shall not transgress.

4 Concerning [k]the works of men, by[l] the word of thy lips I have kept me from the paths of [m]the destroyer.[8]

5 [n]Hold up my goings in thy paths, that[o] my footsteps slip[9] not.

6 [p]I have called upon thee; for thou wilt hear me, O God: [q]incline thine ear unto me, and hear my speech.

7 Show [r]thy marvellous lovingkindness, O thou that savest[10] [s]by thy right hand them which put their trust in thee from those that rise up against them.

8 Keep me as [t]the apple of the eye; [u]hide me under the shadow of thy wings,

9 From the wicked that oppress[11] me, from my deadly[1] enemies, who compass me about.

10 [v]They are inclosed in their own fat:[2] [w]with their mouth they speak proudly.

11 They have now [x]compassed us in our steps: they have [y]set their eyes bowing down to the earth;

12 Like[3] as a lion that is greedy of his prey, and as it were a young lion lurking[4] in secret places.

13 [z]Arise, O LORD; disappoint[5] him, cast him down: deliver my soul from the wicked, which[6] is [a]thy sword:

14 From men which[7] are thy hand, O LORD, from [b]men of the world, [c]which have their portion in this life, [d]and whose belly thou fillest with thy [e]hid treasure: they are full of children,[8] [f]and leave the rest of their substance to their babes.

15 [g]As for me, [h]I will behold thy face in righteousness: [i]I shall be satisfied, when [k]I awake, [l]with thy likeness.[9]

PSALM XVIII.

David's psalm of thanksgiving for God's mighty deliverances and manifold blessings.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David, [a]the servant of the LORD, who spake unto the LORD the words of this song [b]in the day that the LORD delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul: and he said,

I[c] WILL love thee, O LORD, [d]my strength.[10]

2 [e]The LORD is my rock, and [f]my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my strength,[11] in whom I will trust; [g]my buckler, and[h] the horn of my salvation, and [i]my high tower.

3 [k]I will call upon the LORD, [l]who is worthy to be praised: [m]so shall I be saved from mine enemies.

4 [n]The sorrows of death compassed me, and [o]the floods of ungodly[12] men made me afraid.

5 [p]The sorrows[13] of hell compassed me about; [q]the snares of death prevented me.

6 [r]In my distress I called upon the LORD, and cried unto my God: [s]he heard my voice out of his temple, and [t]my cry came before him, even into his ears.

7 Then [u]the earth shook[1] and trembled; [v]the foundations also of the hills moved and were shaken, because he was wroth.

8 There [w]went up a smoke out[2] of his nostrils, and [x]fire out of his mouth devoured: coals were kindled by it.

9 [y]He bowed the heavens also, and came down: and [z]darkness[3] was under his feet.

10 And [a]he rode upon a cherub, and did fly; yea, he did fly upon the wings of the wind.

11 He made darkness [b]his secret place; his pavilion round about him were dark waters [c]and thick clouds of the skies.

12 [d]At the brightness that was before him his thick clouds passed; hail-stones[e] and coals of fire.

13 The LORD also [f]thundered in the heavens, and [g]the Highest gave his voice; hail-stones and [h]coals of fire.

14 Yea, [i]he sent out his arrows, and scattered them; and [k]he shot out lightnings, and discomfited them.

15 Then [l]the channels of waters were seen, [m]and the foundations of the world were discovered at thy rebuke, O LORD, [n]at the blast of the breath of thy nostrils.[4]

16 [o]He sent from above, he took me, [p]he drew me out of many[5] waters.

17 He delivered me from [q]my strong enemy, and from [r]them which hated me: for [s]they were too strong for me.

18 They prevented[6] me [t]in the day of my calamity: [u]but the LORD was my stay.

19 He brought me forth also [v]into a large place; he delivered me, [w]because he delighted in me.

20 The LORD [x]rewarded me according to my righteousness; [y]according to the cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me.

21 For [z]I have kept the ways of the LORD, [a]and have not wickedly departed from my God.

22 For [b]all his judgments were before me, [c]and I did not put away his statutes from me.

23 I was also [d]upright before[7] him, and [e]I kept myself from mine iniquity.

24 Therefore hath [f]the LORD recompensed me according to my righteousness, according to the cleanness of my hands in his eye-sight.[1]

25 [g]With the merciful thou wilt show thyself merciful; with an upright man [h]thou wilt show thyself upright;

26 With the pure thou wilt show thyself pure; and [i]with the froward thou wilt show[2] thyself froward.

27 For thou wilt [k]save the afflicted people; but wilt [l]bring down high looks,

28 For [m]thou wilt light my [3]candle: the LORD [n]my God will enlighten my darkness.

29 For [o]by thee I have run[4] through a troop; and [p]by my God have I leaped over a wall.

30 As for God, [q]his way is perfect: the word of the LORD is [5]tried; [r]he is a buckler to all those that trust in him.

31 For [s]who is God save the LORD? or who is a rock save our God?

32 It is God that [t]girdeth me with strength, [u]and maketh my way perfect.

33 He maketh my feet like [6]hinds' feet, and setteth me upon [v]my high places.

34 [w]He teacheth my hands to war, [x]so that a bow of steel[7] is broken by mine arms.

35 Thou hast also given me [y]the shield of thy salvation; and [z]thy right hand hath holden me up, and thy gentleness[8] hath made me great.

36 Thou hast [a]enlarged my steps under me, that my feet[9] did not slip.

37 I have [b]pursued mine enemies, and overtaken them; neither did I turn again till they were consumed.

38 I have [c]wounded them, that they were not able to rise: they are fallen under my feet.

39 For thou hast [d]girded me with strength unto the battle: [e]thou hast subdued[10] under me those that rose up against me.

40 Thou hast also given me [f]the necks of mine enemies, [g]that I might destroy them that hate me.

41 They cried, [h]but there was none to save them; even unto the LORD, but he answered them not.

3 Let us remember that the wrath of God is here depicted under the darkness of heaven: because the pleasant countenance of God exhilarates us as with pure light; so in the troubled sky, when his anger in a threatening aspect falls upon us, we are compelled to contract the brow in sadness. Meanwhile we are warned, that no change can take place in heaven or earth, which is not an evidence of the presence of God.—Calvinus in Psalmos.

42 Then did [i]I beat them small as the dust[1] before the wind; [k]I did cast them out as the dirt in the streets.

43 Thou hast delivered me [l]from the strivings of the people; and [m]thou hast made me the head of the heathen: [n]a people whom I have not known shall serve me.

44 As[2] soon as they hear of me, they shall obey me: the strangers[3] shall submit[4] themselves unto me.

45 The strangers shall [o]fade away, and [p]be afraid out of their close places.

46 [q]The LORD liveth; and [r]blessed be my Rock; and let [s]the God of my salvation be [t]exalted.

47 It is God that avengeth[5] me, and subdueth[6] the people under me.

48 He delivereth me from mine enemies; yea, [u]thou liftest me up above those that rise up against me: thou hast delivered me from the violent[7] man.

49 Therefore [v]will I give[8] thanks unto thee, O LORD, among the heathen, [w]and sing praises unto thy name.[9]

50 Great deliverance giveth he [x]to his king; and showeth mercy [y]to his anointed, to David, and to his seed for evermore.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

THE[a] heavens declare the glory of God; and [b]the firmament showeth his handy-work.[10]

2 [c]Day unto day uttereth speech, and [d]night unto night showeth knowledge.

3 [e]There is no speech[11] nor language where[12] their voice is not heard.

4 [f]Their line[13] is gone out through all the earth, and their words to the end of the world. [g]In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sun;

5 Which is [h]as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and [i]rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race.

6 [k]His going forth is from the end of the heaven, [l]and his circuit unto the ends of it: and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof.

7 The law[14] of the LORD is [m]perfect, converting[1] the soul: [n]the testimony of the LORD is [o]sure, [p]making wise the simple:

8 The [q]statutes of the LORD are [r]right, [s]rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the LORD [t]is pure, [u]enlightening the eyes:

9 [v]The fear of the LORD is clean, [w]enduring for ever: [x]the judgments of the LORD are true[2] and righteous altogether.

10 More to be desired are they [y]than gold, yea, than much fine gold; [z]sweeter also than honey, and the honey-comb.[3]

11 [a]Moreover, by them is thy servant warned: and [b]in keeping of them there is great reward.

12 Who [c]can understand his errors? [d]cleanse thou me from [e]secret faults.

13 [f]Keep back thy servant also from [g]presumptuous sins; [h]let them not have dominion over me: then shall I be [i]upright, and [k]I shall be innocent from the great[4] transgression.

14 [l]Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O LORD, my strength,[5] and [m]my redeemer.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

THE LORD [a]hear thee in the day of trouble;[6] [b]the name[7] of [c]the God of Jacob defend[8] thee.

2 Send thee[9] help [d]from the sanctuary, and strengthen[10] thee [e]out of Zion.

3 [f]Remember all thy offerings, and accept[11] thy burnt-sacrifice. Selah.

4 [g]Grant thee according to thine own heart, and fulfil all thy counsel.

5 [h]We will rejoice in thy salvation, and [i]in the name of our God we will set up our banners: the LORD fulfil all thy petitions.

6 Now [k]know I that the LORD saveth his anointed: [l]he will hear him from his[12] holy heaven with[13] the saving strength of his right hand.

7 [m]Some trust in chariots, and some in horses; [n]but we will remember the name of the LORD our God.

a Ps.46.1; 91.15;Je. 0. 7; He.5.7.
6 This psalm is a prayer of the congregation of Israel, for David, their anointed king, going forth to battle against their enemies. David was a type of Christ, in his conflicts & victories: and the psalm may be applied as a prayer of the ancient church for his coming, and of the Christian church, for the completion of his work, and the establishment of his kingdom, and for its enlargement and prosperity.

PSALM XXI.

A thanksgiving for victory, 1—6. Confidence of further success, 7—13.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

THE[a] king[3] shall [b]joy in thy strength, O LORD; and [c]in thy salvation how greatly shall he rejoice!

2 Thou hast given him [d]his heart's desire, and hast not withholden the request of his lips. Selah.

3 For thou [e]preventest him with the[f] blessings of goodness: [g]thou settest a crown of pure gold on his head.

4 [h]He asked life of thee, and thou gavest it him, even [i]length of days for ever and ever.

5 [k]His glory is great in thy salvation: [l]honour and majesty hast thou laid upon him.

6 For thou hast made[4] him most blessed for ever: [m]thou hast [5]made him exceeding glad with thy countenance.

7 [n]For the king trusteth in the LORD; and, through the mercy of [o]the most High, [p]he shall not be moved.

8 [q]Thine hand shall find out all[6] thine enemies; thy right hand shall find out those that hate thee.

9 [r]Thou shalt make them as a fiery oven[7] in the time of thine anger: [s]the LORD shall swallow them up [t]in his wrath, and [u]the fire shall devour them.

10 [v]Their fruit shalt thou destroy from the earth, and their seed from among the children of men.

11 For they intended evil against thee; they [w]imagined a mischievous device, which [x]they are not able to perform:

12 [y]Therefore shalt thou make[8] them turn their back,[9] when [z]thou shalt make ready thine arrows upon thy strings against the face of them.

13 [a]Be thou exalted,[10] LORD, in thine own strength: [b]so will we sing and praise thy power.

1 In these verses, 6-8, David himself seems to speak. His past deliverances and victories, and the loyal zeal of his people, assured him of success, from the power of Israel's God. Comparing the confidence of his enemies in chariots and horses, and in well-appointed and numerous troops, with his own reliance and that of his people on the Almighty; he anticipated the triumph, and exulted as if already victorious.

3 The former psalm was the prayer of Israel for David, and of the church for the Messiah; and this is a song of praise to God who had answered these prayers. 'Many of the Hebrews themselves apply it to the Messiah. So that it may be called a psalm of triumph after the victories which David got over his enemies, which were a type of Christ's victories over death, and of the triumph that ensued. And truly, there are some things in it, which are more literally fulfilled in Christ than in David.' —Patrick.

PSALM XXII.

David complaineth in great discouragement, 1—8. He prayeth in great distress, 9—21. He praiseth God for mercy shown him, 22—31.

¶ To the chief musician upon [1]Aijeleth Shahar, A psalm of David.

MY God, [a]my God, [b]why hast thou forsaken me? why art thou so [c]far from helping[2] me, and from [d]the words of my roaring?

2 O my God, [e]I cry in the daytime, [f]but thou hearest not; and [g]in the night-season, and am[3] not silent.[4]

3 But [h]thou art holy, O thou [i]that inhabitest the praises of Israel.

4 [k]Our fathers trusted in thee: they trusted, and thou didst deliver them.

5 They [l]cried unto thee, and were delivered: they trusted in thee, [m]and were not confounded.

6 But [n]I am a worm, and no man; [o]a reproach of men, and despised of the people.

7 All they that see me [p]laugh me to scorn: they shoot[5] out the lip, [q]they shake the head, saying,

8 [r]He trusted[6] on the LORD that he would deliver him; [s]let him deliver him, seeing[7] he delighted in him.

9 But thou art he [t]that took me out of the womb; [u]thou didst [8]make me hope when I was upon my mother's breasts.

10 I was [v]cast upon thee from the womb: [w]thou art my God [x]from my mother's belly.

11 [y]Be not far from me, for trouble is near; for there is none[9] to help.

12 [z]Many bulls[10] have compassed me: [a]strong bulls of Bashan have beset me round.

13 They gaped[11] upon me with their mouths, [b]as a ravening and a roaring lion.

14 [c]I am poured out like water, and [d]all my bones are out[12] of joint: [e]my heart is like wax; it is melted in the midst of my bowels.

15 [f]My strength is dried up like a potsherd; and [g]my tongue cleaveth to my jaws; and thou hast brought me [h]into the dust of death.

16 For [i]dogs[13] have [k]compassed me: [l]the assembly of the wicked have inclosed me: [m]they pierced my hands and my feet.

17 [n]I may tell all my bones: [o]they look and stare upon me.

18 They [p]part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture.[1]

19 But [q]be not thou far from me, O LORD: [r]O my strength, haste thee to help me.

20 Deliver [s]my soul from the sword; my[2] darling from the power of [t]the dog.

21 Save me [u]from the lion's mouth: for thou hast heard me from [v]the horns of the unicorns.[3]

22 [w]I will declare thy name unto my[x] brethren: [y]in the midst of the congregation will I praise thee.

23 [z]Ye that fear the LORD, praise him: [a]all ye the seed of Jacob, [b]glorify him; and fear him, [c]all ye the seed of Israel.

24 For [d]he hath not despised nor abhorred the affliction of the afflicted;[4] neither[e] hath he hid his face from him; [f]but when he cried unto him, he heard.

25 [g]My praise shall be of thee in the great congregation:[5] [h]I will pay my vows before them that fear him.

26 [i]The meek[6] shall eat and be satisfied; [k]they shall praise the LORD that seek him: [l]your heart shall live for ever.

27 [m]All the ends of the world shall remember, and [n]turn unto the LORD; and [o]all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee.

28 For [p]the kingdom is the LORD's; and he is the governor among the nations.

29 All they [q]that be fat[7] upon earth shall[r] eat and worship: [s]all they that go down to the dust[8] shall [t]bow before him; and [u]none can keep alive his own soul.

30 [v]A seed shall serve him; [w]it shall be accounted to the LORD for a generation.[9]

31 [x]They shall come, and shall declare [y]his righteousness unto a people that shall be born, that he hath done this.

7 This psalm is supposed to have been written and sung, with some others, when David removed the ark from the house of Obed-Edom to Jerusalem; and perhaps it might also be used when the ark was carried into Solomon's temple. But the ascension of Christ into heaven seems to have been sublimely prefigured under those typical events. The psalmist introduced his subject by declaring the sovereignty of God over the whole world. He proceeds to declare the character of a true servant of God; not how the character is obtained, but what it is, and the blessing of God freely bestowed thereon.

PSALM XXIII.

David's confidence in God's care and goodness.

¶ A psalm of David.

THE LORD is [a]my shepherd,[1] [b]I shall not want.

2 He [c]maketh me to lie down in green[2] pastures: he [d]leadeth me beside the still[3] waters.

3 He [e]restoreth my soul: [f]he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness [g]for his name's sake.

4 Yea, though I walk [h]through the valley of the shadow of death, [i]I will fear no evil: [k]for thou art with me; [l]thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

5 Thou [m]preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: [n]thou anointest[4] my head with oil; [o]my cup runneth over.

6 Surely [p]goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; [q]and I will dwell in the house of the LORD for ever.[5]

PSALM XXIV.

God's sovereignty over the whole world, 1, 2. The citizens of his spiritual kingdom, 3—6. The solemn entrance of the Lord into his sanctuary, 7—10.

¶ A psalm of David.

THE [a]earth is the LORD's, and the fulness thereof; [b]the world, and they that dwell therein:

2 For [c]he hath founded it upon the seas, and [d]established it upon the floods.

3 [e]Who shall ascend into [f]the hill of the LORD? [g]and who shall stand in his holy place?

4 He [6]that hath [h]clean hands, and [i]a pure heart; who hath not [k]lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor [l]sworn deceitfully.

5 He shall [m]receive the blessing from the LORD, and [n]righteousness from [o]the God of his salvation.[7]

6 This is [p]the generation of them that seek him, [q]that seek thy face, O Jacob.[8] Selah.

7 [r]Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors; and [s]the King of glory [t]shall come in.

8 Who is this King of glory? [u]The LORD strong and mighty, the LORD mighty in battle.

9 Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in.

PSALM XXV.

David's confidence in prayer, 1—6. He prayeth for the remission of sins, 7—15; and for help in affliction, 16—22.

¶ A psalm of David.

UNTO thee, O Lord, [a]do I lift up my soul.[1]

2 [b]O my God, I trust in thee: let me not be ashamed; [c]let not mine enemies triumph over me.

3 Yea, let none that [d]wait on thee be ashamed: [e]let them be ashamed which transgress [f]without cause.

4 [g]Shew me thy ways, O LORD; teach me thy paths.

5 [h]Lead me in thy truth, and [i]teach me: for thou art [k]the God of my salvation; [l]on thee do I wait all the day.

6 [m]Remember, O LORD, [n]thy [2]tender mercies and thy loving-kindnesses; for[o] they have been ever of old.

7 [p]Remember not [q]the sins of my youth, nor my transgressions: [r]according to thy mercy remember thou me [s]for thy goodness' sake, O LORD.

8 [t]Good and [u]upright is the LORD: therefore will he [v]teach sinners in the way.

9 [w]The meek will he [x]guide in judgment; and the meek will he teach his[y] way.

10 All [z]the paths of the LORD are mercy[a] and truth unto such as [b]keep his covenant and his testimonies.

11 For [c]thy name's sake, O LORD, pardon mine iniquity; [d]for it is great.[3]

12 [e]What man is he that feareth the LORD? [f]him shall he teach in the way that he shall choose.

13 [g]His soul shall dwell[4] at ease; and [h]his seed shall [i]inherit the earth.

14 The [k]secret of the LORD is with them that fear him; and he will shew[5] them his covenant.

15 [l]Mine eyes are ever toward the LORD; for he shall pluck[6] my feet out[m] of the net.

16 [n]Turn thee unto me, and have mercy upon me; [o]for I am desolate and afflicted.

17 [p]The troubles of my heart are enlarged: O bring thou me out of my distresses.

4 David contemplates a return to the house of God, and having performed in faith the usual ablutions, to offer sacrifices to God. It denotes, 1. Habitual preparation. ...2. Actual preparation. In our preparation for solemn ordinances, we must not only be able to clear ourselves from the charge of reigning infidelity and hypocrisy, and to protest our innocency of that which was signified by washing the hands, De. 21. 6; but we must take pains to cleanse ourselves from the spots of remaining iniquity, by renewing our repentance, and making a fresh application of the blood of Christ to our consciences.—Henry.

19 [s]Consider mine enemies, they are many; and they hate with cruel[1] hatred.

20 [t]O keep my soul, and deli me: [u]let me not be ashamed; fo put my trust in thee.

21 [v]Let integrity and uprightn preserve me; for I wait on thee.

22 [w]Redeem Israel,[2] O God, out all his troubles.

PSALM XXVI.

David resorteth unto God in confidence of his integrity.

¶ A psalm of David.[3]

[a]JUDGE me, O LORD; [b]for I h walked in mine integrity: [c]I h trusted also in the LORD; therefor shall not slide.

2 [d]Examine me, O LORD, and pr me; try my reins and my heart.

3 For [f]thy loving-kindness before mine eyes; and [g]I have wal in thy truth.

4 I have not [h]sat with vain pers neither will I go in with dissembl

5 I have [i]hated the congrega of evil-doers; and [k]will not sit the wicked.

6 I will [l]wash[4] mine hands in in cency: [m]so will I compass thine al O LORD;

7 [n]That I may publish with voice of thanksgiving, and [o]tell o thy wondrous works.

8 LORD, [p]I have loved the hab tion of thy house, and the p where[5] thine honour dwelleth.

9 Gather[6] not my soul with ners, nor my life with bloody[7] m

10 [q]In whose hands is misc and their right hand is full[8] of [r]bri

11 But as for me, [s]I will walk mine integrity: [t]redeem me, [u]and merciful unto me.

12 [v]My foot standeth in an place: [w]in the congregations wi bless the LORD.

PSALM XXVII.

David sustaineth his faith by the power of God, 1—3; love to the service of God, 4—8; and by prayer, 9—14.

¶ A psalm of David.

THE LORD is [a]my light and salvation; whom shall I fear?

Digitized by Google

LORD is [c]the strength of my life; [d]of whom shall I be afraid?

2 When [e]the wicked, even mine enemies and my foes, came[1] upon me, to[f] eat up my flesh, [g]they stumbled and fell.

3 Though [h]an host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear; though [i]war should rise against me, in[k] this will I be confident.

4 [l]One thing have I desired of the LORD, [m]that will I seek after; [n]that I may dwell in the house of the LORD all the days of my life, [o]to behold the beauty[2] of the LORD, and to [p]enquire in his temple.

5 For [q]in the time of trouble [r]he shall hide me in his pavilion: [s]in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall [t]set me up upon a rock.

6 And [u]now shall mine head be lifted up [v]above mine enemies round about me: [w]therefore will I offer in his tabernacle sacrifices of joy:[3] [x]I will sing, yea, I will sing praises unto the LORD.

7 [y]Hear, O LORD, when I cry with my voice: have mercy also upon me, and answer me.

8 When[4] thou saidst, [z]Seek ye my face; my heart said unto thee, [a]Thy face, LORD, will I seek.[5]

9 [b]Hide not thy face far from me; put[c] not thy servant away in anger: thou[d] hast been my help; [e]leave me not, neither forsake me, [f]O God of my salvation.[6]

10 When [g]my father and my mother forsake me, then [h]the LORD will take me up.[7]

11 [i]Teach me thy way, O LORD, and lead me in a plain[8] path, because of mine enemies.[9]

12 Deliver me not over unto [k]the will of mine enemies: for [l]false witnesses are risen up against me, and such as [m]breathe out cruelty.

13 I had [n]fainted, unless I had believed to see the goodness of the LORD [o]in the land of the living.[10]

14 [p]Wait on the LORD; [q]be of good courage, and [r]he shall strengthen thine heart: wait, I say, on the LORD.

¶ A psalm of David.

UNTO thee [a]will I cry, [b]O LORD my rock; [c]be not silent[1] to[2] me: lest, if thou be silent to me, [d]I become like them that go down into the pit.

2 Hear the voice of my supplications when I cry unto thee, [e]when I lift up my hands toward thy holy oracle.[3]

3 [f]Draw me not away[4] with the wicked, and with the workers of iniquity, which [g]speak peace to their neighbours, but [h]mischief is in their hearts.

4 [i]Give them according to their deeds, and [k]according to the wickedness of their endeavours: [l]give them after the work of their hands; [m]render to them their desert.

5 Because [n]they regard not the works of the LORD, nor [o]the operation of his hands, he shall destroy them,[5] and [p]not build them up.

6 [q]Blessed be the LORD, because he hath heard the voice of my supplications.

7 The LORD is [r]my strength and [s]my shield; [t]my heart trusted in him, and I am helped: [u]therefore my heart greatly rejoiceth; and [v]with my song will I praise him.

8 The LORD is their[6] strength, and he is the saving[7] strength of [w]his anointed.

9 [x]Save thy people, and [y]bless thine inheritance:[8] feed[9] them also, and [z]lift them up for ever.

PSALM XXIX.

David exhorteth princes to give glory to God, 1, 2, by reason of his power, 3—10, and protection of his people, 11.

¶ A psalm of David.

GIVE[a] unto the LORD, O ye mighty,[10] give unto the LORD glory and strength.

2 [b]Give unto the LORD the [11]glory due unto his name; [c]worship the LORD in the beauty of holiness.[12]

3 [d]The voice of the LORD is upon the waters: [e]the God of glory [f]thundereth; the LORD is upon many[13] waters.

4 The voice of the LORD is powerful;[1] the voice of the LORD is full[2] of majesty.

5 The voice of the LORD [g]breaketh the cedars; yea, the LORD breaketh the cedars of Lebanon.

6 He maketh them also to [h]skip like a calf; [i]Lebanon and [k]Sirion like a young [l]unicorn.

7 The voice of the LORD divideth[3] the[m] flames of fire.

8 The voice of the LORD [n]shaketh the wilderness; the LORD shaketh the wilderness of [o]Kadesh.

9 The voice of the LORD [p]maketh the hinds[4] to calve,[5] and [q]discovereth the forests; and [r]in his temple doth[6] every one speak of his glory.

10 The LORD [s]sitteth upon the flood; yea, the LORD sitteth [t]King for ever.

11 The LORD will [u]give strength unto his people; the LORD will [v]bless his people with peace.

PSALM XXX.

David praiseth God for his deliverance, 1—3. He exhorteth others to praise him by the example of God's dealing with him, 4—12.

¶ A psalm and song, at [a]the dedication of the house of David.

I WILL [b]extol thee, O LORD; [c]for thou hast lifted me up, and [d]hast not made my foes to rejoice over me.

2 O LORD my God, I cried unto thee, [e]and thou hast healed me.

3 O LORD, thou hast [f]brought up my soul[7] from the grave: thou hast kept me alive, that I should not go down[g] to the pit.

4 [h]Sing unto the LORD, O ye saints of his, and give thanks at[8] the remembrance of his [i]holiness.[9]

5 [k]For his[10] anger endureth but a moment; [l]in his favour is life: [m]weeping may endure for[11] a night, but joy[12] cometh [n]in the morning.[13]

6 And [o]in my prosperity I said, [p]I shall never be moved.

7 LORD, [q]by thy favour thou hast made[14] my mountain to stand strong: thou[r] didst hide thy face, and I was troubled.

8 I cried to thee, O LORD; and unto[s] the LORD I made supplication.

9 [t]What profit is there in my blood, when I go down to the pit? Shall the dust praise thee? shall it declare thy truth?[1]

10 [u]Hear, O LORD, and have mercy upon me: LORD, [v]be thou my helper.

11 Thou [w]hast turned for me my mourning into [x]dancing: thou hast put off my sackcloth, and [y]girded me with gladness;

12 To the end that my glory[2] may sing praise to thee, [z]and not be silent. O LORD my God, [a]I will give thanks unto thee for ever.

PSALM XXXI.

David showing his confidence in God, craveth his help, 1—8. He rejoiceth in God's mercy, 7, 8. He prayeth in his calamity, 9—18. He praiseth God for his goodness, 19—24.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

IN [a]thee, O LORD, do I put my trust; let me never be ashamed: [b]deliver me in thy righteousness.[3]

2 [c]Bow down thine ear to me; [d]deliver me speedily: be thou [4]my strong rock, for [e]an house of defence to save me.

3 For thou art my rock and my fortress: therefore, [f]for thy name's sake, [g]lead me, and guide me.

4 [h]Pull me out of the net that they have laid privily for me; for thou art [i]my strength.

5 [k]Into thine hand I commit my spirit: [l]thou hast redeemed me, O LORD [m]God of truth.[5]

6 I have [n]hated them that regard [o]lying vanities: but I trust in the LORD.

7 [p]I will be glad and rejoice in thy mercy: for [q]thou hast considered my trouble; thou hast [r]known my soul in adversities;

8 And hast not [s]shut me up into the hand of the enemy: thou hast [t]set my feet in a large room.

9 Have mercy upon me, O LORD, for I am in trouble; [u]mine eye is consumed with grief, yea, [v]my soul and my belly.

10 For [w]my life is spent with grief, and my years with sighing: [x]my strength faileth because of mine iniquity, and [y]my bones are [6]consumed.

4 The word in the original, rendered hinds, may also signify oaks, and the word calve, to break or rend. Lowth renders the words, 'maketh the oaks to tremble.' The whole psalm is descriptive of the majesty and power of God, reaching to all nature, all its elements, agents, and existences, ruling and controlling them all.

5 David, in his distresses, might, by these words, express his resignation of himself, and his affairs, into the hands of God; but it is certain that Christ actually did expire upon the cross, with the former part of this verse, Lu. 23.46. Nor is there any impropriety in the application of the latter part to him; since, as man, the surety and representative of our nature, he was 'redeemed' from the power of the enemy, by 'the God of truth' accomplishing his promises.—Horne.

6 Do we not, in these words, hear the voice of the 'man of sorrows,' suffering not indeed for his own 'iniquity,' but for ours, of which he frequently, in the psalms, speaks as if it were his own? If sin was punished in the innocent Lamb of God, let us not expect that it should be unpunished in us, unless we repent; and let our punishment never fail to remind us of our guilt.—Horne.

11 [z]I was a reproach among all mine enemies, but [a]especially among my neighbours, and [b]a fear to mine acquaintance: they that did see me without fled from me.

12 I am [c]forgotten as a dead man out of mind: I am like a broken[1] vessel.

13 For [d]I have heard the slander of many; [e]fear was on every side: while[f] they took counsel together against me, they devised to take away my life.[2]

14 But I trusted in thee, O LORD: I said, [g]Thou art my God.

15 [h]My times are in thy hand:[3] deliver[i] me from the hand of mine enemies, and from them that persecute me.

16 [k]Make thy face to shine upon thy servant: [l]save me for thy mercies' sake.

17 [m]Let me not be ashamed, O LORD; for I have called upon thee: let[n] the wicked be ashamed, and [o]let them be silent in the grave.[4]

18 Let [p]the lying lips be put to silence; which [q]speak grievous[5] things proudly and contemptuously against the righteous.

19 Oh [r]how great is thy goodness, which[s] thou hast laid up for them that fear thee; [t]which thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee before the sons of men!

20 [u]Thou shalt hide them in the secret of thy presence [v]from the pride of man; thou shalt keep them secretly in a pavilion from [w]the strife of tongues.

21 Blessed be the LORD; for he hath showed me his [x]marvellous kindness in a strong[6] city.

22 For [y]I said in my haste, [z]I am cut off from before thine eyes: [a]nevertheless thou heardest the voice of my supplications when I cried unto thee.

23 [b]O love the LORD, all ye [c]his saints: for [d]the LORD preserveth the faithful, and [e]plentifully rewardeth the proud doer.

24 [f]Be of good courage, and [g]he shall strengthen your heart, [h]all ye that hope in the LORD.

2 The description of deep and varied sufferings in the preceding verses of the psalm, are doubtless in part applicable to David in the persecutions of Saul, and the distresses of Absalom's rebellion, aggravated by the stings of a guilty conscience in the matter of Uriah, the reproaches of Shimei, & the wicked counsel of Ahithophel. They are however, eminently applicable to our Lord, who commends his soul to his heavenly Father, in the words of the 5th verse. See marg. ref.

3 The psalmist well knew that the time of his troubles and deliverances, and the continuance & period of his life, were entirely at God's disposal: and as he would not attempt to anticipate his appointed time by killing Saul, he was persuaded that Saul could not succeed in his attempts to slay him; and that infinite wisdom and love would bring about his deliverance, and advancement to the throne, when the proper season was arrived. Thus the counsels and devices of the Jewish rulers against our Lord were continually disappointed for several years, because 'his time was not yet come.'

PSALM XXXII.
A.M.2970. B.C.1034.
1 Or, a psalm of David, giving instruction, Ps. xlii.; xlv.; lii.; liii.; lv., title.
2 The word Maschil signifies causing to be wise—making to understand. It implies that the psalm contains peculiarly important instruction, viz. the nature and effects of true repentance. Thirteen psalms bear the same title, all of them most instructive. This is one of the penitential psalms, and is generally supposed to refer to David's sin and repentance in the matter of Uriah.

[d] Ro.5.13; 2Co.5.19-21.
3 The apostle quotes this passage in Ro. 4.4-8, as illustrative of the great doctrine of justification by faith, through the imputed righteousness of the Redeemer, and as one of the proofs that Jews as well as Gentiles were and must be justified through the righteousness of faith, even as were Abraham and David.

7 Neither the writer nor the occasion of this psalm is mentioned: but it is generally ascribed to David; and may perhaps be considered as a continuation of the subject begun in the preceding psalm; as it opens with the very same sentiment, with which that closes.—'God, and not the world, is the fountain of joy, which sinners talk of, but the righteous only possess.'—*Bp. PSALM XXXII.

Blessedness consisteth in remission of sins, 1, 2. Confession of sins giveth ease to the conscience, 3—7. God's promises bring joy, 8—11.

¶ A psalm[1] of David, Maschil.[2]

BLESSED[a] is he [b]whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is [c]covered.

2 Blessed is the man unto whom [d]the LORD imputeth not iniquity,[3] and [e]in whose spirit there is no guile.

3 [f]When I kept silence, [g]my bones waxed old, through [h]my roaring all the day long:

4 For day and night [i]thy hand was heavy upon me: [k]my moisture is turned into the drought of summer. Selah.

5 [l]I acknowledge my sin unto thee, and mine iniquity [m]have I not hid. [n]I said, I will confess my transgressions unto the LORD; and [o]thou forgavest [p]the iniquity of my sin. Selah.

6 [q]For this shall every one that is [r]godly [s]pray unto thee in a[4] time when thou mayest be found: surely [t]in the floods of great waters[5] they shall not come nigh unto him.

7 Thou art [u]my hiding-place; thou shalt preserve me from trouble; thou shalt [v]compass me about with [w]songs of deliverance. Selah.

8 I will [x]instruct thee, and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go: I will guide thee with mine eye.[6]

9 [y]Be ye not as the horse, or as the mule, which have [z]no understanding; whose mouth must be held in with bit and bridle, lest they come near unto thee.

10 [a]Many sorrows shall be to the wicked: [b]but he that trusteth in the LORD, mercy shall compass him about.

11 [c]Be glad in the LORD, and rejoice, ye righteous: and [d]shout for joy, all ye that are [e]upright in heart.

PSALM XXXIII.

God is to be praised for his goodness, 1—5, for his power, 6—11, and for his providence, 12—19. Confidence is therefore to be placed in God, 20—22.

REJOICE[a][7] in the LORD, O [b]ye righteous; for [c]praise is comely for the upright.

2 [d]Praise the LORD with harp; sing unto him with the psaltery and an instrument of ten strings.

3 Sing unto him [e]a new song, [f]play skilfully with a loud noise:

4 For [g]the word of the LORD is right; and [h]all his works are done in truth.

5 [i]He loveth righteousness and judgment: [k]the earth is full of the goodness[1] of the LORD.

6 By [l]the word of the LORD were the heavens made; and all [m]the host of them by [n]the breath of his mouth.[2]

7 He [o]gathereth the waters of the sea together [p]as an heap; he layeth up the depth in store-houses.

8 [q]Let all the earth fear the LORD: let all the inhabitants of the world stand[r] in awe of him:

9 For [s]he spake, and it was done;[3] he commanded, [t]and it stood fast.

10 [u]The LORD bringeth[4] the counsel of the heathen[5] to nought: [v]he maketh the devices of the people of none effect.

11 [w]The counsel of the LORD standeth for ever, [x]the thoughts of his heart to all generations.[6]

12 [y]Blessed is the nation whose God is the LORD; and [z]the people whom he hath chosen for [a]his own inheritance.

13 The LORD [b]looketh from heaven; [c]he beholdeth all the sons of men.

14 From [d]the place of his habitation he looketh upon all the inhabitants of the earth.

15 He [e]fashioneth their hearts alike; [f]he considereth all their works.

16 There is [g]no king saved by the multitude of an host: [h]a mighty man is not delivered by much strength.

17 [i]An horse is a vain thing for safety: neither shall he deliver any by [k]his great strength.

18 Behold, [l]the eye of the LORD is upon them that fear him,[7] upon them that [m]hope in his mercy;

19 [n]To deliver their soul from death, and [o]to keep them alive in famine.

20 [p]Our soul waiteth[8] for the LORD: he[q] is our help and our shield.

21 [r]For our heart shall rejoice in him; because we have trusted in [s]his holy name.

22 [t]Let thy mercy, O LORD, be upon us, according as we hope in thee.

PSALM XXXIV.

David praiseth God, and exhorteth others thereto by his experience, 1—7. They are blessed that trust in God, 8—10. He exhorteth to the fear of God, 11—14. The privileges of the righteous, 15—22.

¶ A psalm of David, when he changed his behaviour before [1]Abimelech; who drove him away, and he departed.

I WILL [a]bless the LORD at all times: his praise shall continually be in my mouth.

2 My soul shall [b]make her boast in the LORD: [c]the humble shall hear thereof, and be glad.

3 [d]O magnify the LORD with me, and [e]let us exalt his name together.

4 [f]I sought the LORD, and he heard me, and delivered me [g]from all my fears.

5 [h]They looked unto him, [i]and were lightened;[2] and [k]their faces were not ashamed.

6 [l]This poor man cried, and the LORD heard him, and [m]saved him out of all his troubles.

7 [n]The angel of the LORD [o]encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them.

8 [p]O taste and see that [q]the LORD is good: [r]blessed is the man that trusteth in him.

9 O [s]fear the LORD, ye his saints: [t]for there is no want to them that fear him.

10 [u]The young lions do lack, and suffer hunger: [v]but they that seek the LORD shall not want any good thing.

11 Come, [w]ye children, hearken unto me; [x]I will teach you the fear of the LORD.

12 [y]What man is he that desireth life, and loveth many days, [z]that he may see good?

13 [a]Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from [b]speaking guile.

14 [c]Depart from evil, and [d]do good; [e]seek peace, and pursue it.

15 [f]The eyes of the LORD are upon the righteous, [g]and his ears are open unto their cry.

16 [h]The face of the LORD is against them that do evil, [i]to cut off the remembrance of them from the [3]earth.

1 Or, Achish, 1Sa.21.13-15; Pr.29.25. Achish was the name of the king of Gath; and 'Abimelech,' which signifies, My father the king, seems to have been a general title given to all the kings of Philistia; as Pharaoh, and afterwards Ptolemy, was of the Egyptian kings. This is one of what Lowth calls the 'Alphabetical poems,' of which he says there are still extant in the books of the Old Testament twelve. The nature, or rather the form of these poems, is this: the poem consists of twenty-two lines, or twenty-two systems of lines, or periods, or stanzas, according to the number of the letters of the Hebrew alphabet; and every line, or every stanza, begins with each letter in its order, as it stands in the alphabet. This was intended for the assistance of the memory, in maxims of morality, and forms of devotion. See Lowth's Prel. Dissert. to Isa.

17 The righteous [k]cry, and the LORD heareth, and delivereth them out of all their troubles.

18 The LORD [l]is nigh unto[1] them that are of a broken heart; and saveth such[2] as be of a contrite spirit.

19 [m]Many are the afflictions of the righteous: but the LORD delivereth him out of them all.

20 [n]He keepeth all his bones: not one of them is broken.[3]

21 [o]Evil shall slay the wicked; and they [p]that hate the righteous shall be desolate.[4]

22 The LORD [q]redeemeth the soul of his servants; and [r]none of them that trust in him shall be desolate.

PSALM XXXV.

David prayeth for his own safety, and his enemies' confusion, 1—10. He complaineth of their wrongful dealing, 11—21. Thereby he inciteth God against them, 22—28.

¶ A psalm of David.

PLEAD[a] my cause, O LORD, with them that strive with me: [b]fight against them that fight against me.

2 [c]Take hold of shield and buckler, and stand up for mine help.

3 Draw out also the spear, and stop[d] the way against them that persecute me: [e]say unto my soul, I am thy salvation.

4 [f]Let them be confounded and put to shame [g]that seek after my soul: let them be [h]turned back and brought to confusion that devise my hurt.

5 Let them be [i]as chaff before the wind: [k]and let the angel of the LORD chase them.

6 [l]Let their way be dark[5] and slippery: and let the angel of the LORD persecute them.

7 For [m]without cause have they hid[n] for me their net in a pit, which without cause they have digged for my soul.[6]

8 [o]Let destruction come upon him at[7] unawares; and [p]let his net that he hath hid catch himself: [q]into that very destruction let him fall.[8]

9 And [r]my soul shall be joyful in the LORD: it shall rejoice in his salvation.

10 [s]All my bones[9] shall say, LORD, who[t] is like unto thee, [u]which deliverest the poor[10] from him that is [v]too strong for him, yea, the poor and the needy from him that spoileth him?

11 False[1] witnesses did rise up: they laid[2] to my charge things that I knew not.

12 [w]They rewarded me evil for good, to the spoiling[3] of my soul.[4]

13 But as for me, [x]when they were sick, my clothing was sackcloth: I humbled[5] my soul with fasting; and [y]my prayer returned into mine own bosom.[6]

14 I behaved[7] myself as though he had been my friend or brother: [z]I bowed down heavily, [a]as one that mourneth for his mother.[8]

15 But [b]in mine adversity[9] they rejoiced, and gathered themselves together; yea, [c]the abjects gathered themselves together against me, and [d]I knew it not; [e]they did tear me, and ceased not:

16 With [f]hypocritical mockers in feasts, they [g]gnashed upon me with their teeth.

17 LORD, [h]how long wilt [i]thou look on? [k]rescue my soul from their destructions, my darling[10] from the lions.

18 [l]I will give thee thanks in the great congregation: [m]I will praise thee among much people.[11]

19 [n]Let not them that are mine enemies wrongfully[12] rejoice over me; neither let them [o]wink with the eye [p]that hate me without a cause.

20 For [q]they speak not peace; but [r]they devise deceitful matters against them that are [s]quiet in the land.[13]

21 Yea, [t]they opened their mouth wide against me, and said, [u]Aha, aha! our eye hath seen it.

22 This [v]thou hast seen, O LORD: [w]keep not silence: O LORD, [x]be not far from me.

23 [y]Stir up thyself, and awake to my judgment, even unto my cause, [z]my God and my Lord.

24 [a]Judge me, O LORD my God, according to thy righteousness; [b]and let them not rejoice over me.

25 Let them not [c]say in their hearts, Ah,[14] [d]so would we have it: let them not say, [e]We have swallowed him up.

26 [f]Let them be ashamed, and

PSALM XXXVI.

The grievous state of the wicked, 1—4. The excellency of God's mercy, 5—9. David prayeth for favour to God's children, 10—12.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David, [a]the servant of the LORD.

THE[3] transgression of the wicked saith within my heart,[3] that there is [c]no fear of God before his eyes.

2 For [d]he flattereth himself in his own eyes, until[4] his iniquity be found to be hateful.[5]

3 [e]The words of his mouth are iniquity and deceit: [f]he hath left off to be wise, and to do good.

4 [g]He deviseth mischief[6] upon his bed; [h]he setteth himself in a way that is not good; he [i]abhorreth not evil.

5 [k]Thy mercy, O LORD, is in the heavens; and [l]thy faithfulness reacheth unto the clouds.

6 [m]Thy righteousness is like the great[7] mountains; [n]thy judgments are a great deep: O LORD, [o]thou preservest man and beast.

7 [p]How excellent[8] is thy loving-kindness, O God! therefore the children of men [q]put their trust under the shadow of thy wings.

8 They shall be [r]abundantly satisfied[9] with the fatness of thy house; and[s] thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures.

9 For [t]with thee is the fountain of life: [u]in thy light shall we see light.

10 O continue[10] thy loving-kindness unto them [v]that know thee; and[w] thy righteousness to the upright in heart.

11 [x]Let not the foot of pride come against me, and [y]let not the hand of the wicked remove me.

12 [z]There are the workers of iniquity fallen: they are cast down, [a]and shall not be able to rise.[1]

PSALM XXXVII.

David exhorteth to patience and confidence in God, by the different states of the godly and the wicked.

¶ A psalm of David.[2]

FRET[a] not thyself because of evil-doers, [b]neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity:

2 For [c]they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb.

3 [d]Trust in the LORD, and do good; so [e]shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily[3] [f]thou shalt be fed.

4 [g]Delight thyself also in the LORD; and [h]he shall give thee the desires of thine heart.

5 Commit[4] thy way unto the LORD; trust also in him, [i]and he shall bring it to pass:

6 And [k]he shall bring forth thy righteousness [l]as the light, and thy judgment as the noon-day.

7 Rest[5] in the LORD, and [m]wait patiently for him: [n]fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, [o]because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass.

8 [p]Cease from anger, and forsake wrath: [q]fret not thyself in any wise to do evil.

9 For [r]evil doers shall be cut off: but those that wait upon the LORD, they shall [s]inherit the earth.

10 For [t]yet a little while, and the wicked [u]shall not be: yea, [v]thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be.

11 But [w]the meek shall inherit the earth; and shall [x]delight themselves in the abundance of peace.

12 [y]The wicked plotteth[6] against the just, and [z]gnasheth upon him with his teeth.

13 The LORD [a]shall laugh at him; for he seeth that [b]his day is coming.

14 The wicked [c]have drawn out the sword, and have bent their bow, to cast down the poor and needy, and [d]to slay such[7] as be of upright conversation.

15 [e]Their sword shall enter into their own heart, and [f]their bows shall be broken.[8]

2 These verses, 24-28, may be thus rendered, 'Judge me, O Lord my God, according to thy righteousness, and let them not rejoice over me. Let them not say in their hearts, So would we have it:' (it is as our souls desired:) 'Let them not say, we have swallowed him up. They shall be ashamed and confounded together, who rejoice in my shame. They shall be clothed with shame and dishonour that magnify themselves against me. They will shout for joy and be glad, that favour my righteous cause.' The twenty-eighth verse is rendered in the future tense, and the two preceding verses might, with equal propriety, and with more energy, be translated in the same manner. ... How applicable is the whole passage to the Saviour's sufferings and triumphs, and to the consequences of them.—Scott.

8 The holiness and happiness of the righteous, & the special favour which God shows them, excite the enmity and envy of the wicked. Thus Cain hated, and envied, and murdered Abel, Ge. 4. 1-12; thus Saul, from a similar spirit, plotted against David, and gnashed on him with his teeth; and thus the Jewish rulers persecuted the holy Jesus and his disciples. So it is still—'he that is after the flesh persecuteth him that is after the spirit.' For a while they seem to prosper; but the Lord despises their impotent malice, and foresees the day when they shall suffer the just punishment of their crimes; and when all their violence will only serve to enhance their own misery.

16 [g]A little that a righteous man ath is better than the riches of many Wicked.
17 For [h]the arms of the wicked all be broken: but [i]the LORD upoldeth the righteous.[1]
18 The LORD [k]knoweth [l]the days the upright; and [m]their inheritance
all be for ever.[2]
19 They shall not be ashamed [n]in e evil time; and [o]in the days of mine they shall be satisfied.
20 But [p]the wicked shall perish, and e enemies of the LORD shall be as e fat[3] of lambs:[4] they shall consume; to[q] smoke shall they consume away.
21 The wicked [r]borroweth, and ayeth not again: [s]but the righteous eweth mercy and giveth.
22 For such as be [t]blessed of him all inherit the earth; and they that [u]cursed of him shall be [v]cut off.
23 [w]The steps of a good man are dered[5] by the LORD; and [x]he deghteth in his way.
24 [y]Though he fall, he shall not e utterly cast down: [z]for the LORD holdeth him with his hand.
25 [a]I have been young, and now am ld; [b]yet have I not seen the righteous rsaken, [c]nor his seed begging bread.
26 He is ever[6] [d]merciful, and lend-th; and [e]his seed is blessed.
27 [f]Depart from evil, [g]and do good;
nd dwell for evermore.
28 For the LORD [h]loveth judgment, nd [i]forsaketh not his saints; they re preserved for ever: [k]but the seed
f the wicked shall be cut off.[7] 29 [l]The righteous shall inherit the nd, and dwell therein for ever.
30 [m]The mouth of the righteous peaketh wisdom, and his tongue alketh of judgment.
31 [n]The law of his God is in his eart; [o]none of his steps[8] shall slide.
32 The wicked [p]watcheth the right-
ous, and seeketh to slay him.
33 The LORD [q]will not leave him his hand, [r]nor condemn him when e is judged.
34 [s]Wait on the LORD, and [t]keep

PSALM XXXVIII.

David moveth God to take compassion of his sad condition, confessing his sins to have been the cause of it.

¶ A psalm of David, [a]to bring to remembrance.

O LORD, [b]rebuke me not in thy wrath: neither chasten me in thy [c]hot displeasure.
2 For [d]thine arrows stick fast in me, and [e]thy hand presseth me sore.
3 There is [f]no soundness in my flesh because of thine anger; [g]neither is there any rest[4] in my bones [h]because of my sin.
4 For [i]mine iniquities are gone over mine head; [k]as an heavy burden they are too heavy for me.
5 [l]My wounds stink, and are corrupt,[5] because of my foolishness.
6 I am troubled;[6] [m]I am bowed down greatly; [n]I go mourning all the day long.
7 For [o]my loins are filled with a loathsome disease; and there is no soundness in my flesh.[7]
8 I am feeble and sore broken: [p]I have roared by reason of the disquietness of my heart.
9 LORD, all my desire is before thee; and [q]my groaning is not hid from thee.
10 [r]My heart panteth, my strength faileth me: as for [s]the light of mine eyes, it also is gone[8] from me.
11 [t]My lovers and my friends [u]stand aloof from my sore;[9] and my kinsmen[10] stand [v]afar off.

12 They also that seek after my life lay[w] snares for me; and they that seek my hurt [x]speak mischievous things, and imagine deceits all the day long.

13 But [y]I, as a deaf man, heard not; and I was as a dumb man that openeth not his mouth.

14 Thus I was as a man [z]that heareth not, and in whose mouth are no reproofs.

15 For in[1] thee, O LORD, [a]do I hope: thou wilt hear,[2] O LORD my God.

16 [b]For I said, Hear me, lest otherwise they should rejoice over me: when [c]my foot slippeth, they magnify themselves against me.

17 For I am ready to halt,[3] and my[d] sorrow is continually before me.

18 For [e]I will declare mine iniquity; I will be [f]sorry for my sin.

19 But [g]mine enemies are lively,[4] and they are strong; and [h]they that hate me wrongfully are multiplied.

20 They also [i]that render evil for good are mine adversaries; [k]because I follow the thing that good is.

21 Forsake me not, O LORD: [l]O my God, be not far from me.

22 [m]Make haste to help me,[5] [n]O LORD my salvation.

PSALM XXXIX.

David's care not to offend with his tongue, 1—3. His reflections upon the shortness and vanity of human life, which led him to hope in God, 4—7. He prayeth for pardon and comfort before his death, 8—13.

¶ To the chief musician, even to [a]Jeduthun, A psalm of David.

I SAID, [b]I will take heed to my ways, [c]that I sin not with my tongue;[6] I will keep my mouth with a bridle,[7] [d]while the wicked is before me.

2 [e]I was dumb with silence; I held my peace, [f]even from good, and [g]my sorrow was stirred.[8]

3 [h]My heart was hot within me; while I was musing the fire burned: then spake I with my tongue.

4 LORD, [i]make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is; that I may know how[9] frail I am.

5 Behold, [k]thou hast made my days as an hand-breadth, and mine age is as[l] nothing before thee: [m]verily every man at[10] his best state is altogether vanity. Selah.

6 Surely every man walketh in a[11] vain shew;[1] [n]surely they are disquieted in vain: [o]he heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who shall gather them.

7 And now, LORD, [p]what wait I for?[2] [q]my hope is in thee.

8 [r]Deliver me from all my transgressions;[3] [s]make me not the reproach of the foolish.

9 [t]I was dumb, I opened not my mouth; because thou didst it.

10 [u]Remove thy stroke away from me: [v]I am consumed by the blow[4] of thine hand.

11 When [w]thou with rebukes dost correct man for iniquity, thou makest his[5] beauty [x]to consume away like a moth: [y]surely every man is vanity. Selah.

12 Hear my prayer, O LORD, and give ear unto my cry; [z]hold not thy peace at my tears: [a]for I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner, [b]as all my fathers were.

13 O [c]spare me, that I may recover strength, before I go hence, and [d]be no more.

PSALM XL.

The benefit of confidence in God, 1—5. Obedience is the best sacrifice, 6—10. He prayeth for salvation to himself, and confusion to his enemies, 11—17.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

I WAITED[6] [a]patiently for the LORD, and [b]he inclined unto me, and heard my cry.

2 [c]He brought me up also out of an horrible pit,[7] out of [d]the miry clay, and [e]set my feet upon a rock, and [f]established my goings.

3 And [g]he hath put a new song in my mouth, even [h]praise unto our God: [i]many shall see it, and fear, and shall trust in the LORD.

4 [k]Blessed is that man that maketh the LORD his trust, and [l]respecteth not the proud, nor such [m]as turn aside to lies.

5 [n]Many, O LORD my God, are thy wonderful works which thou hast done, and [o]thy thoughts which are to us-ward; they[8] cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee: if I would declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbered.[9]

6 This psalm was composed by David probably in the time of Absalom's rebellion. His mind was disturbed by the triumphs and prosperity of wicked men. Feeling himself tempted to call in question the providence of God, & to sin against him with the tongue, by murmuring & repining, he resolves to take heed to his ways —to set a watch upon himself to prevent it. He pursues a train of reflection suited to such a resolution, and most admirably to soothe and sustain his distressed spirit. In the presence of the wicked, or when he thought of them, he resolved to keep his mouth closed, as an animal that is muzzled.

8 Heb. troubled. The meaning of this verse we apprehend to be, I was altogether silent: held my peace from speaking even that which was good, that I might not cast pearls before swine; my grief, though suppressed, was not assuaged; my heart was hot, grieved, and distressed; (the word in the Hebrew is applied to grief as well as to angry passion) and while pensively meditating on these things, the fire burned, wasted, and consumed away; reminding me how speedily all these things should have an end, and how useless it was to be disquieted in vain; thus spake I with my tongue—as in the prayer that follows; perfectly suited to such a state of feeling, and sustaining the unity and consistency of this exquisitely beautiful psalm throughout.

3 While the burden of unforgiven sin lies upon the conscience, there can be no real trust or hope in the goodness or mercy of God. As an essential preparation for reliance upon God, David, therefore, prays for deliverance from the guilt and punishment of sin. opened:[1] burnt-offering and sin-offering hast thou not required.

7 Then said I, [r]Lo, I come: [s]in the volume of the book it is written of me,

8 [t]I delight to do thy will, O my God; yea, [u]thy law is within my heart.[2]

9 [v]I have preached righteousness in the great congregation: lo, [w]I have not refrained my lips, O LORD, [x]thou knowest.

10 [y]I have not hid [z]thy righteousness within my heart; I have declared thy[a] faithfulness and [b]thy salvation: I have not concealed [c]thy loving-kindness and thy truth from the great congregation.

11 [d]Withhold not thou thy tender mercies from me, O LORD: [e]let thy loving-kindness and thy truth continually preserve me.

12 For [f]innumerable evils have compassed me about; [g]mine iniquities have taken hold upon me, so that I am not able to look up: [h]they are more than the hairs of mine head; therefore [i]my heart faileth[3] me.

13 [k]Be pleased, O LORD, to deliver me: O LORD, [l]make haste to help me.

14 [m]Let them be ashamed and confounded together [n]that seek after my soul to destroy it; let them be driven[o] backward, and put to shame, that wish me evil.

15 Let them be [p]desolate for a reward of their shame that [q]say unto me, Aha, aha![4]

16 [r]Let all those that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee: let such as [s]love thy salvation [t]say continually, The LORD be magnified.

17 But [u]I am poor and needy; yet the[v] LORD thinketh upon me: thou [r]art [w]my help and my deliverer; make no tarrying, O my God.

PSALM XLI.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

The recompence of the charitable man, 1—3. David prayeth for mercy, complaining of the treachery of his enemies and apostate friends, 4—10. He acknowledgeth God's favour, and blesseth him, 11—13.

BLESSED [a]is he that considereth the poor:[5] [b]the LORD will deliver him in time of trouble.[6]

2 The LORD will [c]preserve him, and keep him alive; and he shall be blessed[d] upon the earth: [e]and [1]thou wilt not deliver him unto the will of his enemies.

3 The LORD will [f]strengthen him upon the bed of languishing: thou wilt make[2] all his bed in his sickness.

4 I said, [g]LORD, be merciful unto me: [h]heal my soul; for I have [3]sinned against thee.

5 [i]Mine enemies speak evil of me; When shall he die, and [k]his name perish?

6 And if he come to see me, [l]he speaketh vanity: his heart gathereth iniquity to itself; [m]when he goeth abroad, he telleth it.

7 All that hate me [n]whisper together against me: [o]against me do they devise my hurt.[4]

8 An[5] [p]evil disease, say they, cleaveth fast unto him: [q]and now that he lieth, he shall rise up no more.

9 [r]Yea, mine[6] own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, [s]which did eat of my bread, hath lifted[7] up his heel against me.[8]

10 But thou, O LORD, [t]be merciful unto me, and raise me up, [u]that I may requite them.[9]

11 By this I know that thou favourest me, [v]because mine enemy doth not triumph over me.

12 And as for me, [w]thou upholdest me in mine integrity, and [x]settest me before thy face for ever.

13 [y]Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, from everlasting, and to everlasting. [z]Amen, and Amen.

PSALM XLII.

David's zeal to serve God in the temple, 1—4. He encourageth his dejected soul to trust in God, 5—11.

¶ To the chief musician, Maschil,[10] for [a]the sons of Korah.

AS the hart[11] panteth[12] after the water-brooks, [b]so panteth my soul after thee, O God.

2 My soul [c]thirsteth for God, for [d]the living God: [e]when shall I come and appear before God?

3 My [f]tears have been my meat day and night, [g]while they continually say unto me, Where is thy God?

4 [h]When I remember these things, [i]I pour out my soul in me:[13] [k]for I had gone with the multitude;[14] I went with

In them he proclaims the inefficacy of the legal sacrifices to take away sin, and the divine disapprobation of such sacrifices, when relied on for that purpose. He sets forth his own readiness to do and to suffer the will of God the Father, implied in the psalm by the words, 'mine ear hast thou opened;' but more plainly expressed in the apostle's citation by the parnphrase, 'A body hast thou prepared me.'

4 The first of these verses,13-15,is imperative, in which the psalmist simply prays for deliverance: the others are throughout in the future tense, and naturally express the language of lively faith and hope, rather than that of wishing or desiring the destruction foreseen and predicted; and the transition is worthy our notice. A regard to the Septuagint, and other ancient versions, seems to have induced our venerable translators, generally to put such passages in the imperative which, at first view at least, gives them an appearance of harshness, not so congenial to the spirit of devotion. The two verses, however, viewed as predictions of the destruction which awaits the obstinate enemies of Christ and his church, have been wonderfully accomplished in the dire end of many traitors and persecutors, and in the condition of the Jews to this day.—

It was composed by David, when driven from Jerusalem, & beyond Jordan, by Absalom's rebellion; and his soul faint and distressed, panted after God and the wells of salvation, as the hart, naturally of a hot and arid constitution, & parched by the pursuit of the hunter, eagerly seeks the cooling streams, to quench its burning thirst and cool its panting sides.

13 The remembrance of all his distresses makes him pour out his soul in grief; and the more especially, when he calls to mind his former privileges in the house of God.
k 1Ch.15.15-28.
14 There was a multitude to worship God in public, with these I often went: but, alas! this is no more; only a few solitary individuals now sigh for the desolations of Zion.

them to the house of God, [l]with the voice of joy and praise, with a multitude that kept holy-day.

5 [m]Why art thou cast down,[1] O my soul? and why art thou disquieted in me? [n]hope thou in God;[2] for I shall yet praise[3] him [o]for the[4] help of his countenance.

6 O [p]my God, my soul is cast down within me: [q]therefore will I remember thee [r]from the land of Jordan, and of [s]the Hermonites, from the hill[5] Mizar.

7 [t]Deep calleth unto deep at the noise of thy waterspouts: [u]all thy waves and thy billows are gone over me.

8 Yet the LORD will [v]command his loving-kindness in the day-time, and in[w] the night his song shall be with me, and my prayer unto [x]the God of my life.

9 I will say unto [y]God my rock, Why[z] hast thou forgotten me? [a]why go I mourning [b]because of the oppression of the enemy?

10 [c]As with a sword[6] in my bones, mine enemies reproach me; while they say daily unto me, [d]Where is thy God?

11 [e]Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope thou in God; for I shall yet praise him, who is [f]the health of my countenance, and my God.

PSALM XLIII.

The psalmist, praying to be restored to the temple, promiseth to serve God joyfully, 1—4. He encourageth his soul to trust in God, 5.

JUDGE[a] me, O God, and [b]plead my cause against an ungodly[7] nation:[8] O deliver me from the deceitful[9] and unjust man.

2 For thou art [c]the God of my strength: [d]why dost thou cast me off? why[e] go I mourning because of the oppression of the enemy?

3 O [f]send out thy light and thy truth; [g]let them lead me, let them bring me unto [h]thy holy hill, and to thy[i] tabernacles.

4 [k]Then will I go unto the altar of God, unto God my[10] exceeding joy: yea, [l]upon the harp will I praise thee, O[m] God, my God.

5 [n]Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope in God; for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God.

PSALM XLIV.

The church, calling to mind former favours, 1—8, complaineth of present evils, 9—16. Professing her integrity, 17—22, she fervently prayeth for succour, 23—26.

¶ To the chief musician [a]for the sons of Korah, Maschil.

WE [b]have heard with our ears, O God, our fathers have told us, what work thou didst in their days, [c]in the times of old.

2 How [d]thou didst drive out the heathen with thy hand, and plantedst them; how thou didst [e]afflict the people, and cast them out.

3 For [f]they got not the land in possession by their own sword, neither did their own arm save them;[1] but [g]thy right hand, and thine arm, and [h]the light of thy countenance, [i]because thou hadst a favour unto them.

4 Thou art [k]my King,[2] O God: [l]command deliverances for Jacob.

5 [m]Through thee will we [n]push down our enemies; through thy name will we [o]tread them under that rise up against us.

6 For [p]I will not trust in my bow, neither shall my sword save me.

7 But [q]thou hast saved us from our enemies, and hast [r]put them to shame that hated us.

8 [s]In God we boast all the day[3] long, and [t]praise thy name for ever. Selah.

9 But [u]thou hast cast off, and put us to shame; and goest not forth with our armies.

10 [v]Thou makest us to turn back from the enemy; and they which hate us [w]spoil for themselves.

11 Thou hast [x]given us like [4]sheep appointed for meat; and hast [y]scattered us among the heathen.

12 Thou [z]sellest thy people for nought,[5] and dost not [a]increase thy wealth by their price.[6]

13 Thou [b]makest us a reproach to our neighbours, [c]a scorn and a derision to them that are round about us.

14 Thou makest us [d]a by-word among the heathen, [e]a shaking of the head among the people.[7]

As Israel treated David after all his successes in faithfully promoting their interests, & notwithstanding his wisdom and piety, with the blackest ingratitude, treachery, and injustice; and as even his beloved Absalom, and his professed friend and counsellor Ahithophel, joined and headed the base conspiracy; and as the Son of God met with far baser treatment from the same favoured, yet ungodly and merciless, nation: so no eminence or usefulness can exempt any pious man from the contempt or injuries of the wicked; whether he have to do with collective bodies, or individuals. 6 The Lord is pleased to permit his church to be run down, as if he had cast her off with abhorrence: his people are then plundered and oppressed; many are slain, as sheep, for the pleasure or profit of their persecutors; or driven from their native country, and scattered among idolaters & savages; or sold at a very low price like the meanest slaves. Of all these events, the history of the church gives many affecting illustrations. Thus the Lord seems to sell his people for nought, and allow his enemies to prevail, even to his own dishonour; as if he parted with his flock, without any increase to his other wealth.

The psalm is called 'a song of loves,' & it evidently describes the mutual love which subsists between Christ & his church. 4 The royal consort (the church,) is next exhorted, as it seems, by the Father himself, to hearken, consider, and consent to the terms of this union; and in order to enter into it, and act properly in it, she must forget her own people, and her father's house. The whole church, composed of Jews and Gentiles, consists of such as were born in sin; and separation from all idolatry, iniquity, and self-dependence, and from all the carnal interests, pleasures, and attachments of an unconverted state, must make way for receiving Christ as their whole portion and salvation.—Scott.

11 [n]So shall the King greatly desire thy beauty: for he is [o]thy LORD, and [p]worship thou him.

12 And [q]the daughter of Tyre shall be there [r]with a gift; even [s]the rich among the people shall entreat thy favour.[5]

13 [t]The King's daughter is [u]all glorious within; [v]her clothing is of wrought gold.

14 [w]She shall be brought unto the king in [x]raiment of needle-work: [y]the virgins her companions that follow her shall be brought unto thee.

15 [z]With gladness and rejoicing shall they be brought: [a]they shall enter into the King's palace.

16 [b]Instead of thy fathers shall be [c]thy children, whom thou mayest make [d]princes in all the earth.

17 [e]I will make thy name to be remembered in all generations: [f]therefore shall the people praise thee for ever and ever.

PSALM XLVI.

The confidence of the church in God's protection, 1—7. An exhortation to contemplate his works, 8—11.

¶ To the chief musician for[6] [a]the sons of Korah, [b]A song upon [c]Alamoth.

GOD is [d]our refuge and strength, [e]a very present help in trouble:

2 Therefore [f]will not we fear, [g]though the earth be removed, and though [h]the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea;[1]

3 Though [i]the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though [k]the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. Selah.

4 There is [l]a river, the streams whereof shall make glad [m]the city of God, [n]the holy place of the tabernacles of [o]the most High.

5 [p]God is in the midst of her; [q]she shall not be moved: God shall help her, and that right early.[2]

6 [r]The heathen raged, [s]the kingdoms were moved: he uttered his voice, [t]the earth melted.

7 [u]The LORD of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge.[3] Selah.

8 [v]Come, behold the works of the LORD, [w]what desolations[4] he hath made in the earth.

9 [x]He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; [y]he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; he[z] burneth the chariot in the fire.

10 [a]Be still,[5] and [b]know that I am God: [c]I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth.

11 The LORD of hosts is with us; the[d] God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.

PSALM XLVII.

The nations are exhorted cheerfully to entertain the kingdom of Christ.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm [6]for the sons of Korah.

O [a]CLAP your hands, all ye people; [b]shout unto God with the voice of triumph:[7]

2 For the LORD most High [c]is terrible; he is [d]a great King over all the earth.

3 He shall [e]subdue the people under us, and the nations [f]under our feet.

4 He shall [g]choose our inheritance for us, the [h]excellency of Jacob, whom[i] he loved. Selah.

5 [k]God is gone up [l]with a shout, the LORD with [m]the sound of a trumpet.

6 [n]Sing praises to God, sing praises: sing praises unto [o]our King, sing praises.

7 For God is [p]the King of all the earth: [q]sing ye praises with understanding.[8]

8 [r]God reigneth over the heathen:

4 In the preceding part of this noble psalm, the psalmist expresses his confidence in God, in the most terrible convulsions, in the consolations of his Holy Spirit which flow in the church, as a gladdening and enriching river. He narrates, in the concise and energetic words of the sixth verse, the great and immediate deliverances which God often wrought for his church, his confidence that God is still with her in the seventh, and here calls upon all men to witness his mighty works in her behalf, and the judgments inflicted on her enemies.

2 [f]Beautiful for situation, [g]the joy of the whole earth,[5] is mount Zion, [h]on the sides of the north, [i]the city of the great King

3 [k]God is known in her palaces for a refuge.

4 For, [l]lo, the kings were assembled, they passed by together.

PSALM XLIX.

The psalmist calleth upon all the earth to join him in his meditations, 1—4. He sheweth the vanity of trusting in worldly wealth, 5—20.

To the chief musician, A psalm [1]for the sons of Korah.

HEAR[a] this, all ye people; give ear, [b]all ye inhabitants of the world:
2 Both [c]low and high, rich and poor, together.
3 My [d]mouth shall speak of wisdom; and [e]the meditation of my heart shall be of understanding.
4 [f]I will incline mine ear to [g]a parable:[2] I will open my [h]dark saying upon the harp.
5 [i]Wherefore should I fear in [k]the days of evil, when [l]the iniquity of my[m] heels[3] shall compass me about?
6 They that [n]trust in their wealth, and [o]boast themselves in the multitude of their riches;
7 None of them can by any means redeem his brother, nor [p]give to God a ransom for him;
8 (For [q]the redemption of their soul is precious,[4] and it ceaseth for ever;)
9 [r]That he should still live for ever, and not [s]see corruption.
10 For he seeth that [t]wise men die, likewise [u]the fool and the brutish person perish, and [v]leave their wealth to others.
11 [w]Their inward thought is, that their houses shall continue for ever, and their dwelling-places to all[5] generations: [x]they call their lands after their own names.
12 Nevertheless, man being [y]in honour abideth not: he is [z]like the beasts that perish.
13 This their way is [a]their folly; yet their posterity approve[6] their sayings. Selah.
14 [b]Like sheep [c]they are laid in the grave; [d]death shall feed on them; and [e]the upright shall have dominion over them [f]in the morning; and their[g] beauty[7] shall consume in[8] the grave from their dwelling.[9]
15 But [h]God will redeem my soul from the power[10] of the grave;[11] for he shall[i] receive me. Selah.
16 [k]Be not thou afraid when one is made rich, when [l]the glory of his house is increased;
17 For when he dieth [m]he shall carry nothing away; [n]his glory shall not descend after him:
18 Though while[1] he lived he [o]blessed his soul; and men [p]will praise thee, when thou doest well to [2]thyself.
19 He[3] shall go [q]to the generation of his fathers; they shall [r]never see light.
20 [s]Man that is in honour, and [t]understandeth not, is [u]like the beasts that perish.

PSALM L.

The majesty of God in the church, 1—4. His command to gather his saints, 5, 6. The pleasure of God is not in ceremonies, 7—13; but in sincerity of obedience, 14—23.

¶ A psalm of[4] Asaph.

THE [a]mighty God, [b]even the LORD, [c]hath spoken, and [d]called the earth, from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof.
2 [e]Out of Zion, [f]the perfection of beauty, [g]God hath shined.
3 [h]Our God shall come, and shall not [i]keep silence:[5] [k]a fire shall devour before him, and [l]it shall be very tempestuous round about him.
4 He shall [m]call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may [n]judge his people.
5 [o]Gather [p]my saints together unto me; those that have [q]made a covenant with me by sacrifice.
6 And [r]the heavens shall declare his righteousness: for [s]God is [6]judge himself. [t]Selah.
7 [u]Hear, [v]O my people, and I will speak; O Israel, and [w]I will testify against thee: [x]I am God, even thy God.
8 [y]I will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices, or thy burnt-offerings, to have been continually before me.
9 I will [z]take no bullock out of thy house, nor he-goats out of thy folds:
10 For [a]every beast of the forest is mine, and [b]the cattle upon a thousand hills.
11 I [c]know all the fowls of the mountains; and [d]the wild beasts of the field are mine.[7]
12 If I were hungry, I would not tell thee; for [e]the world is mine, and [f]the fulness thereof.
13 Will I eat the flesh of bulls, or drink the blood of goats?
14 [g]Offer unto God thanksgiving;

It is uncertain whether this was 'Asaph the seer,' (2 Ch.29. 30) or Asaph the Levite, one of the chief singers in the time of David. Be that as it may, this sublime psalm, 'is generally supposed to predict the coming of Christ, the abolition of the Mosaic dispensation, and the introduction of Christianity; with the condemnation of the Jews, especially of the scribes and pharisees, for rejecting it. But the judgment executed upon Jerusalem prefigured the awful proceedings & consequences of the general judgment; and the scribes and pharisees may be considered as the parents of a numerous progeny of superstitious, formal, and hypocritical professors and teachers of Christianity, who will be condemned at that solemn day.'—Scott.

and [h]pay thy vows unto the most High:

15 And [i]call upon me in the day of trouble; [k]I will deliver thee, and thou shalt [l]glorify me.

16 But unto [m]the wicked God saith, What[n] hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or that [o]thou shouldest take my covenant in thy mouth?

17 Seeing thou [p]hatest instruction, and [q]castest my words behind thee.

18 When thou sawest a thief, then thou [r]consentedst with him, and [1]hast been [s]partaker with adulterers.

19 Thou givest[2] thy mouth to evil, and [t]thy tongue frameth deceit.

20 Thou sittest and [u]speakest against thy brother; thou [v]slanderest thine[w] own mother's son.

21 These things hast thou done, and I[x] kept silence; thou [y]thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself: but [z]I will reprove thee, and set[a] them in order before thine eyes.[3]

22 Now [b]consider this, ye that forget[c] God, lest [d]I tear you in pieces, and there be [e]none to deliver.

23 [f]Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me: [g]and to him that ordereth[4] his conversation aright, will I shew [h]the salvation of God.

PSALM LI.

David prayeth for remission of his sins, whereof he maketh a deep confession, 1—5. He prayeth for sanctification, 6—15. God delighteth not in sacrifice, but in sincerity, 16, 17. He prayeth for the church, 18, 19.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David, [a]when Nathan the prophet came unto him, [b]after he had gone in to Bathsheba.

HAVE mercy upon me, O God, [c]according to thy loving-kindness; according unto [d]the multitude of thy tender[e] mercies [f]blot out my transgressions.[5]

2 [g]Wash me throughly from mine iniquity, and [h]cleanse me from my sin.

3 For [i]I acknowledge my transgressions, and [k]my sin is ever before me.

4 [l]Against thee, thee only, have I sinned, and done this [m]evil in thy sight; [n]that thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, and be clear when[o] thou judgest.

5 Behold, [p]I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive me.[1]

6 Behold, [q]thou desirest truth in [r]the inward parts; and [s]in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom.

7 [t]Purge me with hyssop,[2] [u]and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be [v]whiter than snow.

8 [w]Make me to hear joy and gladness; that [x]the bones which thou hast broken may rejoice.

9 [y]Hide thy face from my sins, and [z]blot out all mine iniquities.[3]

10 [a]Create in me [b]a clean heart, O God; and [c]renew a right[4] spirit within me.

11 [d]Cast me not away from thy presence; and [e]take not thy [f]Holy Spirit from me.

12 [g]Restore unto me [h]the joy of thy salvation; and [i]uphold me with thy [k]free Spirit:[5]

13 [l]Then will I teach transgressors [m]thy ways; and sinners shall be [n]converted unto thee.

14 [o]Deliver me from [6]blood-guiltiness, O God, thou [p]God of my salvation; and [q]my tongue shall sing aloud of [r]thy righteousness.

15 [s]O Lord, [t]open thou my lips; and [u]my mouth shall shew forth thy praise.

16 For thou [v]desirest not sacrifice, else[7] would I give it; [w]thou delightest not in burnt-offering.

17 [x]The sacrifices of God are [y]a broken spirit: a broken and a contrite heart, O God, [z]thou wilt not despise.

18 [a]Do good in [b]thy good pleasure unto Zion: [c]build thou the walls of Jerusalem.

19 Then shalt thou be [d]pleased with [e]the sacrifices of righteousness, with burnt-offering, and whole burnt-offering: then shall they offer bullocks upon thine altar.

PSALM LII.

David, reproving the spiteful malice of Doeg, prophesieth his destruction, 1—5. The righteous shall rejoice at it, 6, 7. David, in confidence of God's mercy, giveth him thanks, 8, 9.

3 Many still, as among the Jews, professing to be the servants of God, yet practise the sins and crimes enumerated in these verses, 10-21. 'The whole of the strange delusion arises from a perverse construction put upon the long suffering of God, (Ec.8.11-13; Ro.2.4-6,) and a wilful mistake of his character, and the intention of his gospel; as if the methods of his grace, the doctrines of his word, or the ordinances of his worship, were substituted in the stead of a holy life, and afforded men the license to indulge their lusts with impunity.'—Scott. But as the Jews were punished for their iniquity, so still shall they who sin after their manner.

WHY [c]boastest thou thyself in [d]mischief, [e]O mighty man? [f]the goodness of God endureth continually.

2 [g]Thy tongue deviseth mischiefs; like[h] a sharp razor, [i]working deceitfully.

3 Thou [k]lovest evil more than good, and [l]lying rather than to speak righteousness. Selah.

4 Thou lovest all-devouring[m] words, [1] thou deceitful tongue.

5 [n]God shall likewise destroy[2] thee for ever: he shall take thee away, and pluck[o] thee out of thy dwelling-place, and [p]root thee out of [q]the land of the living.[3] Selah.

6 The [r]righteous also shall see, and fear,[s] [t]and shall laugh[4] at him:

7 [u]Lo, this is the man that [v]made not God his strength; but [w]trusted in the abundance of his riches, and strengthened[x] himself in his wickedness.[5]

8 But I am [y]like a green olive-tree[6] in the house of God:[z] I trust in the mercy of God for ever and ever.

9 [a]I will praise thee for ever, because thou hast done it: and I will wait[b] on thy name; [c]for it is good before thy saints.

PSALM LIII.

David describeth the corruption of a natural man, 1—3. He convinceth the wicked by the light of their own conscience, 4, 5. He wisheth to see the salvation of God, 6.

¶ To the chief musician upon [a]Mahalath,[7] Maschil, A psalm of David.

THE [b]fool[8] hath [c]said in his heart, There is no God. [d]Corrupt are they, and [e]have done abominable iniquity: [f]there is none that doeth good.

2 [g]God looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any [h]that did understand, that did [i]seek God.

3 [k]Every one of them is gone back; they are all together become [l]filthy: there is [m]none that doeth good, no, not one.

4 Have [n]the workers of iniquity no knowledge? who [o]eat up my people as they eat bread: they have not called upon God.

5 [p]There were[9] they in great fear, where no fear was: for God hath scattered[q] the bones of him that encampeth against thee: [r]thou hast put them to shame, [s]because God hath despised them.[1]

6 [2]Oh that the salvation of Israel were come [t]out of Zion! When God [u]bringeth back the captivity of his people, [v]Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

PSALM LIV.

David, complaining of the Ziphims, prayeth for salvation, 1—3. Upon his confidence in God's help, he promiseth sacrifice and praise, 4—7.

¶ To the chief musician on Neginoth, Maschil, A psalm of David, [a]when the Ziphims came and said to Saul, Doth not David hide himself with us?

SAVE me, O God, [b]by thy name, and [c]judge me by thy strength.

2 [d]Hear my prayer, O God; give ear to the words of my mouth.

3 For [e]strangers[3] are risen up against me, and [f]oppressors seek after my soul: [g]they have not set God before them. Selah.

4 Behold, [h]God is mine helper: the LORD is with them that [i]uphold my soul.

5 He shall [k]reward evil unto [4]mine enemies: [l]cut them off in thy [5]truth.

6 I will [m]freely sacrifice unto thee; [n]I will praise thy name, O LORD, [o]for it is good.

7 For [p]he hath delivered me out of all trouble; and [q]mine eye hath seen his desire[6] upon mine enemies.

PSALM LV.

David in his prayer complaineth of his fearful case, 1—8. He prayeth against his enemies, of whose wickedness and treachery he complaineth, 9—15. He comforteth himself in God's preservation of him, and confusion of his enemies, 16—23.

¶ To the chief musician on [a]Neginoth, Maschil, A psalm of David.

GIVE[b] ear to my prayer, O God; and [c]hide not thyself from my supplication.

2 Attend unto me, and hear me: [d]I mourn in my complaint, and make a noise;[7]

3 Because of the voice of the enemy, because of [e]the oppression of the wicked: [f]for they cast [8]iniquity upon me, and in wrath they hate me.

4 [g]My heart is sore pained within me; and [h]the terrors of death are fallen upon me.

come upon me, and [k]horror hath overwhelmed me.[1]

6 And I said, [l]Oh that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away, and be at rest.

7 Lo, then [m]would I wander far off, and remain in the wilderness. Selah.

8 I would hasten my escape from the[n] windy storm and tempest.

9 Destroy, O Lord, and [o]divide their tongues: for [p]I have seen violence and strife in the city.

10 [q]Day and night they go about it upon the walls thereof: [r]mischief also and sorrow are in the midst of it.

11 [s]Wickedness is in the midst thereof;[t] deceit and guile depart not from her streets.[2]

12 For [u]it was not an enemy that reproached me; then I could have borne it: neither was it he that hated me that did [v]magnify himself against me; [w]then I would have hid myself from him:

13 But it was thou, a man[3] mine equal, [x]my guide, and [y]mine acquaintance.

14 We[4] took sweet counsel together, and [z]walked unto the house of God in company.[5]

15 [a]Let death seize upon them, and [b]let them go down quick into hell:[6] for wickedness is in their dwellings, and among them.

16 As for me, [c]I will call upon God; and the LORD shall save me.

17 [d]Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray, and [e]cry aloud; and he shall hear my voice.

18 [f]He hath delivered my soul in peace from the battle that was against me; for [g]there were many with me.

19 God shall [h]hear, and afflict them, even [i]he that abideth of old. Selah. Because[7] they have [k]no changes, therefore they fear not God.

20 He hath [l]put forth his hands against such as be [m]at peace with him; he hath broken[8] his covenant.

21 [n]The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but [o]war was in his heart: his words were softer than oil, yet were they drawn swords.[9]

22 [p]Cast thy burden[10] upon the LORD, and he shall sustain thee: [q]he shall never suffer the righteous to be moved.

23 But thou, O God, [r]shalt bring them down into [s]the pit of destruction: bloody[1] and deceitful men [t]shall not live out half their days; but I will trust in thee.

2 Every kind of wickedness prevailed in Jerusalem during Absalom's rebellion. David therefore prayed, that the Lord would render the devices of the usurpers like Babel, by confounding their language and counsels, and thus leading them to disunion, and mutual jealousies and suspicions. This was granted when Hushai's counsel was preferred to Ahithophel's; and that crafty politician, the stay of the whole party, went and hanged himself. Thus the nation of the Jews, after they had rejected Christ, were destroyed by being divided; and Jerusalem having become the scene of every enormity, was miserably desolated by the Romans.

5 The circumstances here mentioned greatly aggravated the guilt and baseness of Ahithophel's treachery. See 2 Sa. 16.20-23;17.1-4. Thus Christ was betrayed by one whom he had honoured as a companion, a disciple &an apostle; and who resembled Ahithophel in his crimes and in his doom—for both were speedily overtaken by divine vengeance in the same dreadful manner, 2Sa. 17. 23; Mat. 27. 3-5; John 13. 18-30. This was foretold by David concerning Ahithophel, and by Jesus concerning Judas: for the words, ver.15, are in the future, and more naturally signify a prediction, than an imprecation.

7 In the Roman tombs are found small bottles (usually called lachrymatories) of glass or pottery, but most commonly glass, and of various forms, but generally with long narrow necks. They are commonly supposed to have contained tears shed by the surviving friends of the deceased, & to have been deposited in the sepulchres as memorials of affection & distress. See Pict. Bible on the place. Many of these were found in the tombs of Pompeii, some of which are still preserved entire. That city seems to have been buried in the just displeasure of God—for some of its remains testify its wickedness, and preserved to prove the truth of scripture.

PSALM LVI.

David, praying to God in confidence of his word, complaineth of his enemies, 1—8. He professeth his confidence in God's word, and promiseth to praise him, 9—13.

¶ To the chief musician upon Jonath-elem-rechokim,[2] Michtam[3] of David, [a]when the Philistines took him in Gath.

BE[b] merciful unto me, O God; for man would [c]swallow me up: he fighting daily oppresseth me.

2 Mine enemies[4] would daily swallow me up: for they be [d]many that fight against me, O thou [e]most High.[5]

3 [f]What time I am afraid, I will trust in thee.

4 [g]In God I will praise his word, [h]in God I have put my trust: I will not fear what flesh can do unto me.

5 Every day [i]they wrest my[6] words: [k]all their thoughts are against me for evil.

6 They [l]gather themselves together, they [m]hide themselves, they [n]mark my steps, when they wait for my soul.

7 Shall they [o]escape by iniquity? [p]in thine anger cast down the people, O God.

8 Thou [q]tellest my wanderings: [r]put thou my tears into thy [7]bottle: [s]are they not in thy book?

9 When [t]I cry unto thee, [u]then shall mine enemies turn back: this I know; for [v]God is for me.

10 [w]In God will I praise his word: in the LORD will I praise his word.

11 In God have I put my trust: [x]I will not be afraid what man can do unto me.

12 [y]Thy vows are upon me, O God: [z]I will render praises unto thee.

13 For [a]thou hast delivered my soul from death: [b]wilt not thou deliver my feet from falling, that I may [c]walk before God in [d]the light of the living?

PSALM LVII.

David in prayer fleeing unto God, complaineth of his dangerous case, 1—6. He encourageth himself to praise God, 7—11.

To the chief musician, Al-taschith,[1] Michtam of David, [a]when he fled from Saul in the cave.

BE merciful unto me, O God, [b]be merciful unto me; for [c]my soul trusteth in thee: yea, [d]in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until[e] these calamities be over-past.

2 I will cry unto [f]God most High; unto God [g]that performeth all things for me.

3 He shall [h]send from heaven, and save me from[2] the reproach of him that would [i]swallow me up.[3] Selah. God shall [k]send forth his mercy and his truth.

4 My soul is [l]among lions;[4] and I lie even among them that are [m]set on fire,[5] even the sons of men, [n]whose teeth are spears and arrows, and their tongue[o] a sharp sword.

5 [p]Be thou exalted, O God, [q]above the heavens; let [r]thy glory be above all the earth.

6 They have prepared [s]a net for my steps; [t]my soul is bowed down: they have digged a pit for me, into the midst whereof they are fallen themselves. Selah.

7 [u]My heart is fixed,[6] O God, my heart is fixed; [v]I will sing and give praise.

8 [w]Awake up, [x]my glory; awake, psaltery and harp: I myself will awake early.

9 [y]I will praise thee, O LORD, among the people; I will sing unto thee among the nations:

10 For [z]thy mercy is great unto the heavens, and [a]thy truth unto the clouds.

11 [b]Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens: let thy glory be above all the earth.

PSALM LVIII.

David reproving wicked judges, 1, 2; describeth the nature of the wicked, 3—5; and devoteth them to God's judgments, 6—9; whereat the righteous shall rejoice, 10, 11.

To the chief musician, Al-taschith,[7] Michtam of David.

DO[a] ye indeed speak righteousness, [b]O congregation?[8] do ye judge uprightly, [c]O ye sons of men?

2 Yea, [d]in heart ye work wickedness; ye [e]weigh the violence of your hands in the earth.

3 The wicked are [f]estranged from the womb; they go astray as[2] soon as they be born, speaking lies.

4 Their [g]poison is like[3] the poison of a [h]serpent: they are like [i]the deaf adder[4] that stoppeth her ear;

5 Which will not hearken to the voice of charmers,[5] charming[6] never so wisely.

6 [k]Break their teeth, O God, in their mouth; break out the great teeth of [l]the young lions, O LORD.

7 Let them [m]melt away as waters which run continually: when he bendeth his bow to shoot his arrows, let them be as cut in pieces.

8 As a snail which melteth,[7] let every one of them [n]pass away; like [o]the untimely birth of a woman, that they may not see the sun.

9 Before your pots can feel [p]the thorns, he shall take them away [q]as with a whirlwind, both[8] living, and in his wrath.

10 [r]The righteous shall rejoice when he seeth the vengeance; he shall [s]wash his feet in the blood of the wicked.

11 So that a man shall say, [t]Verily there is a[9] reward for the righteous: [u]verily he is a God that judgeth in the earth.[10]

PSALM LIX.

David, in great danger, prayeth to be saved from his enemies, 1—5. He complaineth of their cruelty, 6, 7. He trusteth in God, 8—10. He prayeth against them, 11—15. He promiseth to praise God continually, 16, 17.

¶ To the chief musician,[11] Al-taschith, Michtam of David, [a]when Saul sent, and they watched the house to kill him.

DELIVER[b] me from mine enemies, O my God; defend[12] me from them that rise up against me.

2 Deliver me from the workers of iniquity, and [c]save me from bloody men.

3 For, lo, [d]they lie in wait for my soul: [e]the mighty are gathered against me; [f]not for my transgression, nor for my sin, O LORD.

4 They [g]run and prepare themselves without my fault: [h]awake to help[13] me, and behold.

They could handle them without harm, and cure others who were bitten. They practised various arts for these ends. A curious account of them may be found in the Notes to the Pictorial Bible.

10 Those who refuse to hear him (the Saviour,) that speaks to them in strains of heavenly wisdom, must perish miserably and eternally; nor can all nature furnish images adequately to represent their dreadful doom. Tho' the righteous are not glad at calamities, yet they must rejoice to see the cause of God triumphant, and men on every side convinced that there is a reward for the righteous, and 'a God who judgeth in the earth.' They must therefore exult on some occasions, in the ruin of terrible persecutors. They will indue time rejoice at the destruction of all antichristian corrupters of the faith; and at last they will witness the perdition of ungodly men, with unmingled joy, and sing, 'So let all thine enemies perish, O Lord.'—Scott.

Retaining much of their native habits, as beasts of prey, they do this chiefly by night; as the text intimates, being in general dozy and inactive in the day time. This contributes to render their presence, in an oriental city, more formidable to passengers at night than by day.

¶ To the chief musician, to [a]Jeduthun, A psalm of David.

TRULY[4] [b]my soul waiteth[5] upon God: [c]from him cometh my salvation.

2 [d]He only is my rock and my salvation; he is my defence;[6] [e]I shall not be greatly moved.

3 [f]How long will ye [g]imagine mischief against a man? [h]ye shall be slain all of you: [i]as a bowing wall shall ye be, and as a tottering fence.

4 They only [k]consult to cast him down from his excellency; [l]they delight in lies: [m]they bless with their mouth, but they curse inwardly.[7] Selah.

6 He only is [q]my rock and my salvation: he is my defence; [r]I shall not be moved.

7 [s]In God is my salvation and [t]my glory: [u]the rock of my strength, and my refuge, is in God.

8 [v]Trust in him at all times; ye people, [w]pour out your heart before him: [x]God is a refuge for us. Selah.

9 Surely [y]men of low degree are vanity, and [z]men of high degree are a lie: to be [a]laid in the balance, they are altogether[9] [b]lighter than vanity.

10 [c]Trust not in oppression, and become not vain in robbery: if [d]riches increase, [e]set not your heart[10] upon them.

11 God hath [f]spoken once; twice have I heard this, [g]that power[11] belongeth unto God.

1 The Psalmist, banished from the courts & ordinances of God, considered himself as a weary traveller in a desolate and parched land, when ready to perish by thirst. And his earnest desire after communion with God & his worshippers at the sanctuary, seems to have affected his body as well as his soul: perhaps spoiling his rest and appetite, and impairing his health and vigour.

4 'The remembrance of thy favour is more sweet unto me than all the pleasures and dainties of the world.' The Psalmist waited for the pleasure of communion with God, with more ardent desire than any epicure ever anticipated the enjoyment of sensual pleasure; and the remembrance of God during the night cheered his soul when dangers or cares disturbed his rest.

PSALM LXIII.

David's thirst after God, 1—3. His manner of blessing God, 4—8. His confidence of his enemies' destruction, and of his own rejoicing, 9—11.

¶ A psalm of David, [a]when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

O GOD, [b]thou art my God; [c]early will I seek thee: [d]my soul thirsteth for thee, [e]my flesh[1] longeth for thee [f]in a dry[2] and thirsty land, where no water is;

2 [g]To see thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee [h]in the sanctuary.

3 Because [i]thy loving-kindness is better than life, [k]my lips shall praise thee.

4 Thus [l]will I bless thee while I live: [m]I will lift up my hands in thy name.

5 [n]My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow[3] and fatness; and my mouth shall praise thee [o]with joyful lips;[4]

6 When [p]I remember thee upon my bed, and meditate on thee in the night-watches.

7 [q]Because thou hast been my help, therefore [r]in the shadow of thy [5]wings will I rejoice.

8 My soul [s]followeth hard[6] after thee: [t]thy right hand upholdeth me.

9 But those [u]that seek my soul, to destroy it, shall [v]go into the lower parts of the earth.

10 They shall fall[7] by the sword; they shall be [w]a portion for foxes.[8]

11 But [x]the king shall rejoice in God; every one that [y]sweareth by him shall glory: but [z]the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped.

PSALM LXIV.

David prayeth for deliverance, complaining of his enemies, 1—6. He promiseth himself to see such an evident destruction of his enemies, that the righteous shall rejoice at it, 7—10.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

HEAR[a] my voice, O God, in my prayer: [b]preserve my life from fear of the enemy.

2 [c]Hide me from the [d]secret counsel of the wicked; [e]from the insurrection of the workers of iniquity:

3 Who [f]whet their tongue like a sword, and [g]bend their bows to shoot their arrows, even bitter words:

4 That they may [h]shoot in secret at [i]the perfect: [k]suddenly do they shoot at him, and fear not.

5 They [l]encourage themselves in an evil matter:[1] [m]they commune of[2] laying snares privily; they say, [n]Who shall see them?

6 They [o]search out iniquities; they[3] accomplish a[4] diligent search: both the [p]inward thought of every one of them, and the heart, is deep.[5]

7 But [q]God shall shoot at them with an arrow; [r]suddenly shall[6] they be wounded.

8 So they shall make [s]their own tongue to fall upon themselves:[7] [t]all that see them shall flee away.

9 And all men [u]shall fear, and shall declare the work of God: for [v]they shall wisely consider of his doing.

10 [w]The righteous shall be glad in the LORD, and shall trust in him; and all [x]the upright in heart shall glory.

PSALM LXV.

David praiseth God, 1—3. The blessedness of God's chosen, because of his infinite power and goodness, 4—13.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm and song of David.

PRAISE[a] waiteth[8] for thee, O God, [b]in Zion: and [c]unto thee shall the vow be performed.

2 O [d]thou that hearest prayer, unto[e] thee shall all flesh come.[9]

3 Iniquities[10] [f]prevail against me: as for [g]our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away.

4 [h]Blessed is the man whom thou choosest,[i] and [k]causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: [l]we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple.

5 By [m]terrible things[11] [n]in righteousness wilt thou answer us, [o]O God of our salvation; who art [p]the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are [q]afar off upon the sea:

6 Which [r]by his strength setteth fast the mountains; being [s]girded with power:

7 Which [t]stilleth the noise of the seas, [u]the noise of their waves, and the[v] tumult of the people.

8 They also that dwell [w]in the uttermost parts are [x]afraid at thy tokens: thou makest the [y]outgoings of the morning and evening to rejoice.[1]

9 Thou [z]visitest the earth, [2][a]and waterest it: [a]thou greatly enrichest it with [b]the river of God,[3] which is full of water: [c]thou preparest them corn, when thou hast so provided for it.

10 Thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly; thou settlest[4] the furrows thereof; thou makest[5] it soft with showers; thou [d]blessest the springing thereof:

11 Thou [e]crownest the year [6]with thy goodness; and [f]thy paths drop [g]fatness.

12 They [h]drop upon the pastures of the wilderness; and the little hills rejoice[7] on every side.

13 [i]The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered over with corn; [k]they shout for joy, they also sing.

PSALM LXVI.

David exhorteth to praise God, 1—4, to observe the great works 5—7, to bless him for his gracious benefits, 8—12. He voweth for himself religious service to God, 13—15. He declareth God's special goodness to himself, 16—20.

¶ To the chief musician, A song or psalm.

MAKE[a] a joyful noise unto God, all[8] ye lands:

2 [b]Sing forth the honour of his name; make his praise glorious.

3 Say unto God, [c]How terrible art thou in thy works! [d]through the greatness of thy power shall thine enemies submit[9] themselves unto thee.

4 [e]All the earth shall worship thee, and shall sing unto thee; they shall sing to thy name. Selah.

5 [f]Come and see the works of God: he is [g]terrible in his doing toward the children of men.

6 [h]He turned the sea into dry land: they went through the flood on foot; [i]there did we rejoice[10] in him.

7 [k]He ruleth by his power for ever; [l]his eyes behold the nations: [m]let not the rebellious exalt themselves. Selah.

8 [n]O bless our God, ye people, and [o]make the voice of his praise to be heard;

The reports also of the judgments of God, on the enemies of Israel, excited consternation in distant nations; and the glad tidings of his salvation have made, or will make, the inhabitants of every land to rejoice.

10 The people shall praise, &c. The coming of Christ, 'the Sun of righteousness, who arose,' on the land of Israel, 'with healing in his wings;' the success of the gospel in the primitive ages, and the future conversion of the nations to Christ; seem to have been predicted in the most unequivocal manner—nor can the prophecy be considered as fulfilled, while any part of the world remains in Pagan, Mahommedan, or Jewish darkness; or while any part of the church continues in bondage to antichristian tyranny and superstition, or corrupted with heresy, and miserably divided, as, alas! it is at present.

2 The Psalmist looked back to the former mercies of God to Israel, and predicted further prosperity to his people, now the symbol of God's presence had taken possession of its appointed residence among them. The presence of God with Isrnel had dissipated the force and projects of those who hated him and them, as the cloud of smoke is dispersed by the wind, or as the wax is liquefied by the fire... Thus had it been of old; thus would it certainly be in future times.

7 In these verses (7-10) the Psalmist describes the displays of God's majesty, his power and goodness in delivering the Israelites from Egypt, and providing for them in the wilderness. 'Considering the psalm as predictive and descriptive of the ascension of the Saviour, our thoughts are naturally led to the events that followed; and many parts of it are peculiarly applicable to these events. In this view, how weary and barren was the visible church at the death of Christ! But what a gracious and refreshing rain was soon sent down upon it, in the pouring forth of the Spirit at the day of Pentecost & afterwards! What provision was then made for the poor souls who had long waited for redemption in Israel, or who had groped in darkness in other lands!

11 He complains of the contempt that was put upon him, & the reproach with which he was continually loaded. And in this especially, his complaint points at Christ; who for our sakes submitted to the greatest disgrace, and made himself of no reputation. We having by sin injured God in his honour, Christ made him satisfaction, not only by divesting himself of the honours due to an incarnate Deity, but by submitting to the greatest dishonours that could be done to any man.—Henry.

my brethren, [u]and an alien unto my mother's children.

9 For [v]the zeal of thine house hath eaten me up; [w]and the reproaches of them that reproached thee are fallen upon me.[1]

10 When [x]I wept, and chastened my soul with fasting, that was to my reproach.

11 [y]I made sackcloth also my garment; and [z]I became a proverb to them.

12 [a]They that sit in the gate speak against me; and [b]I was the song of the drunkards.[2]

13 But as for me, [c]my prayer is unto thee, O LORD, [d]in an acceptable time: O God, [e]in the multitude of thy mercy hear me, in the truth of thy salvation.

14 [f]Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not sink: [g]let me be delivered from them that hate me, and out[h] of the deep waters.

15 [i]Let not the water-flood overflow me, neither let the deep swallow me up, and [k]let not the pit shut her mouth upon me.

16 Hear me, O LORD; [l]for thy loving-kindness is good: [m]turn unto me [n]according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.

17 And [o]hide not thy face from thy servant; [p]for I am in trouble: hear[3] me speedily.

18 [q]Draw nigh unto my soul, and redeem[r] it: deliver me, [s]because of mine enemies.

19 Thou hast known [t]my reproach, and my shame, and [u]my dishonour: mine[v] adversaries are all before thee.[4]

20 [w]Reproach hath broken my heart, and [x]I am full of heaviness: and [y]I looked for some to take[5] pity, but[z] there was none; and for [a]comforters, but I found none.

21 They gave me also [b]gall for my meat; and in my thirst they gave me[c] vinegar to drink.[6]

22 Let [d]their table become a snare before them: and that which should have been for their welfare, let it become [e]a trap.

23 Let [f]their eyes be darkened, that they see not; and [g]make their loins continually to shake.

24 [h]Pour out thine indignation upon them, and let thy wrathful anger [i]take hold of them.

25 [k]Let their habitation[1] be desolate, and let[2] none dwell in their tents.

26 For [l]they persecute him [m]whom thou hast smitten; and [n]they talk to the grief of those[3] whom thou hast wounded.

27 [o]Add iniquity[4] unto their iniquity; and [p]let them not come into thy righteousness.

28 Let them be [q]blotted out of the book of the living, and not [r]be written with the righteous.[5]

29 But [s]I am poor and sorrowful: [t]let thy salvation, O God, set me up on high.

30 [u]I will praise the name of God with a song, and will [v]magnify him with thanksgiving.

31 This [w]also shall please the LORD better than an ox or bullock, that hath horns and hoofs.[6]

32 [x]The humble[7] shall see this, and be glad: and [y]your heart shall live that seek God.

33 For [z]the LORD heareth the poor, and despiseth not [a]his prisoners.[8]

34 [b]Let the heaven and earth praise him, the seas, and every thing that moveth[9] therein:[10]

35 For [c]God will save Zion, and will [d]build the cities of Judah; that they may dwell there, and have it in possession.

36 [e]The seed also of his servants shall inherit it; and [f]they that love his name shall dwell therein

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David, [a]to bring to remembrance.

v Ps. 2. 2-4.
4 As afflictions increase, the prayers are redoubled. Christ pleads (in the preceding verses) with the Father for redemption from death, on account of his divine loving-kindness and mercy; 'of his own great trouble;' of his 'enemies,' that they might be either converted or confounded —of the 'reproach, shame, and dishonour' undergone by him, that they might be wiped off and done away; of the wrong he suffered from his adversaries, whose iniquitous proceedings were 'all before God,' and known unto him. Deliverance from tribulation and persecution is prayed for by the church, and by her faithful children on the same grounds.—Horne.

6 These words were not only figuratively fulfilled in the bitter sufferings which our Lord endured on our account, but were literally fulfilled in the minutest circumstances; see Mat. 27. 34; John 19. 28. 'Such are the comforts often administered by the world to an afflicted soul.'—Horne. Christ drank this bitter cup that we might have the comforts of the Holy Ghost.

PSALM LXXI.

David, in confidence of faith, and experience of God's favour, prayeth both for himself, and against the enemies of his soul, 1—13. He promiseth acts of praise, 14—16. He prayeth not to be abandoned in the decline of life, 14—18. He praiseth God, and promiseth to do it cheerfully, 19—24.

IN thee, O LORD, [a]do I put my trust; [b]let me never be put to confusion.[2]

2 Deliver me [c]in thy righteousness,[3] and [d]cause me to escape: [e]incline thine ear unto me, and save me.

3 Be thou my[4] strong habitation, whereunto I may continually resort: thou[f] hast given commandment to save me; for thou art [g]my rock and my fortress.[5]

4 Deliver me, O my God, [h]out of the hand of the wicked; out of the hand of the unrighteous and cruel man.[6]

5 For [i]thou art my hope, O Lord GOD: thou art [k]my trust from my youth.

6 [l]By thee have I been holden up from the womb: [m]thou art he that took me out of my mother's bowels: my[n] praise shall be continually of thee.

7 I am [o]as a wonder unto many: but [p]thou art my strong refuge.[7]

8 [q]Let my mouth be filled with thy praise and with thy honour all the day.

9 [r]Cast me not off in the time of old age; forsake me not [s]when my strength faileth.

10 For mine enemies speak against me; [t]and they that lay[8] wait for my soul [u]take counsel together, 11 Saying, [v]God hath forsaken[9] him: persecute and take him; [w]for there is none to deliver him.

12 [x]O God, be not far from me: O my God, [y]make haste for my help.

13 [z]Let them be confounded and consumed that are adversaries to my soul; let them be [a]covered with reproach and dishonour that seek my hurt.

14 But [b]I will hope continually, and will yet [c]praise thee more and more.

15 [d]My mouth shall shew forth thy righteousness and thy salvation [e]all the day; for [f]I know not the numbers thereof.

16 I will go [g]in the strength of the Lord GOD: [h]I will make mention of [i]thy righteousness, even of thine only.

17 O God, [k]thou hast taught me from my youth: and [l]hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works.

18 [m]Now also, when[1] I am old and gray-headed, O God, forsake me not, [n]until I have shewed thy [2]strength unto this generation, and thy power to every one that is to come.

19 [o]Thy righteousness also, O God, is very high, [p]who hast done great things: O God, [q]who is like unto thee!

20 Thou, [r]which hast shewed me great and sore troubles, shalt [s]quicken me again, and [t]shalt bring me up again from the depths of the earth.[3]

21 Thou shalt [u]increase my greatness, and [v]comfort me on every side.

22 I will also praise thee with the psaltery,[4] [w]even thy truth, O my God: unto thee will I sing with the harp, [x]O thou Holy One of Israel.

23 [y]My lips shall greatly rejoice when I sing unto thee; and [z]my soul, which thou hast redeemed.

24 [a]My tongue also shall talk of thy righteousness all the day long: [b]for they are confounded, for they are brought unto shame, that seek my hurt.

¶ A psalm for[5] Solomon.

GIVE[a] the king thy judgments, O God, and thy righteousness unto [b]the king's son.[6]

2 [c]He shall judge thy people with righteousness, and [d]thy poor with judgment.

3 [e]The mountains shall bring peace to the people, and [f]the little hills, [g]by righteousness.[7]

4 [h]He shall judge the poor of the people, he shall save the children of the needy, and shall [i]break in pieces [k]the oppressor.

5 [l]They shall fear thee [m]as long as the sun and moon endure, throughout all generations.

1 This psalm is for substance the same as the concluding verses of the fortieth psalm; yet there are verbal alterations in every part of it, tho' none that materially affect the sense. Some think, that it was parted from the fortieth psalm, (with some variation,) as suggesting general hints for prayer, to pious persons under very afflictive circumstances.

2 Notice of Solomon's sending ships to Tarshish is given in 1 Ki. 10.22. Most moderns suppose that Tartessus in Spain is meant. In the same chapter we have an account of the visit paid him, and the gifts presented by the queen of Sheba. Many other princes did him homage. 'Yet this faintly shadowed forth the Redeemer's kingdom. The prophet Zechariah uses these very words in foretelling the extent of it (Zec. 9. 10). The wise men from the East with their presents, first hailed the new-born King of the Jews. His kingdom has already been set up in many nations, and a full completion of these predictions will at length take place; when all "kings shall indeed fall down before him," as his worshippers, "all nations shall serve him."'—Scott.

11 By such reflections as those in ver.13-14, the Psalmist would lay a stumbling-block in the way of the children of God; he therefore resolved to inquire into the matter, but found it too difficult for him, till he went to the sanctuary of God, there learned how God dealt with men, and what was the terrible end of the wicked, 18-20. 3 For [f]I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked.

4 For there are [g]no bands in their death; but their strength is firm.[1]

5 [h]They are not in[2] trouble as other men: neither are they plagued [3]like other men.

6 [i]Therefore pride compasseth them about [k]as a chain;[4] [l]violence [m]covereth them as a garment.

7 Their [n]eyes stand out with fatness: they have[5] [o]more than heart could wish.

8 [p]They are corrupt, and [q]speak wickedly concerning oppression: [r]they speak loftily.

9 They [s]set their mouth against the heavens; and [t]their tongue walketh through the earth.

10 Therefore his people return hither; and [u]waters of a full cup are wrung out to them:[6]

11 And they say, [v]How doth God know?[7] and [w]is there knowledge in the most High?

12 Behold, [x]these are the ungodly, who prosper in the world; [y]they increase in riches.

13 Verily [z]I have cleansed my heart in vain, and [a]washed my hands in innocency.[8]

14 For [b]all the day long have I been plagued, and chastened[9] every morning.

15 If I say, I will speak thus; behold, I should [c]offend against [d]the generation of thy children.

16 [e]When I thought to know this, it was too[10] painful for me,

17 [f]Until I went into the sanctuary of God; [g]then understood I their end.[11]

18 [h]Surely thou didst set them in slippery places: [i]thou castedst them down into destruction.

19 [k]How are they brought into desolation, as in a moment! [l]they are utterly consumed with terrors.

20 [m]As a dream when one awaketh; so, O LORD, [n]when thou awakest, thou shalt despise [o]their image.

UNTO thee, O God, do we give thanks, unto thee do we give thanks: [a]for that thy name is near [b]thy wondrous works declare.

2 [c]When I shall receive[3] the congregation I will judge uprightly.[4]

3 [d]The earth and all the inhabitants thereof are dissolved: [e]I bear up [f]the pillars[5] of it. Selah.

4 [g]I said unto the fools, Deal not foolishly; and to the wicked, [h]Lift not up the horn:[6]

5 Lift not up your horn on high: speak[i] not[7] with a stiff neck.

6 For promotion cometh neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the south.[8]

7 But [k]God is the Judge: [l]he putteth down one, and setteth up another.[9]

8 For [m]in the hand of the LORD there is a cup, and the wine is red;[10] it[n] is full of mixture; and he poureth out of the same: [o]but the dregs thereof, all the wicked of the earth shall wring them out, and drink them.

9 But [p]I will declare for ever; I will sing praises to the God of Jacob.

10 [q]All the horns of the wicked also will I cut off; but [r]the horns of the righteous shall be exalted.

PSALM LXXVI.

A declaration of God's majesty in the church, 1—10. An exhortation to serve him reverently, 11, 12.

9 Faith begins to revive, and distrust to give way. The sufferer checks his complainings, & acknowledges that they sprung from weakness and timidity, but had no foundation in the character of God.

6 [l]At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, [m]both the chariot and horse are cast into [n]a dead sleep.

7 Thou, [o]even thou, art to be feared; and [p]who may stand in thy sight [q]when once thou art angry?

8 Thou [r]didst cause judgment to be heard from heaven; the earth feared, [s]and was still,

9 When [t]God arose to judgment, [u]to save all the meek of the earth. Selah.

10 Surely [v]the wrath of men shall praise thee: [w]the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain.

11 [x]Vow, and pay unto the LORD your God: [y]let all that be round about him bring presents unto[1] him that ought to be feared.

12 [z]He shall cut off[2] the spirit of princes: he is [a]terrible to the kings of the earth.

PSALM LXXVII.

The psalmist showeth what fierce combat he had with diffidence, 1—9. The victory which he had by considering God's great and gracious works, 10—20.

¶ To the chief musician, to [a]Jeduthun, A psalm of[3] Asaph.[4]

I [b]CRIED unto God with my voice, even unto God with my voice; [c]and he gave ear unto me.

2 [d]In the day of my trouble I sought the LORD: [e]my sore[5] ran in the night, and ceased not: [f]my soul refused to be comforted.

3 [g]I remembered God, and was troubled: [h]I complained, and [i]my spirit was overwhelmed. Selah.

4 Thou [k]holdest mine eyes waking: [l]I am so troubled that I cannot speak.[6]

5 [m]I have considered the days of old, the years of ancient times.

6 I call to remembrance [n]my [7]song in the night: [o]I commune with mine own heart; [p]and my spirit made diligent search.

7 [q]Will the LORD cast off for ever? and [r]will he be favourable no more?

8 [s]Is his mercy clean gone for ever? [t]doth his promise fail for[8] evermore?

9 Hath [u]God forgotten to be gracious? hath he in anger [v]shut up his tender mercies? Selah.

mity:[1] but I will remember [x]the years of the right hand of the most High.

11 I will [y]remember the works of the LORD; surely I will remember thy wonders of old.

12 I [z]will meditate also of all thy work, [a]and talk of thy doings.

13 [b]Thy way, O God, is in the sanctuary: [c]who is so great a God as our God?

14 Thou art [d]the God that doest wonders: [e]thou hast declared thy strength among the people.

15 Thou hast [f]with thine arm redeemed thy people, [g]the sons of Jacob and Joseph. Selah.

16 [h]The waters saw thee, O God, the waters saw thee; they were afraid: the depths also were troubled.[2]

17 The clouds poured[3] out water; the skies sent out a sound: [i]thine arrows also went abroad.

18 [k]The voice of thy thunder was in the heaven: [l]the lightnings lightened the world: [m]the earth trembled and shook.

19 [n]Thy way is in the sea, and thy path in the great waters, and [o]thy footsteps are not known.

20 [p]Thou leddest thy people like a flock by the hand of Moses and Aaron.

PSALM LXXVIII.

An exhortation both to learn and to preach the law of God, 1—8. The story of God's wrath against the incredulous and disobedient, 9—66. The Israelites being rejected, God chose Judah, Zion and David, 67—72.

¶ Maschil[4] of Asaph.

GIVE[a] ear, O my people, to my law:[5] incline your ears to the words of my mouth.

2 [b]I will open my mouth in a parable; I will utter [c]dark sayings of old:[6]

3 [d]Which we have heard and known, and our fathers have told us.

4 [e]We will not hide them from their children, [f]shewing to the generation to come [g]the praises of the LORD, and his strength, and his wonderful works that he hath done.

5 For [h]he established [i]a testimony in Jacob, and appointed a law in Israel, which he commanded our fathers, [k]that they should make them known to their children;[7] a Ps.49.1-3; Pr. 8. 4-6; Is.51.4; Mat.13.9.

5 The word rendered law, in this connection, evidently means the doctrine, or instruction, which the Psalmist was divinely inspired to set before the people; to which, in the name of the Lord, he demanded their reverent attention.

b Ps.49. 4; Mat. 13. 34, 35.

c Pr.1.6; Mar.4.34.

6 This verse is rendered by Boothroyd, 'My mouth I will open with wise remarks; I will utter the memorable things of old.' 'The evangelist says that this was fulfilled when Christ spake to the people in parables, Ps.49.1-4; Mat.13.34,35. Yet the psalm contains nothing but a plain narrative of facts, without any thing of parable or riddle in it; except as the history of Israel like the parables of Christ, was a picture or similitude of heavenly things; and these records would remain, in this respect, dark sayings to those who understood not the typical meaning of them,' 1 Co. 10. 1-10.—Scott.

3 Nothing is recorded in the history of Israel, concerning the cowardice of the Ephraimites, as distinct from that of the other tribes; some therefore think, that the 'children of Ephraim' is put by a figure of speech, for the nation in general. Others suppose, that this tribe greatly influenced their brethren, when they refused to go up and possess the land, at the express command of God, who promised to fight for them; and then, after the sentence of exclusion was irrevocably passed, they armed themselves, and presumptuously would go up, contrary to the warning of God by Moses; but when the Amorites came out against them, they fled, and were chased like bees to Hormah. These verses, 9-11, however, are probably descriptive of Israel who had imitated the tribe in some signal instance of cowardice and unbelief.

6 [l]That the generation to come might know them, even the children which should be born, [m]who should arise and declare them to their children;

7 That they might [n]set their hope in God, and [o]not forget the works of God, but [p]keep his commandments:

8 And might not be [q]as their fathers, a stubborn and rebellious generation; a generation that set[1] not their heart aright, and [r]whose spirit was not stedfast with God.

9 [s]The children of Ephraim, being armed, and carrying[2] bows, [t]turned back in the day of battle.

10 [u]They kept not the covenant of God, and refused to walk in his law;

11 And [v]forgat his works, and his wonders that he had shewed them.[3]

12 [w]Marvellous things did he in the sight of their fathers, in the land of Egypt, in the field of [x]Zoan.[4]

13 [y]He divided the sea, and caused them to pass through; and [z]he made the waters to stand as an heap.

14 [a]In the day-time also he led them with a cloud, and all the night with a light of fire.

15 He [b]clave the rocks in the wilderness, and gave them drink as out of the great depths.

16 He [c]brought streams also out of the rock, and caused[5] waters to run down like rivers.

17 And [d]they sinned yet more against him, by provoking the most High in the wilderness.

18 And they tempted God in their heart, [e]by asking meat for their lust.

19 Yea, [f]they spake against God: they said, [g]Can God furnish[6] a table in the wilderness?

20 Behold, [h]he smote the rock, that the waters gushed out, and the streams overflowed; [i]can he give bread also? can he provide flesh for his people?

21 Therefore [k]the LORD heard this, and was wroth: so [l]a fire was kindled against Jacob, and anger also came up against Israel;

22 [m]Because they believed not in God, and trusted not in his salvation:

23 Though [n]he had commanded the clouds from above, and [o]opened the doors of heaven,

24 And [p]had rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them of the corn of heaven.

25 Man[1] did eat angels' food:[2] [q]he sent them meat to the full.

26 [r]He caused an east wind to blow[3] in the heaven; and by his power he brought in the south wind.

27 [s]He rained flesh also upon them as dust, and feathered[4] fowls like as the sand of the sea;

28 And he let it fall in the midst of their camp, round about their habitations.

29 So they did eat, and were well filled: [t]for he gave them their own desire;

30 They were not estranged from their lust: [u]but while their meat was yet in their mouths,

31 The wrath of God came upon them, and slew the fattest of them, and smote[5] down the chosen[6] men of Israel.

32 For all this [v]they sinned still, and [w]believed not for his wondrous works.

33 Therefore [x]their days did he consume in vanity, and [y]their years in trouble.[7]

34 [z]When he slew them, then they sought him; and they returned and enquired early after God:

35 And [a]they remembered that God[b] was their Rock, and the high God [c]their Redeemer.

36 Nevertheless [d]they did flatter him with their mouth, and [e]they lied unto him with their tongues.

37 For [f]their heart was not right[8] with him, neither were they [g]stedfast in his covenant.

38 But [h]he, being full of compassion, forgave their iniquity, and destroyed them not; yea, [i]many a time turned he his anger away, and did not stir up all his wrath.

39 For [k]he remembered that they were but flesh; [l]a wind that passeth away, and cometh not again.

40 [m]How oft did they provoke[9] him in the wilderness, and [n]grieve him in the desert!

41 Yea, [o]they turned back, and tempted God, and [p]limited[1] the Holy One of Israel.

42 They [q]remembered not his hand, nor [r]the day when he delivered them from the[2] enemy:

43 How [s]he had wrought[3] his signs in Egypt, and his [t]wonders in the field of Zoan:

44 And had [u]turned their rivers into blood, and their floods, that they could not drink.

45 He [v]sent divers sorts of flies among them, which devoured[4] them; and [w]frogs, which destroyed them.

46 He [x]gave also their increase unto the caterpillar, and their labour unto the locust.

47 He destroyed[5] their vines [y]with hail, and their sycamore-trees with frost.[6]

48 He gave[7] up their cattle also to the hail, and their flocks to [8]hot thunderbolts.

49 He [z]cast upon them the fierceness of his anger, wrath, and indignation, and trouble, [a]by sending evil angels[9] among them.

50 He made[10] a way to his anger; [b]he spared not their soul from death, but gave their life[11] over to the pestilence;

51 And [c]smote all the first-born in Egypt; [d]the chief of their strength in [e]the tabernacles of Ham:

52 But [f]made his own people to go forth like sheep, and guided them in the wilderness [g]like a flock.

53 And he led them on safely, [h]so that they feared not; [i]but the sea overwhelmed[12] their enemies.

54 [k]And he brought them to the border of his sanctuary, even to this mountain, which [l]his right hand had purchased.[13]

55 He [m]cast out the heathen also before them, and [n]divided them an inheritance by line, [o]and made the tribes of Israel to dwell in their tents.

56 [p]Yet they tempted and provoked the most high God, and kept not his testimonies;

57 But [q]turned back, and dealt unfaithfully like their fathers: [r]they were turned aside like a deceitful bow.

2 Rich provision was made to them in the wilderness. God's goodness, and their unbelief and ingratitude, are next related. 'Perhaps they endeavoured to persuade themselves, that the manna and the water from the rock were supplied from natural sources; and only directed or regulated in a supernatural manner, by JEHOVAH'S power: but they supposed it to be impossible, even for Omnipotence, to furnish bread & flesh to so vast a multitude. This conclusion, after all the works of God which they had witnessed, and his special favours and express promises to them, was exceedingly provoking: he therefore determined to vindicate the honour of his own name, by showing that he was able to feast as well as feed them in the wilderness; and then amidst their excessive indulgence, to punish their unbelief and rebellion, by cutting off the most powerful, healthy, & luxurious among them (Nu.11.1-23,31-34). Boothroyd, after Ainsworth, renders the expression 'messengers of evils.' This is the clear and simple rendering of the Hebrew. Ainsworth explains it by saying, that Moses and Aaron may be meant, whom Jehovah sent to denounce the plagues before they came, and by their hand brought them on Egypt.

58 For they provoked him to anger with [s]their high places, and [t]moved him to jealousy [u]with their graven images.

59 When [v]God heard this, he was wroth, [w]and greatly abhorred Israel:

60 [x]So that he forsook[1] the tabernacle of Shiloh, the tent which he placed among men;

61 And delivered [y]his strength[2] into captivity, [z]and his glory into the enemy's hand.

62 He [a]gave his people over also unto the sword; and was [b]wroth with his inheritance.

63 [c]The fire consumed their young men; and [d]their maidens were not given[3] to marriage.

64 [e]Their priests fell by the sword; and[f] their widows made no lamentation.

65 Then [g]the LORD awaked as one out of sleep, [h]and like a mighty man that shouteth by reason of wine.

66 And [i]he smote his enemies in the hinder part; [k]he put them to a perpetual reproach.[4]

67 Moreover, [l]he refused the tabernacle of Joseph, and chose not the tribe of Ephraim;

68 But [m]chose the tribe of Judah, the[n] mount Zion which he loved.

69 And [o]he built his sanctuary like [p]high palaces, like [q]the earth which he hath established[5] for ever.

70 He [r]chose David also his servant, [s]and took him from the sheepfolds:

71 From[6] following [t]the ewes great with young [u]he brought him to [v]feed Jacob his people, and Israel his inheritance.

72 So he fed them [w]according to the integrity of his heart; and [x]guided them by the skilfulness of his hands.

PSALM LXXIX.

The psalmist complaineth of the desolation of Jerusalem, 1—7. He prayeth for deliverance, 8—12: and promiseth thankfulness, 13.

¶ A psalm of[7] Asaph.

O GOD, [a]the heathen are come [b]into thine inheritance; [c]thy holy temple have they defiled: [d]they have laid Jerusalem on heaps.

2 [e]The dead bodies of thy servants have they given to be meat unto the fowls of the heaven, the flesh of thy saints unto the beasts of the earth.

3 [f]Their blood have they shed like water round about Jerusalem; [g]and there was none to bury them.

4 We are [h]become a reproach to our neighbours, [i]a scorn and derision to them that are round about us.[1]

5 [k]How long, LORD? [l]wilt thou be angry for ever? shall [m]thy jealousy burn like fire?

6 [n]Pour out thy wrath [o]upon the heathen that [p]have not known thee, and upon the kingdoms [q]that have not called upon thy name:

7 For [r]they have devoured Jacob, and [s]laid waste his dwelling-place.

8 [t]O remember not against us former[2] iniquities: [u]let thy tender mercies speedily prevent us; for [v]we are brought very low.

9 Help us, O God of our salvation, [w]for the glory of thy name; and deliver us, [x]and purge away our sins, [y]for thy name's sake.[3]

10 [z]Wherefore should the heathen say, Where is their God? [a]let him be known among the heathen in our sight, [b]by the revenging[4] of the blood of thy servants which is shed.

11 Let [c]the sighing of the prisoner come before thee; [d]according to the greatness of thy[5] power preserve[6] thou those that are appointed to die;

12 And [e]render unto our neighbours sevenfold into their bosom their reproach, [f]wherewith they have reproached thee, O LORD.

13 So we [g]thy people, and sheep of thy pasture, will give thee thanks for ever; [h]we will show forth thy praise to all[7] generations.

4 While the Philistines were inflicting deserved punishment on the Israelites, the Lord seemed like one asleep, and as not regarding either his people, or even 'the ark of his strength.' But when their resentment or their ambition had accomplished his purposes, he suddenly and effectually interposed to rebuke the impious triumph of the idolators, and to put them and their idol to a perpetual shame: (Ps. 76. 10.) even as a mighty man of valour would rest or refresh himself, notwithstanding the advance of the enemy, till the moment arrived for executing his own plan; and then he would burst forth on them with unexpected and irresistible fury. By the emerods, the Lord disgraced as well as discomfited the Philistines, & constrained them to send back the ark: and by the golden images of the emerods, and of the mice that marred the land, they were led to publish & perpetuate their own disgrace.

o Ps.68.13.

4 Or, baskets. Mortar-tubs. — Boothroyd. In the first part of the psalm, the Psalmist calls upon Jacob, Israel, and Joseph, names for the race of Abraham, to celebrate their deliverance from Egypt on their solemn feast days. From the 6th verse to the end, God is plainly the speaker, and reminds them of their deliverance from bondage.

¶ To the chief musician upon [a]Gittith,
A psalm of[1] Asaph.

SING[b] aloud unto God [c]our strength:
[d]make a joyful noise unto [e]the God of Jacob.

2 Take [f]a psalm, and bring hither the timbrel, the pleasant harp with the psaltery.

3 [g]Blow up the trumpet [h]in the new-moon, in the time appointed, on [i]our solemn feast-day.

4 For this was a statute for Israel, and a law of the God of Jacob.

5 This he ordained [k]in Joseph [l]for a

the land of Egypt; [m]where I heard

6 [n]I removed his shoulder from the wilt hearken unto me;

9 [u]There shall no [v]strange god be in thee; neither shalt thou worship any strange god.

10 [w]I am the LORD thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt:
open[x] thy mouth wide, and I will fill it.[7]

11 But [y]my people would not hearken to my voice; and Israel
[z]would none of me.

12 So [a]I gave them up unto [8]their own hearts' lust: and [b]they walked in their own counsels.

13 [c]Oh that my people had hearkened unto me, and Israel had walked in my ways![9]

14 [d]I should soon have subdued their enemies, and [e]turned my hand against their adversaries.

15 [f]The haters of the LORD should

But though outwardly honoured as 'gods,' as 'children of the most High,' and as representing the Son of God himself; yet, seeing they in general abused these distinctions, the Lord would soon show them their weakness, as mean mortal men; and leave them to be cast down from their dignity, like one of the princes whom Israel crushed when they came up out of Egypt, or in their subsequent wars.—Scott.

PSALM LXXXVI.

David implores God's aid because of his need and religious faith, 1—4, and of the power and goodness of God, 5—10. He prayeth for grace and promiseth praise for past mercies, 11—13. Complaining of the proud, he craveth some token of God's favour, 14—17.

¶ A[1] prayer of David.

BOW[a] down thine ear, O LORD, hear me: [b]for I am poor and needy.
2 [c]Preserve my soul, for I am holy:[2] O thou my God, [d]save thy servant that [e]trusteth in thee.
3 [f]Be merciful unto me, O LORD: [g]for I cry unto thee daily.[3]
4 [h]Rejoice the soul of thy servant: for unto thee, O LORD, [i]do I lift up my soul.
5 For [k]thou, LORD, art good, and [l]ready to forgive; and [m]plenteous in mercy [n]unto all them that call upon thee.
6 [o]Give ear, O LORD, unto my prayer; and attend to the voice of my supplications.
7 [p]In the day of my trouble I will call upon thee: for thou wilt answer me.
8 [q]Among the gods there is none like unto thee,[4] O LORD; [r]neither are there any works like unto thy works.
9 [s]All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O LORD; and shall [t]glorify thy name.[5]
10 For [u]thou art great, and doest wondrous things: [v]thou art God alone.
11 [w]Teach me thy way, O LORD; [x]I will walk in thy truth: [y]unite[6] my heart to fear thy name.
12 [z]I will praise thee, O LORD my God, [a]with all my heart; and [b]I will glorify thy name for evermore.
13 For [c]great is thy mercy toward me; and thou [d]hast delivered my soul from the lowest hell.[7]

14 O God, [e]the proud are risen against me, and [f]the assemblies of violent[1] men have sought after my soul, [g]and have not set thee before them.

15 [h]But thou, O LORD, art a God full of compassion, and gracious, long-suffering, and plenteous in [i]mercy and truth.

16 O [k]turn unto me, and have mercy upon me: [l]give thy strength unto thy servant, and save [m]the son of thine handmaid.

17 [n]Shew me a token for good; that[o] they which hate me may see it, and be ashamed; because[p] thou, LORD, hast holpen me, and comforted me.

PSALM LXXXVII.

The seat and glory of the church, 1—3. The increase, honour, and comfort of the members thereof, 4—7.

¶ A psalm or song for[2] the sons of Korah.

HIS[a] foundation[3] is in [b]the holy mountains.

2 [c]The LORD loveth the gates of Zion more than all the dwellings of Jacob.

3 [d]Glorious things are spoken of thee, O city of God. Selah.

4 I will make mention of [e]Rahab and [f]Babylon to them that know me: behold Philistia, and [g]Tyre, with Ethiopia; [h] [i]this man was born there.

5 And [k]of Zion it shall be said, This and that man was born in her;[4] and [l]the Highest himself shall establish her.

6 The LORD shall count, [m]when he writeth up the people, that [n]this man was born there. Selah.

7 [o]As well the singers as the players on instruments shall be there: [p]all my springs[5] are in thee.

PSALM LXXXVIII.

A prayer containing a grievous complaint.

¶ A song or psalm for[6] the sons of Korah, to the chief musician upon [a]Mahalath Leannoth, Maschil[7] of [b]Heman the Ezrahite.

O [c]LORD God of my salvation, [d]I have cried day and night before thee.

2 [e]Let my prayer come before thee: incline thine ear unto my cry;

3 For [f]my soul is full of troubles:[8] and [g]my life draweth nigh unto the grave.

4 [h]I am counted with them that go down into the pit: I am [i]as a man that hath no strength.

5 [k]Free among the dead, like the slain that lie in the grave, [l]whom thou rememberest no more: and they are [m]cut off from[1] thy hand.[2]

6 Thou hast laid me [n]in the lowest pit, [o]in darkness, [p]in the deeps.

7 [q]Thy wrath lieth hard upon me, and thou hast afflicted me [r]with all thy waves. Selah.

8 [s]Thou hast put away mine acquaintance far from me; [t]thou hast made me an abomination unto them: [u]I am shut up, and I cannot come forth.

9 [v]Mine eye mourneth by reason of affliction: LORD, [w]I have called daily upon thee; [x]I have stretched out my hands unto thee.

10 [y]Wilt thou shew wonders to the dead? [z]shall the dead arise and praise thee? Selah.

11 Shall thy loving-kindness be declared in the grave? or thy faithfulness [a]in destruction?[3]

12 Shall thy wonders be known [b]in the dark? and thy righteousness [c]in the land of forgetfulness?

13 But unto thee have I cried, O LORD; [d]and in the morning shall my prayer prevent[4] thee.

14 LORD, [e]why castest thou off my soul? [f]why hidest thou thy face from me?

15 [g]I am afflicted and ready to die from my youth up: [h]while I suffer thy terrors I am distracted.

16 [i]Thy fierce wrath goeth over me; thy terrors have [k]cut me off.

17 [l]They came round about me daily[5] like water; they compassed me about together.

18 [m]Lover and friend hast thou put far from me, and mine acquaintance into darkness.[6]

PSALM LXXXIX.

The psalmist praiseth God for his covenant, 1—4; for his wonderful power, 5—14; for the care of his people, 15—18; for his favour to the kingdom of David, 19—37. Then complaining of contrary events, 38—45; he expostulateth, prayeth, and blesseth God, 46—52.

2 Or, of.
a 2 Ch.3.1; Is. 28.16; 1 Co.3.10,11.
3 Or, its foundation, viz. the temple's. The abruptness of the beginning shows how full the Psalmist's mind was of joy and admiration. The tabernacle placed, and the temple afterwards placed, by express divine direction on these holy mountains, were typical of Christ as the foundation, & of his church as builded on this foundation, for 'an habitation of God through the Spirit.'

4 The meaning seems to be, that whereas among the ancients, Babylon and Egypt were held in such esteem, that it was considered a great honour to have been born there; so thenceforward, it would be a more distinguished & enduring honour before all nations, to have been born in Zion.—So shall it be at the great day before the assembled world.

The greater our afflictions are, the more solicitous and serious we should be in prayer. "My prayer shall present itself before thee, and be betimes with thee, and shall not stay for the encouragement of the beginning of mercy, but reach out towards it with faith & expectation, even before the day dawns." make known [d]thy faithfulness to all generations.[1]

2 For I have said, [e]Mercy shall be built up for ever; [f]thy faithfulness shalt thou establish in the very heavens.

3 [g]I have made a covenant with my[h] chosen, [i]I have sworn unto David my servant,

4 [k]Thy seed[2] will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. Selah.

5 And [l]the heavens shall praise thy wonders, O LORD; thy faithfulness also [m]in the congregation of the saints.

6 For [n]who in the heaven can be compared unto the LORD? who among the[o] sons of the mighty[3] can be likened unto the LORD?

7 [p]God is greatly to be feared in the assembly of the saints, and to be had in reverence of all them that are about him.

8 O [q]LORD God of hosts, who is [r]a strong LORD [s]like unto thee?[4] or to thy faithfulness round about thee?

9 Thou [t]rulest the raging of the sea: when the waves thereof arise, thou stillest them.

10 [u]Thou hast broken Rahab[5] in pieces,[6] as one that is slain: [v]thou hast scattered thine enemies with [7]thy strong arm.

11 [w]The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine: as for the world, and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them.

12 [x]The north and the south thou hast created them: [y]Tabor and [z]Hermon shall [a]rejoice in thy name.

13 Thou hast [8]a mighty arm: strong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand.

14 [b]Justice and judgment are the habitation[9] of thy throne: [c]mercy and truth shall go before thy face.

15 Blessed is the people that [d]know the joyful sound: they shall walk, O LORD, [e]in the light of thy countenance.

16 [f]In thy name shall they rejoice all the day: and [g]in thy righteousness shall they be exalted.

17 For [h]thou art the glory of their strength; and in thy favour [i]our horn shall be exalted.

18 [k]For the[1] LORD is our defence; and [l]the Holy One of Israel is [m]our King.

19 Then [n]thou spakest in vision to [o]thy Holy One,[2] and saidst, [p]I have laid help upon one that is mighty; [q]I have exalted one chosen out of the people.

20 [r]I have found David my servant; with my holy oil have I anointed him:

21 [s]With whom my hand shall be established; [t]mine arm also shall strengthen him.

22 [u]The enemy shall not exact upon him; nor [v]the son of wickedness afflict him.

23 And [w]I will beat down his foes before his face, and [x]plague them that hate him.

24 But [y]my faithfulness and my mercy shall be with him: and [z]in my name shall his horn be exalted.

25 [a]I will set his hand also in the sea, and his right hand in the rivers.

26 He shall cry unto me, [b]Thou art my Father, [c]my God, and [d]the Rock of my salvation.

27 Also [e]I will make him my firstborn,[4] [f]higher than the kings of the earth.

28 [g]My mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and [h]my covenant shall stand fast with him.

29 [i]His seed also will I make to endure for ever, and [k]his throne as [l]the days of heaven.

30 [m]If his children [n]forsake my law, and [o]walk not in my judgments;

31 If they break[5] my statutes, and keep not my commandments;

32 [p]Then will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes.

33 [q]Nevertheless my loving-kindness will I not[6] utterly take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness to fail.[7]

34 [r]My covenant will I not break, [s]nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips.

35 [t]Once have I sworn by my holiness, that[8] I will not lie unto [9]David.

36 [u]His seed shall endure for ever, [v]and his throne as the sun before me.

37 It shall be established for [w]ever as the moon, and as [x]a faithful witness in heaven. Selah.

1 Heb. generation and generation, ver.4; Ps. 119. 90, marg. The occasion on which this psalm was written, as is the case with most of the others, is unknown. It bears internal evidence of relating to some period in the life of David, in which his kingdom was in such calamity and danger, that it might seem that God had forgotten his covenant with David. He therefore begins by declaring the mercy and faithfulness of God, and the immutability of his covenant.

2 This is generally supposed to be Samuel, to whom God spake in vision concerning David, as a type of Christ. Our translators seem to have supposed that the Messiah himself was meant. There is nothing in the original to make this improbable. All the ancient versions, however, seem to have understood by the expression, God's people—his saints.

39 Thou hast [b]made void the covenant of thy servant; [c]thou hast profaned his crown, by casting it to the ground.

40 Thou hast [d]broken down all his hedges; thou hast [e]brought his strong holds to ruin.

41 [f]All that pass by the way spoil him: [g]he is a reproach to his neighbours.

42 Thou hast [h]set up the right hand of his adversaries; thou hast made all his enemies to rejoice.

43 Thou hast also [i]turned the edge of his sword, and [k]hast not made him to stand in the battle.

44 Thou [l]hast made his glory[1] to cease, and [m]cast his throne down to the ground.[2]

PSALM XC.

The psalmist declareth God's providence over Israel, 1, 2; complaineth of human frailty, 3—6; divine chastisements, 7—9; and brevity of life, 10, 11. He prayeth for the knowledge and sensible experience of God's good providence, 12—17.

¶ A prayer[4] of Moses [a]the man of God.

LORD, [b]thou hast been our dwelling-place in all[5] generations.

2 [c]Before the mountains were brought forth, [d]or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even [e]from everlasting to everlasting, [f]thou art God.[1]

3 [g]Thou turnest man to destruction; and sayest, Return, ye children of men.

4 For [h]a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and [i]as a watch[3] in the night.

5 [k]Thou carriest them away as with a flood; [l]they are as a sleep: [m]in the morning they are like grass which groweth[4] up.

6 [n]In the morning it flourisheth, and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down, and withereth.

7 For [o]we are consumed by thine anger, and by thy wrath [p]are we troubled.

8 [q]Thou hast set our iniquities before thee, [r]our secret sins [s]in the light of thy countenance.

9 For [t]all our days are [5]passed away in thy wrath; we spend our years as a[6] tale that is told.

10 The[7] days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, [u]yet is their strength labour and sorrow: for [v]it is soon cut off, and we fly away.

11 [w]Who knoweth the power of thine anger? even according to thy fear, so is thy wrath.

12 [x]So teach us to number our days, [y]that we may apply[9] our hearts unto wisdom.

13 [z]Return, O LORD, [a]how [10]long? and [b]let it repent thee concerning thy servants.

14 O [c]satisfy us early with thy mercy; [d]that we may rejoice and be glad all our days.

15 [e]Make us glad according to the days wherein thou hast afflicted us, and [f]the years wherein we have seen evil.

16 [g]Let thy work appear unto thy servants, and [h]thy glory unto their children.

17 And [i]let the beauty of the LORD our God be upon us: and [k]establish thou the work of our hands upon us;

2 The Psalmist here laments the ruin of Israel, as if God had forgotten his covenant. Doubtless the Psalmist meant to urge this as a plea with him, to return in mercy, and restore the family of David to prosperity; and likewise to propose it to the distressed prince and people of Judah, for their instruction; that they might consider the dispensation as a chastisement for their sins, and so be led by it to repentance. Probably, he also meant to lead their thoughts to the promised seed of David, whom the covenant principally respected. His people have often been led to fear that his covenant had been forgotten, and his cause forsaken; but 'the foundation of God standeth sure.' All his 'promises are yea, and Amen, in Christ Jesus.'

'The rulers, & scribes, and chief priests of the Jews, in like manner watched our Lord's footsteps; they sought for false witnesses to put him to death; Herod & Pontius Pilate agreed in setting him at nought; and Romans combined with Jews in insulting and reviling him, as he hung upon the cross. Thus did he "bear the reproach of all the mighty people," who "reproached the footsteps of the Lord's anointed." 1 This psalm was composed by Moses, probably at the time when the people were swept away by pestilence. The Israelites were shut up in the desert, and not allowed to find habitations in the promised land, or in any cultivated region; but the Psalmist recollected, that even Abraham, Isaac, & Jacob, were strangers & pilgrims in Canaan. Indeed, God himself had in all ages been the Home, Rest, Safety, and Comfort of his people; and into that 'dwelling-place' they might enter by faith and prayer, even in the wilderness, seeing he was the same from everlasting to everlasting.

PSALM XCI.

The state of the godly, 1, 2. Their safety, 3—8. Their habitation, 9, 10. Their servants, 11—13. Their friend; with the effects of them all, 14—16.

HE that [a]dwelleth in the secret place[2] of the most High, shall bide[3] [b]under the shadow of the Almighty.

2 [c]I will say of the LORD, He is my refuge, and my fortress: [d]my God; in [e]him will I trust.

3 Surely he shall deliver thee from the [f]snare of the fowler, [g]and from the noisome pestilence.

4 He shall [h]cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust: [i]his truth[4] shall be thy shield and buckler.

5 [k]Thou shalt not be afraid for [l]the terror by night; nor [m]for the arrow that flieth by day;

6 Nor for [n]the pestilence that walketh in darkness; [o]nor for the destruction that wasteth at noon-day.

7 [p]A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee.

8 [q]Only with thine eyes shalt thou behold and see [r]the reward of the wicked.

9 Because [s]thou hast made the LORD, which is my refuge, even [t]the most High, thy habitation;

10 [u]There shall no evil befall thee, neither [v]shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling.

11 For [w]he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee [x]in all thy ways.

12 [y]They shall bear thee up in their hands, [z]lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.[5]

13 Thou shalt [a]tread upon the lion and [b][6]adder; the young lion and [c]the dragon[7] shalt thou trample under feet.

14 [d]Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him: [e]I will set him on high, [f]because he hath known my name.

15 [g]He shall call upon me, and I will answer him: [h]I will be with him in trouble; [i]I will deliver him, [k]and honour him.

16 [l]With [1]long life will I satisfy him, and [m]shew him my salvation.

PSALM XCII.

The prophet exhorteth to praise God, 1—3; for his great works, 4, 5; for his judgments on the wicked, 6—9; and for his goodness to the godly, 10—15.

¶ A psalm or song [a]for the sabbath-day.[2]

IT is a [b]good thing to give thanks unto the LORD, and to sing praises unto thy name, [c]O most High:

2 To [d]shew forth thy loving-kindness in the morning, and thy faithfulness every[3] night,

3 [e]Upon an instrument of ten strings, and upon the psaltery; upon the[4] harp with a[5] solemn sound.

4 For thou, LORD, [f]hast made me glad through thy work; I will triumph in the works of thy hands.

5 O LORD, [g]how great are thy works! and [h]thy thoughts are very [i]deep.

6 [k]A brutish man knoweth not; neither doth [l]a fool understand this.

7 When [m]the wicked spring as the grass, and when [n]all the workers of iniquity do flourish; [o]it is that they shall be destroyed for ever.

8 But thou, Lord, [p]art most high for evermore.

9 [q]For, lo, thine enemies, O LORD, for, lo, thine enemies shall perish; all the workers of iniquity shall be [r]scattered.

10 But [s]my horn shalt thou exalt like the horn of [t]an unicorn: [u]I shall be anointed with fresh oil.[6]

11 [v]Mine eye also shall see my desire on mine enemies; and mine ears shall hear my desire[7] of the wicked that rise up against me.

12 [w]The righteous shall flourish like the palm-tree: he shall grow like [x]a cedar in Lebanon.[8]

13 [y]Those that be planted in the house of the LORD [z]shall flourish [a]in the courts of our God.

14 [b]They shall still bring forth fruit [c]in old age; they shall be fat and flourishing;[9]

15 [d]To shew that the LORD is upright: he is [e]my rock, [f]and there is no unrighteousness in him.

1 The redemption of man is that 'work' of God, whereby his 'glory' is manifested to all generations, and which all generations do therefore long to behold accomplished. For this purpose the faithful beseech God to let his 'beauty,' his splendour, the light of his countenance, his grace and favour, be upon them: to 'establish the work of their hands,' to bless, prosper, and perfect them in their Christian course and warfare; until, through him, they shall be enabled to subdue sin and triumph over death.—Horne.

5 The mutilated and sophistical quotation which Satan made of this text, in tempting our Saviour, seems to imply, that the Messiah was supposed to be principally, though not exclusively meant. This might be, and probably was the case; but the subtile enemy that misquoted, could also misapply the sacred scripture: and his testimony contains no proof, Mat.4.5-7.—Scott. Tho' his testimony is not proof; yet in the present instance had the text not been applicable to the Messiah, it would have been no temptation to our Lord.

2 The writer of this psalm is not mentioned. But in all probability David composed it, about the time that the ark was conveyed to mount Zion, to be used in the worship at the sanctuary on the sabbath-day, 1 Ch.15.16; 16.7. Indeed the sabbath was originally intended to give man leisure and opportunity to serve and praise God.

4 This psalm has no title in the Hebrew; but the Septuagint calls it 'A psalm of David;' and the apostle fully sanctions this testimony, by his manner of quoting it; 'Wherefore, as the Holy Ghost saith, To-day if ye will hear his voice,' &c. 'Again he limiteth a certain day, saying in David,' 'To-day, after so long a time, To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts,' ver. 7-11; He. 3. 7-13; 4. 3-11. PSALM XCVI.

An exhortation to praise God, 1—3; for his greatness, 4—7; for his kingdom, 8, 9; and to rejoice in his righteous government of the world, 10—13.

O [a]SING unto the LORD a new song;[3] [b]sing unto the LORD, all the earth.

2 Sing unto the LORD, [c]bless his name; [d]shew forth his salvation from day to day.

3 [e]Declare his glory among the heathen, his wonders among all people.

4 For [f]the LORD is great, and greatly to be praised: he is [g]to be feared above all gods.

5 For [h]all the gods of the nations are idols: but [i]the LORD made the heavens.

6 [k]Honour and majesty are before him; [l]strength and beauty are in [m]his sanctuary.

7 [n]Give unto the LORD, [o]O ye kindreds of the people, give unto the LORD [p]glory and strength.

8 Give unto the LORD [q]the glory due[4] unto his name: [r]bring an offering, and [s]come into his courts.

9 O worship the LORD [t]in the beauty[5] of holiness: [u]fear before him, all the earth.

10 [v]Say among the heathen, that the[w] LORD reigneth: [x]the world also shall be established that it shall not be moved: [y]he shall judge the people righteously.

11 [z]Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad; [a]let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof.

12 [b]Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein: then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice

13 Before the LORD; [c]for he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth: [d]he shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with his truth.

The Lord therefore passed the irrevocable sentence of exclusion from Canaan, confirmed with an oath; and he set them forth in his word as a warning to all ages and nations; lest by imitating their example, they should for ever be secluded from that heavenly rest, of which Canaan was a faint shadow, He. 4. 1-11.

'A new song;' a song calculated to celebrate new mercies, prefigured by old ones wrought for Israel in former times; a song fit for the voices of renewed and regenerate men to sing in the New Jerusalem, in those new heavens and that new earth which constitute the new creation or kingdom of Jesus Christ. —Horne.

2 This is a prediction of the destruction of idolatry and idol worshippers, and the manifestations of the divine majesty and justice in the establishment of Christ's kingdom. The psalmist declares in the beginning of the psalm the universal spread of the gospel; that it 'shall not only be preached in Judea, but through all isles and countries.' We Britons, as inhabiting one of those heathen isles, and enjoying so fair a portion of evangelical blessings, have reason to repeat this verse with a particular pleasure and energy:—The Hebrews called by the name of 'isles,' ים not only countries surrounded by the sea, but all the countries which the sea divided from them, so that the term becomes synonymous with 'Gentiles.' Thus it is said, Is. 42. 4. 'The isles shall wait for his law;' which passage, Mat. 12. 21, is expounded as follows: 'In him shall the Gentiles trust. —Horne.

PSALM XCVIII.

The psalmist exhorteth the Jews, 1—3; the Gentiles, 4—6; and all the creatures to praise God, 7—9.

¶ A psalm.

O [a]SING unto the LORD a new song; for [b]he hath done marvellous things: [c]his right hand, and his holy arm, hath gotten him the victory.

2 The LORD hath [d]made known his salvation: [e]his righteousness hath he openly[4] shewed in the sight of the heathen.

3 He hath [f]remembered his mercy and his truth toward the house of Israel: [g]all the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.

4 [h]Make a joyful noise unto the LORD, all the earth: make a loud noise, and rejoice, and sing praise.

5 Sing unto the LORD [i]with the harp; with the harp, and the voice of a psalm.

6 [k]With trumpets, and sound of cornet, make a joyful noise before the LORD, [l]the King.

7 [m]Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof; [n]the world, and they that dwell therein.

8 Let [o]the floods clap their hands: let[p] the hills be joyful together

9 Before the LORD: [q]for he cometh to judge the earth: [r]with righteousness shall he judge the world, and the people with equity.

PSALM XCIX.

The prophet, setting forth the kingdom of God in Zion, 1—4, exhorteth all, by the example of their forefathers, to worship God at his holy hill, 5—9.

[r]THE [a]LORD reigneth;[1] [b]let the people tremble: [c]he sitteth between the cherubims; [d]let the earth be moved.[2]

2 The LORD is [e]great in Zion; and he is [f]high above all people.

3 Let them praise [g]thy great and terrible name; [h]for it is holy.

4 The King's [i]strength also loveth judgment: [k]thou dost establish equity, thou [l]executest judgment and righteousness in Jacob.

5 [m]Exalt ye the LORD our God, and worship at [n]his footstool; for he is holy.[3]

6 [o]Moses and Aaron among his priests, and Samuel among them that call upon his name; [p]they called upon the LORD, and he answered them.

7 He spake unto them [q]in the cloudy pillar: [r]they kept his testimonies, and the ordinance that he gave them.

8 Thou answeredst them, O LORD our God: [s]thou wast a God that forgavest them, [t]though thou tookest vengeance of [u]their inventions.[4]

9 [v]Exalt the LORD our God, and worship at [w]his holy hill: for [x]the LORD our God is holy.

PSALM C.

An exhortation to serve God joyfully as our creator and preserver, and to praise him for his goodness, mercy, and truth.

[a]¶A psalm of praise.[5]

MAKE[b] a joyful noise unto the LORD, [c]all ye lands.[6]

2 [d]Serve the LORD with gladness; come[e] before his presence with singing.

3 [f]Know ye that the LORD he is God: [g]it is he that hath made us, and not[7] we ourselves: [h]we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture.

PSALM CI.

David maketh a vow and profession of godliness.

¶A psalm of David.[2]

[a]I WILL sing of mercy and judgment:[3] [b]unto thee, O LORD, will I sing.

2 [c]I will behave myself wisely in a perfect way. [d]Oh when wilt thou come unto me? [e]I will walk within my house with [f]a perfect heart.

3 I will [g]set no wicked[4] thing before mine eyes: [h]I hate the work of them that turn aside; [k]it shall not cleave to me.

4 [l]A froward heart shall depart from me; I will not [m]know a wicked person.

5 Whoso [n]privily slandereth his neighbour, him will I cut off: him that hath [o]an high look and a proud heart will not I suffer.

6 [p]Mine eyes shall be upon the faithful of the land, [q]that they may dwell with me: he that walketh in[5] a perfect way, he shall serve me.

7 [r]He that worketh deceit shall not dwell within my house: he that telleth lies shall not tarry[6] in my sight.

8 I will [s]early destroy all the wicked of the land; that I may [t]cut off all wicked doers from the city[7] of the LORD.

PSALM CII.

The prophet in his prayer maketh a grievous complaint, 1—11. He taketh comfort in the eternity and mercy of God, 12—17. The mercies of God are worthy to be recorded, 18—22. The prophet, sensible of his own weakness, resteth his hope on the unchangeable nature of God, 23—28.

¶A prayer of[8] the afflicted, when he is [a]overwhelmed, and [b]poureth out his complaint before the LORD.

[c]HEAR my prayer,[9] O LORD, and [d]let my cry come unto thee.

2 [e]Hide not thy face from me in the day when I am in trouble; [f]incline thine ear unto me: [g]in the day when I call answer me speedily.[10]

3 For [h]my days are consumed like smoke,[11] and [i]my bones are burned as an hearth.

6 I am [o]like [p]a pelican[2] of the wilderness; I am like an owl of the desert.

7 I [q]watch, and am as a sparrow alone[r] upon the house-top.

8 [s]Mine enemies reproach me all the day; and they that are [t]mad against me are [u]sworn against me.

9 For [v]I have eaten ashes like bread, and [w]mingled my drink with weeping,

10 [x]Because of thine indignation and thy wrath: for [y]thou hast lifted me up, and cast me down.[3]

11 [z]My days are like a shadow that declineth; and [a]I am withered like grass.

12 But [b]thou, O LORD, shalt endure for ever, and [c]thy remembrance unto all generations.[4]

13 [d]Thou shalt arise, and have mercy upon Zion: for the time to favour her, yea, [e]the set time,[5] is come.

14 For [f]thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favour the dust thereof.

15 So [g]the heathen shall fear the name of the LORD, and all the kings of the earth thy glory.

16 [h]When the LORD shall build up Zion, [i]he shall appear in his glory.

17 [k]He will regard the prayer of the destitute, and [l]not despise their prayer.

18 [m]This shall be written for the generation to come: and [n]the people which shall be created shall praise the LORD.

19 For [o]he hath looked down from the[p] height of his sanctuary; from heaven did the LORD behold the earth;

20 [q]To hear the groaning of the prisoner; [r]to loose those[6] that are appointed to death;

21 [s]To declare the name of the LORD[7] in Zion, and his praise in Jerusalem;

22 [t]When the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms, to serve the LORD.

PSALM CIII.

An exhortation to bless God for his mercy, 1—14; and for the constancy thereof, 15—22.

¶ A psalm of David.

BLESS[a] the LORD, O my soul; and [b]all that is within me, bless his [c]holy name.

2 Bless the LORD, O my soul, and [d]forget not all his benefits:

3 Who [e]forgiveth all thine iniquities; who [f]healeth all thy diseases;

4 Who [g]redeemeth thy life[4] from destruction; who [h]crowneth thee with loving-kindness and tender mercies;

5 Who [i]satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that [k]thy youth is renewed like the eagle's.[5]

6 The LORD [l]executeth righteousness and judgment for all that are oppressed.

7 He [m]made known his ways unto Moses, [n]his acts unto the children of Israel.

8 The LORD is [o]merciful and gracious, [p]slow to anger, and [6]plenteous in mercy.

9 He will not always chide; [q]neither will he keep his anger for ever.

10 He hath not [r]dealt with us after our sins, nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.

11 [s]For as[7] the heaven is high above the earth, so great is [t]his mercy toward them that fear him.

12 As far [u]as the east is from the west, [v]so far hath he removed our transgressions from us.

13 Like [w]as a father pitieth his children, so the LORD pitieth [x]them that fear him.

14 For [y]he knoweth our frame;[1] he remembereth that [z]we are dust.

15 As for man, [a]his days are as grass; as [b]a flower of the field, so he flourisheth:

16 For [c]the wind passeth over it, and it[2] is gone; [d]and the place thereof shall know it no more.[3]

17 But [e]the mercy of the LORD is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and [f]his righteousness [g]unto children's children;

18 To [h]such as keep his covenant,[4] and to those that [i]remember his commandments to do them.

19 The LORD hath [k]prepared his throne in the heavens; and [l]his kingdom ruleth over all.

20 [m]Bless the LORD, ye his angels, that[5] excel in strength, that [n]do his commandments, hearkening unto the voice of his word.

21 Bless ye the LORD, [o]all ye his hosts; ye [p]ministers of his, that do his pleasure.

22 Bless the LORD, [q]all his works, in all places of his dominion: [r]bless the LORD, O my soul.

PSALM CIV.

A meditation upon the mighty power, 1—6, and wonderful providence of God, 7—30. God's glory is eternal, 31, 32. The prophet voweth perpetually to praise God, 33—35.

BLESS[a] the LORD, O my soul. [b]O LORD my God, [c]thou art very great: [d]thou art clothed with [e]honour and majesty:

2 Who coverest thyself [f]with light as with a garment; who [g]stretchest out the heavens like a curtain;

3 Who [h]layeth the beams of his chambers in the waters; who [i]maketh the clouds his chariot; [k]who walketh upon the wings of the wind;

4 Who [l]maketh his angels spirits; his[m] ministers a flaming fire;

5 Who[6] laid [n]the foundations of the earth, [o]that it should not be removed for ever.

6 Thou [p]coveredst it with the deep as with a garment: the waters stood above the mountains.

7 [q]At thy rebuke [r]they fled; at the voice of thy thunder they hasted away.

8 They[1] [s]go up by the mountains; they go down by the valleys unto the place which thou hast founded for them.

9 Thou hast [t]set a bound that they may not pass over; that they turn not again to cover the earth.

10 He[2] [u]sendeth the springs into the valleys, which run[3] among the hills.

11 They [v]give drink to every beast of the field: [w]the wild asses [x]quench their thirst.

12 By them shall [x]the fowls of the heaven have their habitation, which sing[5] among the branches.

13 He [y]watereth the hills from [z]his chambers: [a]the earth is satisfied with the fruit of thy works.[6]

14 He [b]causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and [c]herb for the service of man: that [d]he may bring forth food out of the earth;

15 And [e]wine that maketh glad the heart of man, and oil[7] to [f]make his face to shine, and [g]bread which strengtheneth man's heart.

16 The [h]trees of the LORD are full of sap; the cedars of Lebanon, which he hath planted;

17 Where [i]the birds make their nests: [k]as for the stork,[8] the fir-trees are her house.

18 The high hills are a refuge for [l]the wild goats, and the rocks for [m]the conies.[9]

19 He appointed [n]the moon for seasons; the sun knoweth his going down.

20 Thou [o]makest darkness, and it is night; wherein all the beasts [10]of the forest do creep forth.

21 [p]The young lions roar after their prey, and [q]seek their meat from God.

22 [r]The sun ariseth, they gather themselves together, and lay them down in their dens.[11]

23 [s]Man goeth forth unto his work and to his labour, until the evening.

24 O LORD, [t]how manifold are thy works! [u]in wisdom hast thou made them all: [v]the earth is full of thy riches;

25 So is [w]this great and wide sea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great [x]beasts.

26 [y]There go the ships; there is that [z]leviathan,[1] whom thou hast made[2] [a]to play therein.

27 These [b]wait all upon thee, that thou mayest give them their meat in due season.

28 That thou givest them they gather: thou openest thine hand, they are filled with good.

29 Thou [c]hidest thy face, they are troubled: [d]thou takest away their breath, they die, and [e]return to their dust.

30 Thou [f]sendest forth thy Spirit,[3] they are created; and thou [g]renewest the face of the earth.

31 [h]The glory of the LORD shall endure[4] for ever: [i]the LORD shall rejoice in his works.

32 He [k]looketh on the earth, and it trembleth; [l]he toucheth the hills, and they smoke.

33 [m]I will sing unto the LORD as long as I live; I will sing praise to my God while I have my being.

34 My [n]meditation of him shall be sweet; [o]I will be glad in the LORD.

35 Let [p]the sinners be consumed[5] out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more. [q]Bless thou the LORD, O my soul. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CV.

An exhortation to praise God, and to seek out his works, 1—7. His providence over Abraham, 8—15, over Joseph, 16—22, over Israel in Egypt, 23—25, over Moses delivering the Israelites, 26—36, over the Israelites brought out of Egypt, fed in the wilderness, and planted in Canaan, 37—45.

O [a]GIVE thanks unto the LORD; [b]call upon his name: [c]make known his deeds among the people.[6]

2 [d]Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him: [e]talk ye of all his wondrous works.

3 [f]Glory ye in his holy name: [g]let the heart of them rejoice that seek the LORD.

4 [h]Seek the LORD, and [i]his strength;[7] [k]seek his face evermore.

5 [l]Remember his marvellous works that he hath done; his wonders, and the [m]judgments of his mouth;

6 O [n]ye seed of Abraham his servant, ye children of Jacob [o]his chosen.

2 God often, in the history of his people, proved the truth of these words. See ref. Note. First, Even kings themselves are liable to God's rebukes, if they do wrong. Secondly, God's prophets are his anointed, for they have the unction of the Spirit, that oil of gladness, 1 John 2. 27. Thirdly, They that offer to touch God's prophets with design to harm them, may expect to hear of it one way or other. God is jealous for his prophets; whoso touches them, touches the apple of his eye. Fourthly, Even they that touch the prophets, nay, that kill the prophets, (as many did) cannot do them any harm, any real harm. Lastly, God's anointed prophets are dearer to him than anointed kings themselves. Jeroboam's hand was withered when it was stretched out against a prophet.—Henry.

7 He is [p]the LORD our God; [q]his judgments are in all the earth.

8 [r]He hath remembered his covenant for ever, the word which he commanded to [s]a thousand generations:

9 Which [t]covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath unto Isaac;

10 And confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for [u]an everlasting covenant:

11 Saying, [v]Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot[1] of your inheritance:

12 When they were but [w]a few men in number; yea, very few, [x]and strangers in it.

13 When they went from one nation to another, from one kingdom to another people,

14 [y]He suffered no man to do them wrong; yea, he reproved kings for their sakes;

15 Saying, [z]Touch not [a]mine anointed, and do [b]my prophets[2] no harm.

16 Moreover, [c]he called for a famine upon the land; [d]he brake the whole staff of bread.

17 [e]He sent a man before them, even [f]Joseph, who was sold for a servant;

18 [g]Whose feet they hurt with fetters: he[3] was laid in iron:

19 Until the time that [h]his word came: the word of the LORD tried him.

20 The [i]king sent and loosed him; even the ruler of the people, and let him go free.

21 He [k]made him lord of his house, and ruler of all his substance;[4]

22 To bind his princes at his pleasure; and [l]teach his senators wisdom.[5]

23 [m]Israel also came into Egypt; and [n]Jacob sojourned in [o]the land of Ham.

24 And [p]he increased his people greatly, and [q]made them stronger than their enemies.

25 [r]He turned their heart [s]to hate his people, to deal subtilely with his servants.

26 He [t]sent Moses his servant,[6] and [u]Aaron whom he had chosen.

27 [v]They showed his[1] signs among them, and [w]wonders in the land of Ham.

28 He [x]sent darkness, and made it dark; and [y]they rebelled not[2] against his word.

29 He [z]turned their waters into blood, and slew their fish.

30 Their land [a]brought forth frogs in abundance in the chambers of their kings.

31 He spake, and [b]there came divers sorts of flies, [c]and lice in all their coasts.

32 He gave them[3] [d]hail for rain, and flaming fire in their land.

33 He [e]smote their vines also and their fig-trees, and brake the trees of their coasts.

34 He spake, and [f]the locusts came, and caterpillars, and that without number,

35 And did eat up all the herbs in their land, and devoured the fruit of their ground.

36 [g]He smote also all the first-born in their land, [h]the chief of all their strength.

37 He [i]brought them forth also with silver and gold; and there was not one feeble person among their tribes.

38 Egypt was [k]glad when they departed; [l]for the fear of them fell upon them.

39 He [m]spread a cloud for a covering, and fire to give light in the night.

40 The people [n]asked, and he brought quails, [o]and satisfied them with [p]the bread of heaven.

41 He [q]opened the rock, and the waters gushed out; they ran in the dry places like a river.

42 For [r]he remembered his holy promise, [s]and Abraham his servant.

43 And [t]he brought forth his people [u]with joy, and his chosen with gladness;[4]

44 And [v]gave them the lands of the heathen; and [w]they inherited the labour of the people;

45 [x]That they might observe his statutes,[5] and keep his laws.[6] Praise[7] ye the LORD.[8]

6 Many of the laws given to Israel were of such a nature, that they could not be obeyed in the wilderness, or at a distance from the sanctuary, (Nu. 9. 1-5; De. 12.8, 9,) so that there was a special reason why they must inhabit Canaan, in order to observe the statutes and obey the laws of God; but in general, all their religious advantages and all the favours bestowed on them, were expressly vouchsafed, in order to separate them from other nations, and to render them the obedient worshippers of the true God. 'Let all ... whose lot hath fallen in a "land flowing with milk & honey," upon earth, reflect, that God hath given them riches, and the leisure which riches procure, not for the purpose of indulging and corrupting themselves and others; but that they may glorify him, benefit their neighbours, and save their own souls.' —Horne.

8 We are therefore made, maintained, & redeemed, that we may live in obedience to the will of God; and the hallelujah with which the psalm concludes, may be taken both as a thankful acknowledgment of God's favours, and as a cheerful concurrence with this great intention of them. Has God done so much for us, and yet does he expect so little from us! Praise ye the Lord.—Henry.

PSALM CVI.

The psalmist exhorteth to praise God for his goodness, 1—3. He prayeth to share in his people's joy, 4, 5; he rehearseth Israel's rebellions, and God's mercies, 6—46. He concludeth with prayer and blessing, 47—48.

PRAISE[1] ye the LORD. [a]O give thanks unto the LORD; [b]for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 [c]Who can utter the mighty acts of the LORD? who can shew forth [d]all his praise?

3 [e]Blessed are they that [f]keep judgment, and he that [g]doeth righteousness [h]at all times.

4 [i]Remember me, O LORD, with the favour that thou bearest unto thy people: O [k]visit me with thy salvation;

5 That [l]I may see the good of thy chosen, that I may [m]rejoice in the gladness of thy nation, that [n]I may glory with thine inheritance.

6 We have [o]sinned with our fathers, we have committed iniquity, we have done wickedly.

7 [p]Our fathers understood not thy wonders in Egypt: [q]they remembered not [r]the multitude of thy mercies; but [s]provoked him at the sea, even at the Red sea.

8 Nevertheless [t]he saved them for his name's sake, [u]that he might make his mighty power to be known.

9 He [v]rebuked the Red sea also, and it was dried up: [w]so he led them through the depths, as through the wilderness.

10 And [x]he saved them from the hand of him that hated them, and [y]redeemed them from the hand of the enemy.

11 And [z]the waters covered their enemies; there was not one of them left.

12 Then [a]believed they his words; they sang his praise.

13 [b]They soon[3] forgat his works; [c]they waited not for his counsel:

14 [d]But lusted[4] exceedingly in the wilderness, [e]and tempted God in the desert.[5]

15 And [f]he gave them their request; but sent leanness into their soul.

16 They [g]envied Moses also in the camp, and Aaron [h]the saint of the LORD.

5 The faith of the Israelites was exactly the same, as is represented by 'the seed sown upon stony ground,' and widely different from that which springs up in a broken and penitent heart, (Mat. 13. 20,21), They were surprised, gratified, & delighted, by their unexpected deliverance, and the destruction of their enemies; and they experienced a mighty flow of natural joy and gratitude, such as may be observed in children when they are humoured, (Ex. 14.26-31). But there was no humiliation for sin; no abiding apprehensions of the glorious perfections of JEHOVAH; no steady, habitual reliance on his power, wisdom, truth, and love; no submission to his will, or preparation for self-denying obedience; and therefore 'in time of temptation they fell away,' having no root in themselves. 'They made haste, they forgat his works.' Marg. 'Within three days, they became impatient again.'—Patrick. And when their wishes were thwarted, they murmured, rebelled, forgat the works of God, would not wait for his counsel, or believe his word.

17 [i]The earth opened and swallowed up Dathan, and covered the company of Abiram.

18 And [k]a fire was kindled in their company; the flame burned up the wicked.

19 They [l]made a calf in Horeb, and worshipped the molten image.

20 Thus [m]they changed their glory[1] into[n] the similitude of an ox that eateth grass.

21 They [o]forgat [p]God their Saviour, which[q] had done great things in Egypt;

22 [r]Wondrous works in the land of Ham, and [s]terrible things by the Red sea.

23 Therefore[2] [t]he said that he would destroy them, had not Moses his[u] chosen [v]stood before him in the breach, to turn away his wrath, lest he should destroy them.

24 Yea, [w]they despised the[3] [x]pleasant land; [y]they believed not his word;

25 But [z]murmured in their tents, and [a]hearkened not unto the voice of the LORD.

26 [b]Therefore he [c]lifted up his hand against them, to overthrow them in the wilderness:

27 To overthrow[4] their seed also among the nations, and [d]to scatter them in the lands.[5]

28 They [e]joined themselves also unto Baal-peor, and ate the sacrifices of[f] the dead.

29 Thus they provoked him to anger [g]with their inventions; and [h]the plague brake in upon them.

30 Then [i]stood up Phinehas, and executed judgment: and so the plague was stayed.

31 And [k]that was counted unto him for righteousness unto all generations for evermore.

32 They [l]angered him also at the waters of strife, [m]so that it went ill with Moses for their sakes:

33 Because [n]they provoked his spirit, so that [o]he spake unadvisedly with his lips.[6]

34 They [p]did not destroy[7] the nations, [q]concerning whom the LORD commanded them:

35 But [r]were mingled among the heathen, [s]and learned their works.[8]

36 And [t]they served their idols: which[u] were a snare unto them.

37 Yea, [v]they sacrificed their sons and their daughters unto [w]devils,[1]

38 And [x]shed innocent blood, even the blood of their sons and of their daughters, whom they sacrificed unto the idols of Canaan: and [y]the land was polluted with blood.

39 Thus were they [z]defiled with their own works, and [a]went a whoring[2] with [b]their own inventions:

40 Therefore was [c]the wrath of the LORD kindled against his people, [d]insomuch that he abhorred [e]his own inheritance.

41 And [f]he gave them into the hand of the heathen; and [g]they that hated them ruled over them.

42 Their enemies also oppressed them, and they were brought into subjection under their hand.

43 [h]Many times did he deliver them; but they provoked him [i]with their counsel, and were brought[3] low for their iniquity.

44 Nevertheless [k]he regarded their affliction, when he heard their cry:

45 [l]And he remembered for them his covenant, and [m]repented according to [n]the multitude of his mercies.

46 [o]He made them also to be pitied of all those that carried them captives.

47 [p]Save us, O LORD our God, and [q]gather us from among the heathen, [r]to give thanks unto thy holy name, and to triumph in thy praise.

48 [s]Blessed be the LORD God of Israel from everlasting to everlasting: and let all the people say, Amen. Praise[4] ye the LORD.

PSALM CVII.

The psalmist exhorteth the redeemed, in praising God, to observe his manifold providence, 1—3, over travellers, 4—9, over captives, 10—16, over sick men, 17—22, over seamen, 23—32, and in divers varieties of life, 33—43.

O [a]GIVE thanks unto the LORD, for he is [b]good; [c]for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 Let [d]the redeemed of the LORD say so, whom he hath redeemed [e]from the hand of the enemy;[5]

3 And [f]gathered them out of the lands, from the east, and from the west, from the north, and from[7] the south.

4 They [g]wandered in the wilderness

5 'Eternal mercy is the theme here proposed; and they who have tasted its sweets, are here invited to join in setting forth its praises. The members of the Christian church are now, in the most... emphatical sense of the words, "the redeemed of Jehovah, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy, and gathered them by the gospel out of all lands."'—Horne. It is probable, that this psalm was composed by David, if he indeed were the author of the two preceding psalms; as those relate to the Lord's dealings with Israel, and this calls attention to his providential care of mankind in general. But while we primarily notice the literal sense, we shall also perceive, that those instances which are selected are pictures, or similitudes, of the blessings pertaining to salvation.

in a solitary way; they found no city to dwell in.

5 [h]Hungry and thirsty, their soul fainted in them.

6 Then [i]they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and [k]he delivered them out of their distresses.

7 And [l]he led them forth by the right way, [m]that they might go to a city of habitation.

8 [n]Oh that men would [o]praise the LORD for his goodness, and for [p]his wonderful works to the children of men!

9 For [q]he satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness.[1]

12 Therefore [v]he brought down their heart with labour: they fell down, [w]and there was none to help.

13 Then [x]they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and he saved them out of their distresses.

14 He [y]brought them out of darkness and the shadow of death, and brake[z] their bands in sunder.

15 Oh [a]that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!

16 For [b]he hath broken the gates of brass, and cut the bars of iron in sunder.

17 [c]Fools, [d]because of their transgression, and because of their iniquities, are afflicted:

18 Their soul [e]abhorreth all manner of meat; and [f]they draw near unto the gates of death.

19 Then [g]they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, and he saveth them out of their distresses.[3]

20 He [h]sent his word, and [i]healed them, and [k]delivered them from their destructions.

21 Oh [l]that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!

22 And let them [m]sacrifice the sacrifices of thanksgiving, and [n]declare his works with rejoicing.[1]

23 They that [o]go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters;

24 These see the works of the LORD, and [p]his wonders in the deep.

25 For [q]he commandeth, and raiseth[2] the stormy wind, which [r]lifteth up the waves thereof.

26 They mount up to the heaven, they go down again to the depths; [s]their soul is melted because of trouble.

27 They reel to and fro, and [t]stagger like a drunken man, [u]and are[3] at their wits' end.

28 Then [v]they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, and he bringeth them out of their distresses.[4]

29 He [w]maketh the storm a calm, so that the waves thereof are still.

30 Then are they glad because they be quiet; so [x]he bringeth them unto their desired haven.[5]

31 [y]Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for [z]his wonderful works to the children of men!

34 [e]A fruitful land into barrenness,[6] for the wickedness of them that dwell therein.

35 He [f]turneth the wilderness into a standing-water, and dry ground into water-springs.

36 And [g]there he maketh the hungry to dwell, that they may prepare [h]a city for habitation;

37 And [i]sow the fields, and plant vineyards, [k]which may yield fruits of increase.

38 [l]He blesseth them also, so that they are multiplied greatly, and [m]suffereth not their cattle to decrease.

3 The next case selected is that of those who have brought upon themselves sickness and disease by their vices & crimes. Loss of strength and of appetite are attended with excessive pain, and death presents itself before their affrighted minds; then the most profane will sometimes cry unto the Lord; and though their prayer is often the mere instinctive voice of distress, and only means, 'Torment me not:' yet he frequently hears them, and unexpectedly restores their health and strength. Probably, Christ by his powerful word healed some of this description when he was on earth; and all his miracles were emblematic of his healing the far worse diseases of our souls.

They transact business upon the unstable and tempestuous ocean; and there witness scenes, and experience deliverances, of which others can scarcely form a conception. They are tossed about by the violence of the waves, that so they and their vessel reel to and fro like a drunken man. 'All their wisdom is swallowed up,' (marg.) or is exhausted; and nothing remains but to await death. But when they cry unto the Lord, they are often wonderfully rescued from the very jaws of death; and their terror is succeeded by proportionable joy. This too is emblematical of the tossings of spiritual distress, and of spiritual deliverance, which issues in rest in Christ Jesus.

7 Worldly wealth is an uncertain thing, and often those that are filled with it, ere they are aware, grow so secure and sensual that they lose it again. Hence it is called deceitful riches, and the mammon of unrighteousness. God has many ways of making men poor. He can do it by oppression, affliction, and sorrow, as he tempted Job and brought him low.—Henry.

PSALM CVIII.

David encourageth himself to praise God, 1—4. He prayeth for God's assistance according to his promise, 5—10. His confidence in God's help, 11—13.

¶ [a]A song or psalm[5] of David.

O GOD, [b]my heart is fixed; [c]I will sing and give praise, even with my[d] glory.

2 [e]Awake, psaltery and harp; [f]I myself will awake early.

3 I will [g]praise thee, O LORD, among the people: and I will sing praises unto thee among the nations.

4 For [h]thy mercy is great above the heavens, and thy truth reacheth unto the clouds.[6]

5 [i]Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens; and [k]thy glory above all the earth;

6 That [l]thy beloved may be delivered: [m]save with thy right hand, and[n] answer me.

7 God hath [o]spoken in his holiness; [p]I will rejoice, I will divide [q]Shechem, and mete out [r]the valley of Succoth.

8 [s]Gilead is mine; Manasseh is mine; [t]Ephraim also is the strength of mine head; [u]Judah is my lawgiver;

9 [v]Moab is my wash-pot; over Edom will [w]I cast out my shoe; [x]over Philistia will I triumph.

10 Who will bring me into the strong city? [y]who will lead me into Edom?

11 Wilt not thou, O God, [z]who hast cast us off? and wilt not thou, O God, [a]go forth with our hosts?

12 Give us help from trouble: [b]for vain is the help of man.

13 [c]Through God we shall do valiantly: for he it is that shall [d]tread down our enemies.

a Ps.lxviii., title.
5 This psalm consists of the latter part of the fifty-seventh psalm, and the latter part of the sixtieth, with no material alteration. The fifty-seventh was composed when David fled from Saul in the cave; & begins with grievous complaints, which are here omitted. (lvii. title, 1-6.) The sixtieth was written after David had for some time reigned over all Israel, and when he was engaged in war with the Syrians and others.

David, complaining of his slanderous enemies, under the person of Judas devoteth them, 1—15. He showeth their sin, 16—20. Complaining of his own misery, he prayeth for help, 21—29. He promiseth thankfulness, 30, 31.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

HOLD [a]not thy peace, [b]O God of my praise;

2 For [c]the mouth of the wicked, and the mouth of[1] the deceitful, [2]are opened against me: they have spoken against me [d]with a lying tongue.

3 They [e]compassed me about also with words of hatred; and [f]fought against me without a cause.

4 [g]For my love they are my adversaries: [h]but I give myself unto [3]prayer.

5 And [i]they have rewarded me evil for good, [k]and hatred for my love.

6 [l]Set thou a wicked man over him: [m]and let Satan[4] stand at his right hand.

7 When he shall be judged, let him be[5] condemned; [n]and let his prayer become sin.

8 [o]Let his days be few; and [p]let another take his office.[6]

9 Let [q]his children be fatherless, and his wife a widow.

10 Let [r]his children be continually vagabonds, and beg: let them seek their bread also out of their desolate places.

11 Let [s]the extortioner catch all that he hath; and [t]let the stranger spoil his labour.

12 Let there be [u]none to extend mercy unto him; neither let there be any [v]to favour his fatherless children.

13 Let [w]his posterity be cut off; and in the generation following let [x]their name be blotted out.[6]

14 Let [y]the iniquity of his fathers be remembered with the LORD; and [z]let not the sin of his mother be [a]blotted out.

15 Let them be [b]before the LORD continually, that he may [c]cut off the memory of them from the earth.

16 Because that [d]he remembered not to show mercy, but [e]persecuted the poor and needy man, that he might even [f]slay the broken in heart.

3 He resolves to keep close to his duty, and take the comfort of that. 'But I give myself unto prayer;' I prayer, so it is in the original: 'I am for prayer, I am a man for prayer, I love prayer, & prize prayer, and practise prayer, and make a business of prayer, and am in my element when I am in prayer.' A good man is made up of prayer, gives himself to prayer, as the apostles, Ac. 6. 4. When David's enemies falsely accused him, and misrepresented him, he applied himself to God, and by prayer committed his cause to him. Though they were his adversaries for his love, yet he continued to pray for them. If others are abusive & injurious, yet let not us fail to do our duty to them, nor 'sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for them,' 1 Sa. 12. 23. Though they hated and persecuted him for his religion, yet he kept close to it, they laughed at him for his devotion, but they could not laugh him out of it. Let them say what they will, 'I give myself unto prayer.' Now, herein David was a type of Christ.—Henry.

2 Whether David, when he wrote these verses, thought of Doeg, or of Ahithophel, who being a traitor, more resembled Judas, as he also did in murdering himself; (2 Sa. 17.23; Mat.27.3-5), they are most certainly a prophetic denunciation of the doom which awaited the enemies of Christ, and Judas in particular; for the apostle has quoted one clause from the passage, with this remarkable introduction; 'This scripture must needs have been fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost, by the mouth of David, spake before concerning Judas,' &c.,(Ac.1. 16-22). The inspired historian gives the exact words from the Septuagint, which translates the whole as an imprecation. Indeed the first verb is the only one which necessarily requires this construction, being literally rendered, 'Set thou;' whereas all the other verbs are in the future, and may be rendered as prophecies. Yet the first verb, being imperative, and the passage being so quoted in the Acts from the Septuagint, seem to imply, that sentence was prophetically denounced against the criminal or criminals, and not merely the event foretold. ...There can be no impropriety in reading or singing this psalm, as the sentence of our Judge on his implacable opposers and blasphemers, for a solemn warning to all who hear it.-Scott.

5 This psalm consists of as many short metres as there are letters in the Hebrew alphabet, and in their regular order; so that 'Hallelujah' could not be a part of the first verse, as that word begins with the fifth letter of the alphabet. It should, therefore, in general be considered as a title to the psalms which begin with it; pointing out the scope to the reader, and calling on him to prepare his heart for praising God. The word rendered 'assembly,' signifies a secret council, or company.

PSALM CXII.

Godliness hath the promises of this life, 1—3, and of the life to come, 4—9. The prosperity of the godly shall be despised by the wicked, 10.

PRAISE[1] ye the LORD. [a]Blessed is the man that feareth the LORD, that [b]delighteth greatly in his commandments.

2 [c]His seed shall be mighty upon earth: the generation of the upright shall be blessed.

3 [d]Wealth and riches shall be in his house; [e]and his righteousness endureth for ever.

4 Unto the upright [f]there ariseth light in the darkness: [g]he is gracious, and full of compassion, [h]and righteous.

5 A [i]good man [k]sheweth favour, and lendeth: [l]he will guide his affairs with discretion.[2]

6 [m]Surely he shall not be moved for ever: [n]the righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance.

7 He [o]shall not be afraid of evil tidings: [p]his heart is fixed, [q]trusting in the LORD.

8 [r]His heart is established, he shall not be afraid, [s]until he see his desire[3] upon his enemies.

9 [t]He hath [u]dispersed, he hath given to the poor; [v]his righteousness endureth for ever; [w]his horn shall be exalted with honour.

10 The [x]wicked shall see it, and be grieved;[4y] he shall gnash with his teeth, and [z] melt away: [a]the desire of the wicked shall perish.

PSALM CXIII.

An exhortation to praise God for his merciful condescension to his creatures.

PRAISE[5] ye the LORD. [a]Praise, O ye servants of the LORD, praise the name of the LORD.

2 [b]Blessed be the name of the LORD from this time forth and for evermore.

3 From [c]the rising of the sun, unto the going down of the same, the LORD's name is to be praised.

4 The LORD is [d]high above all nations, and [e]his glory above the heavens.

5 Who is [f]like unto the LORD our God, who dwelleth[6] on high,

6 Who [g]humbleth himself to behold the things that are in heaven, and [h]in the earth!

7 He [i]raiseth up the poor [k]out of the dust, and lifteth [l]the needy out of the dunghill;

8 That [m]he may set him with princes, even with the princes of his people.

9 He [n]maketh the barren woman to keep[1] house, and to be a joyful mother of children. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXIV.

The miracles of God's power, when he brought his people out of Egypt, are a just ground of fearing him.

WHEN [a]Israel went out of Egypt, the house of Jacob from [b]a people of strange language;

2 [c]Judah was his sanctuary, and Israel his dominion.

3 The [d]sea saw it, and fled;[2] [e]Jordan was driven back.

4 The [f]mountains skipped like rams, and the little hills like [3]lambs.

5 [g]What ailed thee, O thou sea, that thou fleddest? thou Jordan, that thou wast driven back?

6 Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams; and ye little hills, like lambs?

7 [h]Tremble, thou earth, at the presence of the LORD, at the presence of the God of Jacob;

8 Which [i]turned the rock into a standing water, the flint into a fountain of waters.

PSALM CXV.

Because God is truly glorious, 1—3, and idols are vanity, 4—8, the psalmist exhorteth to confidence in God, 9—11. God is to be praised for his blessings, 12—18.

NOT [a]unto us, O LORD, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, [b]for thy mercy, and for thy truth's sake.

2 [c]Wherefore should the heathen say, Where is now their God?[4]

3 But [d]our God is in the heavens; [e]he hath done whatsoever he hath pleased.

4 Their [f]idols are silver and gold, the work of men's hands.

5 They have mouths, but they speak not; eyes have they, but they see not:

6 They have ears, but they hear not; noses have they, but they smell not:

7 They have hands, but they handle not; feet have they, but they walk not; neither speak they through their throat.[5]

3 The same power that fixed the fluid waters, and made them stand still, shook the stable mountains, and made them tremble; for all the powers of nature are under the check of the God of nature. Mountains and hills are, before God, but like rams and lambs; even the bulkiest and the most rocky are as manageable by him as they are by the shepherd. 4 'Because he promised to deliver them, not for their sakes, but for his name; they ground their prayer upon this promise.' The verses are evidently a prayer for deliverance, tho' often quoted as a thanksgiving for benefits received; and they may properly be thus applied. God was intreated to help his people; not because they deserved it, or that they might be honoured; but that his name might be glorified, and the blasphemies of his enemies silenced, by the performance of his faithful and merciful engagements to his worshippers.

PSALM CXVI.

The psalmist professeth his love and duty to God for his deliverance, 1—11. He studieth to be thankful, 12—19.

I[4] [a]LOVE the LORD, [b]because he hath heard my voice and my supplications.

2 Because he hath inclined his ear unto me, [c]therefore will I call upon him as[5] long as I live.

3 The [d]sorrows of death compassed me, and the pains of hell gat[6] hold upon me: [e]I found trouble and sorrow.

4 Then [f]called I upon the name of the LORD: [g]O LORD, I beseech thee, deliver my soul.

5 [h]Gracious is the LORD, [i]and righteous; yea, our God is merciful.

6 The LORD [k]preserveth the simple: I[l] was brought low, and he helped me.

7 Return unto [m]thy rest, O my soul; for the LORD hath [n]dealt bountifully with thee.

8 For [o]thou hast delivered my soul from death, [p]mine eyes from tears, and[q] my feet from falling.

9 I will [r]walk before the LORD [s]in the land of the living.

10 [t]I believed, [u]therefore have I spoken: [v]I was greatly afflicted.

11 I said [w]in my haste, [x]All men are liars.[1]

12 [y]What shall I render unto the LORD for all his benefits toward me?

13 I will [z]take the cup of salvation, and [a]call upon the name of the LORD.

14 I will [b]pay my vows unto the LORD now in the presence of all his people.

15 [c]Precious in the sight of the LORD is the death of his saints.

16 O LORD, [d]truly I am thy servant; I am thy servant, and [e]the son of thine handmaid: [f]thou hast loosed my bonds.

17 I will offer to thee [g]the sacrifice of thanksgiving,[2] and will [h]call upon the name of the LORD.

18 I will [i]pay my vows unto the LORD now in the presence of all his people, 19 In [k]the courts of the LORD's house, in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXVII.

An exhortation to praise God for his mercy and truth.

O [a]PRAISE the LORD, all ye nations: [b]praise him, all ye people.

2 For [c]his merciful kindness is great towards us: and the truth of the LORD endureth for ever. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXVIII.

An exhortation to praise God for his mercy, 1—4. The psalmist by his own experience showeth how good it is to trust in God, 5—18. Under the type of the psalmist the coming of Christ in his kingdom is expressed, 19—29.

O [a]GIVE thanks[3] unto the LORD, for he is good: because his mercy endureth for ever.

2 Let [b]Israel now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

3 Let [c]the house of Aaron now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

4 Let [d]them now that fear the LORD say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

5 I [e]called upon the LORD in[4] distress: the LORD answered me, and [f]set me in a large place.

6 [g]The LORD is on[5] my side; I will not fear: what can man do unto me?

7 The LORD [h]taketh my part with them that help me: [i]therefore shall I see my desire upon them that hate me.

2 In these verses, 9-13, the whole people of Israel, the priests, and proselytes at the gate, that feared the Lord, are exhorted to trust in him. They are reminded how he had, in all ages, shown himself 'the help and shield,' the upholder and defender, of such as thus relied on him; and assured that He would bless, without exception, every one of those who feared him.

2 In this and the 13th verse, there is doubtless an allusion to the drink-offering of strong wine poured out before the Lord in the holy place, (Nu. 28. 7). But the Jews had also in their families a more private cup of thanksgiving, as well for the common benefits of life, as for the more marked instances of the Lord's mercies and deliverances. This cup, after calling on the name of the Lord, was presented by the master of the house, in order, to all who were present. This observance was more marked at the celebration of the passover, and was followed by our Lord when he celebrated the last passover with his disciples.

3 'David is thought to have composed this psalm, after his advancement to the throne, and his victories over his enemies round about; and probably it was sung by the priests, Levites, and congregation of Israel, with David at the head of them, as they marched up to the tabernacle to render public thanks for these benefits. 'David, rejected of Saul and the people, in the appointed time obtained the kingdom. ...Under his person in all this was Christ lively set forth, who should be of his people rejected.' The psalmist calls upon all the people to praise God for the deliverance of his church in raising David to be king.

8 It is [k]better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in man:

9 It is better to trust in the LORD than[l] to put confidence in princes.

10 [m]All nations compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD will I destroy[1] them.

11 They [n]compassed me about; yea, they compassed me about: but in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.

12 They compassed me about [o]like bees; they are [p]quenched as the fire of thorns: for [q]in the name of the LORD I will destroy[2] them.

13 [r]Thou[3] hast thrust sore at me, that I might fall: but the LORD helped me.

14 The LORD [s]is my strength and song, and is become my salvation.

15 The [t]voice of rejoicing and salvation is in the tabernacles of the righteous: [u]the right hand of the LORD doeth valiantly.

16 The [v]right hand of the LORD is exalted; the right hand of the LORD doeth valiantly.

17 I shall not [w]die, but live, and declare[x] the works of the LORD.

18 The LORD hath [y]chastened me sore: but he hath not given me over unto death.

19 [z]Open to me the gates of righteousness:[4] [a]I will go into them, and I will praise the LORD:

20 This [b]gate of the LORD, into which the righteous shall enter.

21 I [c]will praise thee: for thou hast heard me, [d]and art become my salvation.

22 [e]The stone which the builders refused is become [f]the head stone of the corner.[5]

23 This is the[6] LORD's doing; [g]it is marvellous in our eyes.

24 This is [h]the day which the LORD hath made; [i]we will rejoice and be glad in it.

25 [k]Save now,[7] I beseech thee, O LORD: O LORD, I beseech thee, [l]send now prosperity.

26 [m]Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the LORD: [n]we have blessed you out of the house of the LORD.

27 [o]God is the LORD, which hath [p]shewed us light: [q]bind the [1]sacrifice with cords, even unto [r]the horns of the altar.

28 Thou art [s]my God, and I will praise thee; thou art my God, I will exalt thee.

29 O [t]give thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSALM CXIX.

This psalm containeth sundry prayers, praises, and professions of obedience.

ALEPH.

BLESSED[a] are the undefiled[2] in the way, who [b]walk in the law[3] of the LORD.

2 Blessed are they that [c]keep his testimonies, and that [d]seek him with the whole heart.

3 They also [e]do no iniquity: they walk in his ways.

4 Thou hast [f]commanded us to keep thy precepts diligently.

5 Oh that [g]my ways were directed to keep thy statutes!

6 Then [h]shall I not be ashamed, when [i]I have respect unto all thy commandments.

7 I will [k]praise thee with uprightness of heart, [l]when I shall have learned thy[4] righteous judgments.

8 [m]I will keep thy statutes: [n]O forsake me not utterly.

BETH.

9 Wherewithal [o]shall a young man cleanse his way?[5] [p]by taking heed thereto according to thy word.

10 With [q]my whole heart have I sought thee: [r]O let me not wander from thy commandments.[6]

11 [s]Thy word have I hid in mine heart, [t]that I might not sin against thee.

12 [u]Blessed art thou, O LORD: [v]teach me thy statutes.

13 With my lips have [w]I declared all the judgments of thy mouth.

14 I have [x]rejoiced in the way of thy testimonies, as much as in all riches.

15 I will [y]meditate in thy precepts, and [z]have respect unto thy ways.

16 I will [a]delight myself in thy statutes: [b]I will not forget thy word.

3 This psalm is generally allowed to have been composed by David. It is a psalm in praise of the excellence of God's word, under the several expressions, law, testimonies, precepts, statutes, judgments, commandments, ways. It is the record of a believer's experience of the power of that word, for all the purposes of the spiritual life. As such it is invaluable, and he whose experience answers to what is described, has the evidence that he is a subject of redeeming grace, & of the sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost.

vant, that [d]I may live, and keep thy word.

18 Open[1] thou mine eyes, that I may behold [e]wondrous things out of thy law.[2]

19 I am [f]a stranger in the earth; hide[g] not thy commandments from me.

20 My [h]soul breaketh for the longing that it hath unto thy judgments at[i] all times.

21 Thou hast [k]rebuked the proud that are [l]cursed, which do err from thy commandments.

22 [m]Remove from me reproach and contempt; [n]for I have kept thy testimonies.

23 [o]Princes also did sit and speak against me: but [p]thy servant did meditate in thy statutes.[3]

24 Thy [q]testimonies also are my delight, [r]and my[4] counsellors.

DALETH.

25 My [s]soul cleaveth unto the dust:[5] [t]quicken thou me [u]according to thy word.

26 I have [v]declared my ways, and thou heardest me: [w]teach me thy statutes.

27 Make me to understand the way of thy precepts: [x]so shall I talk of thy wondrous works.

28 My [y]soul melteth[6] for heaviness: [z]strengthen thou me according unto thy word.

29 [a]Remove from me the way of lying; and [b]grant me thy law graciously.

30 I have [c]chosen the way of truth; thy[d] judgments have I laid before me.

31 I have [e]stuck unto thy testimonies: O LORD, [f]put me not to shame.

32 I will [g]run the way of thy commandments, when thou shalt [h]enlarge my heart.

HE.

33 [i]Teach me, O LORD, the way of thy statutes, and [k]I shall keep it unto the end.

34 [l]Give me understanding, and I[m] shall keep thy law; yea, I shall observe[n] it with my whole heart.

35 [o]Make me to go in [p]the path of thy commandments; [q]for therein do I delight.

36 [r]Incline my heart unto thy testimonies, [s]and not to covetousness.

37 Turn[1] [t]away mine eyes from beholding vanity; and [u]quicken thou me in thy way.

38 [v]Stablish thy word unto thy servant, [w]who is devoted to thy fear.

39 [x]Turn away my reproach which I fear: [y]for thy judgments are good.

40 Behold, [z]I have longed after thy precepts; [a]quicken me in thy righteousness.

VAU.

41 [b]Let thy mercies come also unto me, O LORD, even thy salvation, according to thy word.

42 [c]So shall I have[2] wherewith to answer him that reproacheth me: [d]for I trust in thy word.

43 And [e]take not the word of[3] truth utterly out of my mouth; [f]for I have hoped in thy judgments.

44 So shall I [g]keep thy law continually for ever and ever.

45 And [h]I will walk at [4]liberty: [i]for I seek thy precepts.

46 I will [k]speak of thy testimonies also before kings, and [l]will not be ashamed.

47 And [m]I will delight myself in thy commandments, [n]which I have loved.

48 My [o]hands also will I lift up [p]unto thy commandments, which I have loved; and [q]I will meditate in thy statutes.

ZAIN.

49 [r]Remember the word unto thy servant, [s]upon which thou hast caused me to hope.

50 [t]This is my comfort in my affliction: [u]for thy word hath quickened me.

51 The [v]proud have had me greatly in derision; [w]yet have I not declined from thy law.

52 I [x]remembered thy judgments of old, O LORD; and have comforted myself.

53 [y]Horror hath taken hold upon me, because of the wicked that forsake thy law.[5]

54 [z]Thy statutes have been my songs in the house of my pilgrimage.

55 I have remembered thy name, O LORD, [a]in the night, and have [b]kept thy law.

56 This I had, [c]because I kept thy precepts.

CHETH.

57 Thou art [d]my portion, O LORD: I[e] have said that I would keep thy words.

58 [f]I entreated thy favour[1] with my whole heart: [g]be merciful unto me according to thy word.

59 I [h]thought on my ways, and turned[i] my feet unto thy testimonies.

60 I [k]made haste, and delayed not to keep thy commandments.

61 [l]The bands[2] of the wicked have robbed me:[3] [m]but I have not forgotten thy law.

62 At [n]midnight I will rise to give thanks unto thee, because of [o]thy righteous judgments.

63 I am [p]a companion of all them that fear thee, and of them that keep thy precepts.

64 The [q]earth, O LORD, is full of thy mercy: [r]teach me thy statutes.

TETH.

65 Thou hast [s]dealt well with thy servant, O LORD, according unto thy word.

66 [t]Teach me good judgment[4] and knowledge: for [u]I have believed thy commandments.

67 [v]Before I was afflicted I went astray; [w]but now have I kept thy word.

68 Thou art [x]good, and doest good: teach[y] me thy statutes.

69 The [z]proud have forged[5] a lie against me: but [a]I will keep thy precepts [b]with my whole heart.

70 Their [c]heart is as fat as grease:[6] but[d] I delight in thy law.

71 It is [e]good for me that I have been afflicted; that I might learn thy statutes.

72 The law of thy mouth is [f]better unto me than thousands of gold and silver.

JOD.

73 [g]Thy hands have made me, and fashioned me: [h]give me understanding, [i]that I may learn thy commandments.

74 They that [k]fear thee will be glad when they see me; because [l]I have hoped in thy word.

75 [m]I know, O LORD, that thy judgments are right,[1] and that [n]thou in faithfulness hast afflicted me.

76 Let, I pray thee, [o]thy merciful kindness be for[2] my comfort, according to thy word unto thy servant.

77 Let [p]thy tender mercies come unto me, that I may live: [q]for thy law is my delight.

78 Let [r]the proud be ashamed; for they deal perversely with me [s]without a cause:[3] but [t]I will meditate in thy precepts.

79 [u]Let those that fear thee turn unto me, and those that have known thy testimonies.

80 Let my heart be [v]sound in thy statutes, [w]that I be not ashamed.

CAPH.

81 My soul [x]fainteth for thy salvation; [y]but I hope in thy word.

82 Mine [z]eyes fail for thy word, saying, [a]When wilt thou comfort me?

83 For I am become [b]like a bottle in the smoke;[4] [c]yet do I not forget thy statutes.

84 [d]How many are the days of thy servant? [e]when wilt thou execute judgment on them that persecute me?

85 The [f]proud have digged pits[5] for me, [g]which are not after thy law.

86 All [h]thy commandments are faithful:[6] [i]they persecute me wrongfully; [k]help thou me.

87 They had [l]almost consumed me [m]upon earth: [n]but I forsook not thy precepts.

88 [o]Quicken me after thy lovingkindness; [p]so shall I keep the testimony of thy mouth.

LAMED.

89 [q]For ever, O LORD, thy word is settled in heaven.[7]

90 Thy [r]faithfulness is unto[8] all generations: [s]thou hast established the earth, and it abideth.[9]

91 They [t]continue this day according to thine ordinances: for [u]all are thy servants.

92 Unless [v]thy law had been my delights, [w]I should then have perished in mine affliction.

93 I [x]will never forget thy precepts: for with them thou hast quickened me.

4 In the Hebrew the word signifies taste, discernment, to judge rightly of moral and spiritual things. Without this taste, or discretion, we mistake falsehood for truth in our studies, and wrong for right in our practice; superstition and enthusiasm may pass with us for religion, or else licentiousness may intrude itself upon us under the name and notion of liberty; in a word, our learning and knowledge prove useless if not prejudicial to us. 3 The complaint of the psalmist hath been made by the faithful in all ages, that the men of the world 'dealt perversely with them, without a cause,' or oppressed them falsely; first spreading slanders and calumnies concerning them, and then persecuting them for those supposed crimes. Such usage should have no other effect upon us than it had upon David. SAMECH.

113 I [h]hate vain thoughts: but thy [i]law do I love.

114 Thou art [k]my hiding-place and [l]my shield: [m]I hope in thy word.

115 [n]Depart from me, ye evil-doers: [o]for I will keep the commandments of my God.

116 [p]Uphold me according unto thy word, that I may live: [q]and let me not be ashamed of my hope.

117 [r]Hold thou me up, and I shall be safe: [s]and I will have respect unto thy statutes continually.

118 Thou hast [t]trodden down all them that [u]err from thy statutes: for [v]their deceit is falsehood.[1]

119 Thou puttest[2] [w]away all the wicked of the earth like dross: [x]therefore I love thy testimonies.

120 [y]My flesh trembleth for fear of thee: and I am afraid of thy judgments.

AIN.

121 I [z]have done judgment and justice: [a]leave me not to mine oppressors.

122 Be [b]surety[3] for thy servant for good: [c]let not the proud oppress me.

123 [d]Mine eyes fail for thy salvation, and for the word of thy righteousness.

124 [e]Deal with thy servant according unto thy mercy, and [f]teach me thy statutes.

125 I am [g]thy servant; [h]give me understanding, [i]that I may know thy testimonies.

126 It is [k]time for thee, LORD, to work; for [l]they have made void thy law.[4]

127 Therefore [m]I love thy commandments above gold, yea, above fine gold.

128 Therefore [n]I esteem all thy precepts concerning all things to be right; [o]and I hate every false way.

panted:[1] for [u]I longed for thy commandments.

132 [v]Look thou upon me, and be merciful unto me, as[2] thou usest to do unto those that love thy name.

133 [w]Order my steps in thy word: and [x]let not any iniquity have dominion over me.

134 [y]Deliver me from the oppression of man: so will I keep thy precepts.

135 [z]Make thy face to shine upon thy servant; [a]and teach me thy statutes.

136 [b]Rivers of waters run down mine eyes, because they keep not thy law.

138 Thy [d]testimonies that thou hast commanded are righteous[3] and very faithful.[4]

139 My [e]zeal hath consumed[5] me; because [f]mine enemies have forgotten thy words.

140 Thy word is [g]very pure:[6] therefore thy servant loveth it.

141 I am [h]small and despised; [i]yet do not I forget thy precepts.

142 Thy righteousness is [k]an everlasting righteousness, [l]and thy law is the truth.

143 [m]Trouble and anguish have taken[7] hold on me; [n]yet thy commandments are my delights.

144 The [o]righteousness of thy testimonies is everlasting: [p]give me understanding,[q] and I shall live.

KOPH.

145 I [r]cried with my whole heart; hear me, O LORD: [s]I will keep thy statutes.

146 I cried unto thee; save me, and[8] I shall keep thy testimonies.

147 I [t]prevented the dawning of the morning, and cried: I [u]hoped in thy word.

148 Mine [v]eyes prevent the night-watches,[9] that I might meditate in thy word.

149 [w]Hear my voice, [x]according unto thy loving-kindness: O LORD, quicken[y] me according to thy judgment.

9 The Hebrews divided the natural day into three portions, morning, noon, and evening. These are mentioned by David as hours or times of prayer. The night also was divided into three parts, called 'watches.' The same division held among the Greeks. Subsequently the strictness of military discipline introduced a fourth. See Dr Hales on the subject. 'David delighted in the holy exercises of prayer & meditation; therefore he prevented the dawning of the morning, and was beforehand with the light itself; therefore his 'eyes prevented the watches,' that is, the last of those watches, into which the night was by the Jews divided; he needed not the watchman's call, but was stirring before it could be given. Climate and constitution will doubtless make a difference, & claim considerable allowance. But by Christians who enjoy their health, in temperate weather, the sun should not be suffered to shine in vain, nor the golden hours of the morning to glide away unimproved.'—Horne.

4 Amidst the storms and tempests of the world, there is a perfect calm in the breasts of those, who not only do the will of God, but 'love' to do it. They are at peace with God by the blood of reconciliation; at peace with themselves, by the answer of a good conscience, and the subjection of those desires which war against the soul; at peace with all men, by the spirit of charity; and the whole creation is so at peace with them, that 'all things work together for their good.' No external troubles can rob them of this 'great peace;' no offences or stumbling blocks, which are thrown in their way by persecution or temptation, by the malice of enemies, or the apostacy of friends, by any thing they see, hear of, or feel, can detain or drive them from their course. Heavenly love surmounts every obstacle, and runs with delight 'the way of God's commandments.'—Horne. This will be perfectly realized when the heart has lost its enmity against the ways of heaven, and being wholly renewed in nature, we perfectly love the law of God.

PSALM CXXIV.

The church blesseth God for a miraculous deliverance.

¶ [a] A song of degrees of David.

IF it had not been [b] the LORD who was on our side, [c] now may Israel say;

2 If it had not been the LORD who was on our side, [d] when men rose up against us:

3 Then [e] they had [f] swallowed us up quick, when [g] their wrath was kindled[1] against us:

4 Then [h] the waters had overwhelmed us, the stream had gone over our soul:

5 Then [i] the proud waters had gone over our soul.

PSALM CXXVI.

The church, celebrating her incredible return out of captivity, 1—3, prayeth for, and prophesieth her own future joyfulness, 4—6.

¶ [a] A song of degrees.

WHEN the LORD turned[1] again the captivity of Zion, we were [b] like them that dream.[2]

2 Then [c] was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing: [d] then said they among the heathen, The LORD hath done[3] great things for them.

3 The [e] LORD hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad.

4 [f] Turn again our captivity, O LORD, [g] as the streams in the [4] south.

5 They [h] that sow in tears shall reap in joy.[5]

6 He [i] that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious[6] seed, [k] shall doubtless come again with [7] rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him.

PSALM CXXVII.

The vanity of human endeavours without God's blessing, 1, 2. Children are God's gift, 3—5.

¶ [a] A song of degrees for[8] Solomon.

EXCEPT [b] the LORD [c] build the house, [d] they labour in vain [9] that build it: [e] except the LORD keep the city, [f] the watchman waketh but in vain.

2 It is [g] vain for you to [h] rise up early, to sit up late, to eat [i] the bread of sorrows: [k] for so he giveth his beloved sleep.

3 Lo, [l] children[10] are an heritage of the LORD: and the fruit of the womb is his reward.

4 As [m] arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; [n] so are children of the youth.

vine by the sides of thine house: thy children like [g]olive-plants [h]round about thy table.[1]

4 Behold, that thus shall the man be blessed that feareth the LORD.

5 The LORD shall [i]bless thee out of Zion; and [k]thou shalt see the good of Jerusalem all the days of thy life.

6 Yea, [l]thou shalt see thy children's children, and [m]peace upon Israel.

PSALM CXXIX.

An exhortation to praise God for saving Israel in their great afflictions, 1—4. The haters of the church are cursed, 5—8.

¶ [a]A song of degrees.

MANY[2] a time [b]have they afflicted me [c]from my youth, [d]may Israel now say:

2 Many a time have they afflicted me from my youth; [e]yet they have not prevailed against me.[3]

3 The [f]plowers plowed upon my back; they made long their furrows.[4]

4 The [g]LORD is righteous: he hath cut[h] asunder the cords[5] of the wicked.

5 Let them all [i]be confounded and turned back that hate Zion:

6 Let them be [k]as the grass upon the house-tops, which withereth afore it groweth up;

7 Wherewith the mower filleth not his hand, nor [l]he that bindeth sheaves his bosom.

8 Neither do they which go by say, The[m] blessing of the LORD be upon you: we bless you in the name of the LORD.

PSALM CXXX.

The psalmist, in distress, professeth his hope in prayer, 1—4, and his patience in hope, 5, 6. He exhorteth Israel to hope in God, 7, 8.

¶ [a]A song of degrees.

OUT[b] of the depths[6] have I cried unto thee, O LORD.

2 LORD, hear my voice; [c]let thine ears be attentive to the voice of my supplications.

3 If thou, LORD, [d]shouldest mark iniquities, O LORD, who shall stand?

4 But [e]there is forgiveness with thee, [f]that thou mayest be feared.

5 I [g]wait for the LORD, my soul doth wait, [h]and in his word do I hope.

6 My soul [i]waiteth for the LORD more than they that watch for the morning; I[7] say, more than they that watch for the morning.[8]

7 [k]Let Israel hope in the LORD: [l]for with the LORD there is mercy, and with him is plenteous redemption

8 And [m]he shall redeem Israel from all his iniquities.

PSALM CXXXI.

David, professing his humility, 1, 2, exhorteth Israel to hope in God, 3.

¶ [a]A song of degrees of David.

LORD, [b]my heart is not haughty, nor mine eyes lofty: [c]neither do I exercise[1] myself in great matters, or in things too high[2] for me.

2 Surely I have behaved and [d]quieted myself,[3] [e]as a child that is weaned of his mother: my soul is even as a weaned child.

3 [f]Let Israel hope in the LORD from[4] henceforth and for ever.

PSALM CXXXII.

David, in his prayer, commendeth unto God the religious care he had for the ark, 1—7. His prayer at the removing of the ark, 8—10, with a repetition of God's promises, 11—18.

¶ [a]A song of degrees.

1 We do not remember (says the writer in the Pict. Bible, who travelled in the East) to have met with a single instance, in the East, of vines trained against the walls of a house, or of olives near or about a house. Neither have we read of such instances. The passage doubtless derives its figures from the fertility of the vine, and from the appearance of the olive, or from the order in which olive trees are planted. The construction would then be: 'Thy wife, in the sides (interior apartments) of thy house shall be as the fruitful vine, and thy children, round about thy table, like olive plants.'

5 When needful work is to be done for God, it is good for us to task ourselves, and tie ourselves for a time, because we are apt to put off. It is good in the morning to cut out work for the day, binding ourselves that we will do it before we sleep, only with submission to Providence; 'for we know not what a day may bring forth.' Especially in the great work of conversion to God, we must be thus solicitous, thus zealous.—Henry.

7 The psalmist determined to 'find out a place for the Lord, an habitation for the mighty God of Jacob:' that is, a place, in which the ark, the symbol of his presence, might be stationed, as it had been at Shiloh. But having determined, probably by revelation, to remove the ark to mount Zion; the next inquiry is, where the ark might be found, having been long left in obscurity? David, while resident in Bethlehem Ephratah, had often heard of the ark as greatly neglected and in prospect of being king, had determined to place it in a more conspicuous situation. When made king he took the necessary steps for so doing.

PSALM CXXXVI.

An exhortation to give thanks to God for his mercies particularly enumerated.

O [a]GIVE thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: [b]for his mercy endureth for ever.[1]

2 O give thanks unto [c]the God of gods: for his mercy endureth for ever.

3 O give thanks to [d]the LORD of lords: for his mercy endureth for ever.

4 To him [e]who alone doeth great wonders: for his mercy endureth for ever.

5 To [f]him that by wisdom made the heavens: for his mercy endureth for ever.

6 To [g]him that stretched out the earth above the waters: for his mercy endureth for ever.

7 To [h]him that made great lights: for his mercy endureth for ever:

8 [i]The sun to[2] rule by day: for his mercy endureth for ever:

9 The [k]moon and stars to rule by night: for his mercy endureth for ever.

10 To [l]him that smote Egypt in their first-born: for his mercy endureth for ever:

11 And [m]brought out Israel from among them: for his mercy endureth for ever:

12 [n]With a strong hand, and with a stretched-out arm: for his mercy endureth for ever.

13 To [o]him which divided the Red sea into parts: for his mercy endureth for ever:

14 And made Israel to pass through the midst of it: for his mercy endureth for ever:

15 [p]But overthrew[3] Pharaoh and his host in the Red sea: [q]for his mercy endureth for ever.

16 To [r]him which led his people through the wilderness: for his mercy endureth for ever.

17 To [s]him which smote great kings: for his mercy endureth for ever:

18 And slew famous kings:[4] for his mercy endureth for ever:

19 [t]Sihon king of the Amorites: for his mercy endureth for ever:

20 And [u]Og the king of Bashan: for his mercy endureth for ever:

21 And [v]gave their land for an heritage: for his mercy endureth for ever:

22 Even [w]an heritage unto Israel his servant: for his mercy endureth for ever.

23 Who [x]remembered us [y]in our low estate: for his mercy endureth for ever:

24 And [z]hath redeemed us from our enemies: for his mercy endureth for ever.

25 Who [a]giveth food to all flesh: for his mercy endureth for ever.

26 O give thanks unto [b]the God of heaven: for his mercy endureth for ever.

The constancy of the Jews in captivity, 1—6. The prophet curseth Edom and Babel, 7—9.

BY [a]the rivers of Babylon, [b]there we sat down; yea, [c]we wept, when we remembered Zion.[1]

2 We [d]hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof.

3 For [e]there they that carried us away captive required of us a [2]song; and they that wasted[3] us required of us mirth, saying, Sing us one of [f]the songs of Zion.

4 [g]How shall we sing the LORD's song in a strange land?[4]

5 If [h]I forget thee, O Jerusalem, [i]let my right hand forget her cunning.

6 If I do not remember thee, [k]let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; [l]if I prefer not Jerusalem above my[5] chief joy.

7 [m]Remember, O LORD, [n]the children of Edom in the day of Jerusalem; who said, Rase[6] it, rase it, even to the foundation thereof.

8 O [o]daughter of Babylon,[7] [p]who art to be destroyed;[8] [q]happy shall he be, that rewardeth[9] thee as thou hast served us.

1 This psalm in many things resembles the preceding: but it is rendered remarkable by the repetition of the sweet sentence, 'for his mercy endureth for ever,' at the end of every verse. . . . The counsels of this mercy have been from everlasting; the effects of it will be eternal to all who are interested in it; and the Lord continues, from age to age, equally ready to show mercy to all who seek to him for it. The frequent repetition of this sentence shows how greatly the Lord delights in mercy, and deems himself honoured by the exercise of it; and it teaches us that this attribute should be peculiarly dear to us, being the source of all our hopes and comforts.—Scott.

4 The destruction of the Egyptians, Amorites, and Canaanites, with their kings, was a display of the awful justice of God towards them; but of his abundant mercy and goodness to his people. And the memorial of them, while it called for the gratitude of Israel, gave a pledge and assurance of his ever enduring goodness and mercy to his true and faithful servants; and of their final triumph over all their enemies. The destruction of these 'was as conducive to the good of Israel, as the manna, the water from the rock, and the conducting cloud.' So the destruction of our lusts, and our sharp trials, are as truly tokens of God's mercy as the forgiveness of our sins, and the comforts of the Holy Spirit; and our complete salvation will be connected with the final destruction of all the enemies of God and of our souls. Blessed be his name who has remembered us lost sinners, in our low estate, and has provided salvation for us through his Son, and has revealed it in his holy word, to be a lamp unto our feet, and a light unto our path. —Scott.

1 It is not known who was the author of this eminently beautiful and pathetic composition. It is impossible for any pious soul, any member of the redeemed church, to pronounce it without deep meltings of heart. It breathes the most affecting patriotism, piety, spiritual tenderness, and grief, for the desolation of the city and temple where God had so wonderfully blessed and honoured them, heightened by contrast with the insults of their victors.

It was 'the city of the Great King,' where He chose to put his name, and revealed himself in grace and mercy to man.

PSALM CXXXVIII.

David praiseth God for the truth of his word, 1—3. He prophesieth that the kings of the earth shall praise God, 4—6. He professeth his confidence in God, 7, 8.

¶ A psalm of David.

I [a] WILL praise thee with my whole heart; [b] before the gods[1] will I sing praise unto thee.

2 I will worship [c] toward thy holy temple, [d] and praise thy name for thy loving-kindness, and for thy truth: for [e] thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name.[2]

3 [f] In the day when I cried thou answeredst me, and [g] strengthenedst me with strength in my soul.

4 [h] All the kings of the earth shall praise thee, O LORD, [i] when they hear the words of thy mouth.

5 Yea, [k] they shall sing in the ways of the LORD: [l] for great is the glory of the LORD.

6 [m] Though the LORD be high, yet hath he respect unto the lowly: [n] but the proud he knoweth [o] afar off.

7 [p] Though I walk in the midst of trouble, [q] thou wilt revive me; [r] thou shalt stretch forth thine hand against the wrath of mine enemies, [s] and thy right hand shall save me.

8 The LORD will [t] perfect that which concerneth me: [u] thy mercy, O LORD, endureth for ever: [v] forsake not the works of thine own hands.

PSALM CXXXIX.

David praiseth God for his all-seeing providence, 1—16, and for his infinite mercies, 17, 18. He defieth the wicked, 19—22. He prayeth for sincerity, 23, 24.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.[3]

O LORD, [a] thou hast searched me, and known me.

2 Thou [b] knowest my down-sitting and mine up-rising; thou [c] understandest my thought [d] afar off.[4]

3 Thou compassest[5] [e] my path, and my lying down, [f] and art acquainted with all my ways.

4 For [g] there is not a word in my tongue, but, lo, O LORD, [h] thou knowest it altogether.

5 Thou hast [i] beset me behind and before, [k] and laid thine hand upon me.

6 Such [l] knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it.

7 [m] Whither shall I go from thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence?

8 If [n] I ascend up into heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed [o] in hell, behold, thou art there.

9 If I take [p] the wings of the morning,[1] and [q] dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea;

10 Even [r] there[2] shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me.

11 If I say, [s] Surely the darkness shall cover me; [t] even the night shall be light about me.

12 Yea, [u] the darkness hideth[3] not from thee; but the night shineth as the day: the[4] darkness and the light are both alike to thee.

13 For [v] thou hast possessed my reins: thou hast [w] covered me in my mother's womb.

14 I will praise thee; [x] for I am fearfully and wonderfully made: [y] marvellous are thy works; and that my soul knoweth right[5] well.

15 My substance[6] was not hid from thee, [z] when I was made in secret, and curiously wrought [a] in the lowest parts of the earth.[7]

16 Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being unperfect; and [b] in thy book all[8] my members were written, which[9] in continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them.

17 How [c] precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! [d] how great is the sum of them!

18 If I should count them, [e] they are more in number than the sand: [f] when I awake, I am still with thee.

19 [g] Surely thou wilt slay the wicked, O God: [h] depart from me therefore, ye bloody men.

20 For [i] they speak against thee wickedly, and [k] thine enemies take thy name in vain.

21 [l] Do not I hate them, O LORD, that hate thee? [m] and am not I grieved with those that rise up against thee?

22 I [n] hate them with perfect[1] hatred; I count them mine [10] enemies.[1]

10 Being enemies and blasphemers of God, he considered them as his enemies. For the godly man has the same friends and enemies with the Lord, as far as he knows the real character of men, Ro. 5. 1,2. Yet this is entirely consistent with loving their persons, praying for them, and being kind to them, for we do not know but they may yet be converted to God. 'A good man hates, as God himself doth; he hates not the persons of men, but their sins; not what God made them, but what they made themselves. We are neither to hate the men, on account of the vices they practise; nor to love the vices for the sake of the men who practise them, but to overlook the one in trying to save the other.'—Horne.

PSALM CXL.

David prayeth to be delivered from the mischief of his enemies, 1—7. He prayeth against them, 8—11. He comforteth himself by confidence in God, 12, 13.

¶ To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

DELIVER[a] me, O LORD, from the evil man:[2] preserve me from the violent[3] man;

2 Which [b]imagine mischiefs in their heart: [c]continually are they gathered together for war.

3 They have [d]sharpened their tongues [e]like a serpent; [f]adders' poison is under their lips.[4] Selah.

4 [g]Keep me, O LORD, from the hands of the wicked; [h]preserve me from the violent man, who have purposed to [i]overthrow my goings.

5 The [k]proud have hid a snare for me, and cords: they have spread a net by the way-side: they have set gins for me. Selah.

6 [l]I said unto the LORD, Thou art my God: [m]hear the voice of my supplications, O LORD.

7 O GOD the Lord, [n]the strength of my salvation; [o]thou hast covered my head in the day of battle.[5]

8 [p]Grant not, O LORD, the desires of the wicked; further not his wicked device, lest[6] they exalt themselves. Selah.

9 As for the head of those that compass me about, [q]let the mischief of their own lips cover them.

10 Let [r]burning coals fall upon them: [s]let them be cast into the fire; into[t] deep pits, that they rise not up again.

11 Let[7] not an[8] [u]evil speaker be established in the earth: [v]evil shall hunt the violent man to overthrow him.

12 I know that [w]the LORD will maintain the cause of the afflicted, and the right of the poor.

13 [x]Surely the righteous shall give thanks unto thy name; [y]the upright shall dwell in thy presence.

2 Saul, or Doeg, was the 'evil man,' and the 'manof violences;' but there were many others who concurred in all the designs formed against the life of David, and who were employed in devising plans for that purpose, (1 Sa. 21.7; 22.7-19; 23.19-29); as Caiaphas and Judas had many helpers, in their machinations against the life of the holy Jesus.

4 Slander and calumny must always precede and accompany persecution, because malice itself cannot excite people against a good man, as such; to do this he must first be represented as a bad man. What can be said of those who are busied in this manner, but that theyare 'a generation of vipers,' the brood of the old serpent, that grand accuser and calumniator of the brethren; having under their tongues a bag of poison, conveying instant death to the reputation on which they fasten? Thus David was hunted as a rebel, Christ was crucified as a blasphemer, and the primitive Christians were tortured as guilty of incest and murder.—Horne.

PSALM CXLI.

David prayeth that his suit may be acceptable, 1, 2, his conscience free from guilt, 3—6, and his life safe from the snares of the wicked, 7—10.

¶ A psalm of David.

LORD, I cry unto thee; [a]make haste unto me; give ear unto my voice, when I cry unto thee.

2 Let [b]my prayer be set[1] forth before thee [c]as incense, and [d]the lifting up of my hands as [e]the evening sacrifice.

3 [f]Set a watch, O LORD, before my mouth; [g]keep the door of my lips.

4 [h]Incline not my heart to any evil thing, [i]to practise wicked works with men that work iniquity; [k]and let me not eat of their dainties.

5 Let [l]the righteous [2]smite me, it shall be a kindness; and let him reprove me, it shall be an excellent oil, which shall not break my head: [m]for yet my prayer also shall be in their calamities.[3]

6 When [n]their judges are overthrown in stony places, [o]they shall hear my words: [p]for they are [4]sweet.

7 Our [q]bones[5] are scattered at the grave's mouth, as when one cutteth and cleaveth wood upon the earth.

8 But [r]mine eyes are unto thee, O GOD the Lord: in thee is my trust; leave[6] not [s]my soul destitute.

9 Keep me [t]from the snares which they have laid for me, and the gins of the workers of iniquity.

10 Let[7] [u]the wicked fall into their own nets, whilst that I withal [8]escape.

PSALM CXLII.

David showeth that in his trouble all his comfort was in prayer unto God.

¶ Maschil[9] of David; A prayer [a]when he was in the cave.[10]

I CRIED unto the LORD with my voice: [b]with my voice unto the LORD did I make my supplication.

2 I [c]poured out my complaint before him; [d]I shewed before him my trouble.

3 When [e]my spirit was overwhelmed within me, [f]then thou knewest my path: [g]in the way wherein I walked have they privily laid a snare for me.

4 I[11] looked[12] on my right hand, and beheld, [h]but there was no man that would know me: [i]refuge failed[1] me; no man cared for my soul.

5 I cried unto thee, O LORD: I said, [k]Thou art my refuge and [l]my portion [m]in the land of the living.

6 Attend unto my cry; [n]for I am brought very low: deliver me from my persecutors; [o]for they are stronger than I.

7 Bring [p]my soul out of prison, that I may praise thy name: [q]the righteous shall compass me about; for thou[r] shalt deal bountifully with me.

PSALM CXLIII.

David prayeth for favour in judgment, 1, 2. He complaineth of his griefs, 3, 4. He strengtheneth his faith by meditation and prayer, 5, 6. He prayeth for grace, 7, 8, for deliverance, 9, for sanctification, 10, 11, and for the destruction of his enemies, 12.

¶ A psalm of David.

HEAR my prayer, O LORD; give ear to my supplications: [a]in thy faithfulness[2] answer me, and in thy righteousness.

2 And [b]enter not into judgment with thy servant: for [c]in thy sight shall no man living be justified.[3]

3 For [d]the enemy hath persecuted my soul; [e]he hath smitten my life down to the ground: [f]he hath made me to dwell in darkness, as those that have been long dead.

4 Therefore [g]is my spirit overwhelmed within me; [h]my heart within me is desolate.

5 I [i]remember the days of old;[4] I meditate on all thy works; I muse on the work of thy hands.

6 I [k]stretch forth my hands unto thee: [l]my soul thirsteth after thee, as a thirsty land. Selah.

7 [m]Hear me speedily, O LORD; my[n] spirit faileth: [o]hide not thy face from me, lest[5] I be [p]like unto them that go down into the pit.

8 Cause me [q]to hear thy lovingkindness in the morning; for in thee do I trust: [r]cause me to know the way wherein I should walk; [s]for I lift up my soul unto thee.

9 Deliver me, O LORD, from mine enemies: [t]I flee[6] unto thee to hide me.

10 [u]Teach me to do thy will; [v]for thou art my God: [w]thy Spirit is good;[7] lead me into [x]the land of uprightness.

11 [y]Quicken me, O LORD, for thy name's sake: [z]for thy righteousness' sake [a]bring my soul out of trouble.

12 And [b]of thy mercy cut off mine enemies, and destroy all them that afflict my soul: [c]for I am thy servant.

PSALM CXLIV.

David blesseth God for his mercy both to him and to man, 1—4. He prayeth that God would powerfully deliver him from his enemies, 5—8. He promiseth to praise God, 9, 10. He prayeth for the happy state of the kingdom under God's favour, 11—15.

¶ A psalm of David.

BLESSED be the LORD my[1] strength, which [a]teacheth my hands [2]to war, and my fingers to fight.

2 My goodness,[3] [b]and my fortress; my high tower, and my deliverer; my shield, and he in whom I trust; [c]who subdueth my people under me.

3 LORD, [d]what is man,[4] that thou takest knowledge of him! [e]or the son of man, that thou makest account of him!

4 [f]Man is like to vanity: [g]his days are as a shadow that passeth away.

5 [h]Bow thy heavens, O LORD, and come down: [i]touch the mountains, and they shall smoke.

6 [k]Cast forth lightning, and scatter them: [l]shoot out thine arrows, and destroy them.

7 [m]Send thine hand[5] from above; rid me, and [n]deliver me out of great waters, from [o]the hand of strange children;

8 Whose [p]mouth speaketh vanity; and [q]their right hand is a right hand of falsehood.[6]

9 I will [r]sing a new song[7] unto thee, O God: [s]upon a psaltery, and an instrument of ten strings, will I sing praises unto thee.

10 It is he [t]that giveth [8]salvation unto kings: [u]who delivereth David his servant from the hurtful sword.

11 Rid me, [v]and deliver me from the hand of strange children, whose mouth speaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falsehood:

12 That our sons may be [w]as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be [x]as corner-stones, polished[9] after [y]the similitude of a palace;

13 That [z]our garners may be full, affording all[10] manner of store; that

7 When we reflect on the sinner's guilt and pollution, and all the blessings which are the fruit of the 'love of the Spirit,' we must acknowledge the propriety of the epithet 'good' applied to the Holy Ghost. 'His condescension, compassion, and kindness, can be equalled by nothing but the bleeding love of Immanuel, and the mercy of God the Father in sending such a Redeemer, and such a Sanctifier. The "goodness" of the Spirit formed a very encouraging plea to the broken-hearted Psalmist; who conscious of his unworthiness, could scarcely hope that this divine Comforter, whom he had so shamefully grieved, would return any more to his drooping heart.'—Scott.

The deliverance and victories which David expected and experienced from the immediate interposition of God, were typical of the Redeemer's resurrection and exaltation, in which the miraculous power of God was gloriously manifested; and also of his victories over those who oppose the universal establishment of his kingdom, and of his 'putting all enemies under his feet;' of which event, such passages may be considered as in some respects prophetical.

David praiseth God for his fame, 1—7, for his goodness 8—10, for his kingdom, 11—13, for his providence, 14—16, and for his saving mercy, 17—21.

¶ David's [a]psalm of praise.

I WILL [b]extol thee, [c]my God, O King; and [d]I will bless thy name for ever and ever.

2 [c]Every day will I bless thee; and I will praise[3] thy name for ever and ever.

3 [f]Great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised; [g]and his greatness is[4] unsearchable.

4 One [h]generation shall praise thy works to another, and shall declare thy mighty acts.

5 I [i]will speak of the glorious honour of thy majesty, and of thy wondrous works.[5]

6 And [k]men shall speak of the might of thy terrible acts; and I[6] will declare thy greatness.

7 They shall [l]abundantly utter the memory of thy great goodness, and shall [m]sing of thy righteousness.

8 The [n]LORD is gracious, and full of compassion; slow to anger, and of[7] great mercy.

9 The LORD is [o]good to all; and his tender mercies are over all his works.

10 [p]All thy works shall praise thee, O LORD; [q]and thy saints shall bless thee.

11 They shall speak of [r]the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power;

12 To [s]make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom.

13 Thy [t]kingdom is an everlasting[8] kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations.

14 The LORD [u]upholdeth all that fall, and [v]raiseth up all those that be bowed down.

15 The [w]eyes of all wait[1] upon thee; and thou givest them their meat in due season.

16 Thou [x]openest thine hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing.

17 The LORD is [y]righteous in all his ways, and holy[2] in all his works.

18 The LORD is [z]nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that [a]call upon him in truth.

19 He will [b]fulfil the desire of them that fear him; [c]he also will hear their cry, and will save them.

20 The LORD [d]preserveth all them that love him: but [e]all the wicked will he destroy.

21 [f]My mouth shall speak the praise of the LORD: and [g]let all flesh bless his holy name for ever and ever.

PSALM CXLVI.

The psalmist voweth perpetual praises to God, 1, 2. He exhorteth not to trust in man, 3, 4. God, for his power, justice, mercy, and kingdom is only worthy to be trusted, 5—10.

PRAISE[3] ye the LORD. [a]Praise the LORD, O my soul.

2 [b]While I live will I praise the LORD: I will sing praises unto my God while I have any being.

3 [c]Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help.[4]

4 His [d]breath goeth forth, [e]he returneth to his earth; in that very day [f]his thoughts perish.

3 The title of this is 'Praise from David.' From this psalm to the end of the book, we find unmingled praise and thanksgiving, without one complaint or petition. 'Hitherto...the voice of complaint hath sometimes been succeeded by that of thanksgiving; and praise at other times hath terminated in prayer. But, now, as if the days of mourning in Zion were ended, we hear no more of Messiah as "a man of sorrows;" or of his church as despised and afflicted...Henceforth we seem not to be upon earth but in heaven, mingling with celestial spirits around the throne.' —Horne. Probably David composed most of these psalms, and towards the close of his life; when as the setting sun breaks forth from behind intervening clouds, he shone forth, and set in mild majesty and splendour; anticipating the employment and felicity of heaven, as he approached the mansions of the blessed.—Scott.

PSALM CXLVI.

3 Heb. Hallelujah, Ps. 105.45. The Septuagint and the Vulgate Latin ascribe this psalm to Haggai and Zechariah: from an opinion, perhaps, that it suited the times of those prophets, when the Jews found little encouragement to trust in the kings of Persia; but when, simply trusting in God, they were prospered. It is, however, far more probable, that it was written by David, towards the close of his reign. It begins and ends with the word 'Hallelujah.'

PSALM CXLVII.

The prophet exhorteth to praise God for his care of the church, 1—3; his power, 4, 5, and his mercy, 6: to praise him for his providence, 7—11; to praise him for his blessings upon the kingdom, 12—14, for his power over the elements, 15—18, and for his ordinances in the church, 19, 20.

PRAISE ye the LORD: [a]for it is good to sing praises unto our God; for it is pleasant; [b]and praise is comely.

2 The LORD doth [c]build up Jerusalem: [d]he gathereth together the outcasts of Israel.[1]

3 He [e]healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their wounds.[2]

4 He [f]telleth the number of the stars; he calleth them all by their names.

5 [g]Great is our LORD, and of great power: his[3] understanding is infinite.

6 The LORD [h]lifteth up the meek: he[i] casteth the wicked down to the ground.

7 [k]Sing unto the LORD with thanksgiving; sing praise upon the harp unto our God;

8 Who [l]covereth the heaven with clouds,[4] who [m]prepareth rain for the earth, who maketh grass to grow upon the mountains.

9 He [n]giveth to the beast his food, and to the young ravens which cry.

10 He [o]delighteth not in the strength of the horse; [p]he taketh not pleasure in the legs of a man.

11 The LORD [q]taketh pleasure in them [r]that fear him, in those that hope in his mercy.

12 Praise the LORD, O Jerusalem; praise[s] thy God, O Zion:

13 For [t]he hath strengthened the bars of thy gates; he hath [u]blessed thy children within thee.

14 He[5] [v]maketh peace in thy borders, and [w]filleth thee with the [6]finest of the wheat.

15 He [x]sendeth forth his commandment upon earth: [y]his word runneth very swiftly.

16 He [z]giveth snow like wool: he scattereth[a] the hoar-frost like ashes.

17 He [b]casteth forth his ice like morsels:[7] [c]who can stand before his cold?

18 He [d]sendeth out his word, and melteth them: he causeth his wind to blow, and the waters flow.[8]

14 He also [t]exalteth the horn of his people, [u]the praise of all his saints; even of the children of Israel, [v]a people near unto him. Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXLIX.

The prophet exhorteth to praise God for his love to the church 1—4, and for that power which he hath given to his saints, 5—9.

PRAISE[8] ye the LORD. [a]Sing unto the LORD a new song, and his praise [b]in the congregation of saints.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF PSALMS.

WE would here subjoin the following remarks from bishop Horne's introduction to his Commentary on the Psalms. After quoting a variety of the more remarkable passages of the psalms, which are cited by our Lord and his apostles, and applied to matters evangelical, bishop Horne adds:

'Surely no one can attentively review the above made collection of New Testament citations from the book of psalms, as they have been placed together before him, without perceiving that the psalms are written on a divine, preconcerted, prophetical plan, and contain much more than, at first sight, they appear to do. They are beautiful without, but all-glorious within, like "apples of gold in pictures, or network cases of silver," Pr. xxv. 11. The brightness of the casket attracts our attention, till through it, upon a nearer approach, we discover its contents. And then, indeed, it may be said to have 'no glory, by reason of the glory that so far excelleth,' 2 Co. iii. 10. Very delightful and profitable they are in their literal and historical sense, which well repayeth all the pains taken to come at it. But that once obtained, a farther scene begins to open upon us, and all the blessings of the gospel present themselves to the eye of faith. So that the expositor is as a traveller ascending an eminence, neither unfruitful, nor unpleasant; at the top of which when he is arrived, he beholds, like Moses from the summit of mount Nebo, a more lovely and extensive prospect lying beyond it, and stretching away to the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills. He sees valleys covered over with corn, blooming gardens, and verdant meadows, with flocks and herds feeding by rivers of water, till ravished with the sight, he cries out, as Peter did at the view of his Master's glory, "It is good to be here."

'It is obvious, that every part of the psalter, when explicated according to this scriptural and primitive method, is rendered universally "profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness," and the propriety immediately appears of its having always been used in the devotional way, both by the Jewish and the Christian church. With regard to the Jews, bishop Chandler very pertinently remarks, that "they must have understood David, their prince, to have been a figure of Messiah. They would not otherwise have made his psalms part of their daily worship, nor would David have delivered them to the church to be so employed, were it not to instruct and support them in the knowledge and belief of this fundamental article. Was the Messias not concerned in the psalms, it were absurd to celebrate twice a day, in their public devotions, the events of one man's life, who was deceased so long ago as to have no relation now to the Jews, and the circumstances of their affairs; or to transcribe whole passages from them, into their prayers for the coming of the Messiah." Upon the same principle, it is easily seen, that the objections which may seem to lie against the use of Jewish services in Christian congregations cease at once. Thus, it may be said, Are we concerned with the affairs of David and Israel? Have we any thing to do with the ark and the temple? They are no more. Are we to go up to Jerusalem, and to worship on Sion? They are desolated and trodden under foot by the Turks. Are we to sacrifice young bullocks, according to the law? The law is abolished, never to be observed again. Do we pray for victory over Moab, Edom, and Philistia; or for deliverance from Babylon? There are no such nations, no such places in the world. What then do we mean, when taking such expressions into our mouths, we utter them in our own persons, as parts of our devotions, before God? Assuredly we must mean a spiritual Jerusalem and Sion, a spiritual ark and temple; a spiritual law; spiritual sacrifices; and spiritual victories over spiritual enemies; all described under the old names, which are still retained, though "old things are passed away, and all things are become new," 2 Co. v. 17. By substituting Messiah for David, the gospel for the law, the church Christian for that of Israel, and the enemies of the one for those of the other, the psalms are made our own. Nay, they are, with more fulness and propriety, applied now to the substance, than they were of old to the "shadow of good things then to come," He. x. 1.

'The psalms, thus applied, have advantages which no fresh compositions, however finely executed, can possibly have; since besides their incomparable fitness to express our sentiments; they are, at the same time, memorials of, and appeals to, former mercies and deliverances; they are acknowledgments of prophecies accomplished: they point out the connection between the old and the new dispensations, thereby teaching us to admire and adore the wisdom of God displayed in both, and furnishing, while we read or sing them, an inexhaustible variety of the noblest matter that can engage the contemplation of man.

'Composed upon particular occasions, yet designed for general use; delivered out as services for Israelites under the law, yet no less adapted to the circumstances of Christians under the gospel; they present religion to us in the most engaging dress; communicating truths which philosophy could never investigate, in a style which poetry can never equal; while history is made the vehicle of prophecy, and creation lends all its charms to paint the glories of redemption. Calculated alike to profit and to please, they inform the understanding, elevate the affections, and entertain the imagination. Indited, under the influence of Him to whom all hearts are known, and all events foreknown, they suit mankind in all situations, grateful as the manna which descended from above, and conformed itself to every palate. The fairest productions of human wit, after a few perusals, like gathered flowers, wither in our hands, and lose their fragrancy; but these unfading plants of paradise become, as we are accustomed to them, still more and more beautiful; their bloom appears to be daily heightened; fresh odours are emitted, and new sweets extracted from them. He who hath once tasted their excellences, will desire to taste them yet again: and he who tastes them oftenest will relish them best.'
